The Rev. R. Heber Newton was to be the next speaker. A short letter was read, in which the writer predicted that in the new century labor would get its just rewards. The next speaker was Bishop Potter. His subject was "Industrial Peace."

Bishop Potter said he thought the men who arranged the programme had in mind the adjustment of the arrangements between capital and labor, and that industrial peace would come when both sides would be guided by laws of justice and human rights.

To the striking Hebrew bakers Bishop Potter paid a touching tribute. He said they were compelled, according to the reports, to work eighteen hours a day, and ended his speech by saying, "Here's to our Hebrew brothers in the Bakers' Union. May they triumph in their fight."

George E. McNeil of Boston, one of the originators of the eight-hour movement, was the next speaker. He told how labor had taught the clergy, the politicians, and the poets. He was reminiscent, and spoke of his early boyhood, when the poor laboring men of this country were as outcasts without the aid of the clergy, the politicians, or the law-makers.

His remarks were bitter against the clergy for neglecting to help labor when its needs were many, and Bishop Potter left during Mr. McNeil's speech, apparently not satisfied with the arraignment of the clergy by the labor leader.

Mr. McNeil's speech told of the fight to reduce the hours of labor, and he said that the ultimate object of laboring men should be to fight for further reductions in hours of labor and increases in wages, so that the men who own business would be forced to make their workingmen partners.

Controller Coler spoke on the City of New York. He said, in part:

"The fact is the workingmen can accomplish anything they undertake if they will make their tool the ballot box instead of the boycott. They have already worked wonders for the betterment of their own material conditions, and they are just beginning to realize their power. If the intelligent laboring men of this city once unite in the service of the general welfare, and remain united, they will constitute the greatest moral and physical power for good that ever existed in the municipality. That they have not done so is largely because they do not stand together long enough.

"Insist, as you have a right to do, that the night high school shall be as good as the day. Attend the free lectures and send your children, and if you are crowded out demand more free lectures and more free reading matter. There should be no fight between capital and labor, and there will be none when the real brotherhood of man is established.

When a man is a candidate for a local office it is not essential to the interest of workingmen that he should belong to one of your unions and subscribe to all your principles, but it is essential to your welfare and the best interests of the city that he be intelligent and honest."

Mrs. Fred Nathan spoke on "Woman's Economic Influence." She remarked on the fact that when the committee made up the list of speakers it placed fifteen representatives of the unfair sex upon it, and not a single member of the fair sex. When this was mentioned by her to the committee she was asked at the last minute to speak, and she did so, "because," she added, "I do not believe a woman ought to neglect an opportunity to speak in public. A woman's tongue is her strongest weapon, and she ought to use it at every opportunity."

This pleased the women present as well as the men, but the applause from the women was more pronounced. Then Mrs. Nathan went on and spoke of the influence of her sex in business affairs and how since 1840, when in this country but seven trades or occupations were open to women, the number in 1880 had increased to 336.

John Phillips, Secretary of the United Hatters, was down for the toast, "Labor in Brooklyn," but he said for years he had followed the advice of an able and conscientious speaker given to him long ago, to speak all around his subject. Mr. Phillips started by telling a story.

"There was once a man who lived in a boarding house," said he, "and he moved because he did not like it there. He went to another boarding house. At his first breakfast the new landlady asked him how he ate his hash.

"'How do I eat it?' he asked, wonderingly.

"'Do you eat it with a fork?' the landlady asked, in rather severe tones.

"'No,' was the reply.

"'With a knife?'

"'No.'

"'With a spoon?' she demanded.

"'No.'

"'Then how in the world do you eat it?' she finally said, quite out of patience.

"'Madame,' was the reply, 'I always eat with fear and trembling.'"

Presently in saying that labor in Brooklyn was about the same old kind of labor anybody might find elsewhere, Mr. Phillips was reminded of another story.

"I remember a man," he went on, "who was once asked how many children he had. The man said he had three, two alive and one in Brooklyn."

During the evening a greeting was received by cable from Tom Mann, the Engl[illegible] friend of labor. It was addressed to [illegible] W. D. Powers, and contained these [illegible] greetings, social health, in[illegible]

Mr. Markham was introduced to read his poem, which follows:

"A CENTURY POEM."

We stand here at the end of mighty years,
And a great wonder rushes on the heart.
While cities rose and blossomed into dust,
While shadowy lines of Kings were blown to air,—
What was the Purpose brooding on the world
Through the large leisure of the centuries?
And what the end—failure or victory?

Lo, man has laid his sceptre on the stars,
And sent his spell upon the continents.
stones,
Silent as God, publish their mystery.
Man calls the lightnings from their secret place
To crumple up the spaces of the world,
And snatch the jewels from the flying hours.
The wild white smoking horses of the sea
Are startled by his thunders. The World-Powers
Crowd around to be the lackeys of the king.
His hand has torn the veil of the Great Law,
The Law that was made before the worlds —before
That far First Whisper on the ancient deep;
The Law that swings Arturus on the North,
And hurls the soul of man upon the way.
But what avail, O builders of the world,
Unless ye build a safety for the soul?
Man has put harness on Leviathan,
And hocks in his incorrigible jaws;
And yet the Perils of the Street remain.
Out of the whirlwind of the cities rise
Lean Hunger and the Worm of Misery,
The heart-break and the cry of mortal tears.

But hark, the bugles blowing on the peaks;
And hark, a murmur as of many feet,
The cry of captains, the divine alarm!
Look, the Last Son of Time comes hurrying on,
The strong young Titan of Democracy!
With swinging step he takes the open road,
In love with the winds that beat his hairy breast,
Baring his sunburnt strength to all the world,
He casts his eyes around with Jovian glance—
Searches the tracks of old Tradition; scans
With rebel heart the Books of Pedigree;
Peers into the face of Privilege and cries,
"Why are you halting in the path of man?
Is it your shoulder bears the human load?
Do you draw down the reins of the sweet heaven,
And keep the green things growing? . . .
Back to Hell!"
We know at last the Future is secure;
God is descending from Eternity,
And all things, good and evil, build the road.
Yes, down in the thick of things, the men of greed
Are thumping the inhospitable clay.
By wondrous toils the men without the Dream,
Led onward by a Something unawares,
Are laying the foundations of the Dream.
The Kingdom of Fraternity foretold.

Mr. Markham gave permission for all newspapers to use the poem, though he has had it copyrighted. When he finished reading he said the time is coming for which we are all praying, for we are all endeavoring to reach the ideal state of things.

"We have reached a larger individualism," he said. "We have attained a larger religious and political freedom, and we shall attain the largest industrial freedom."

Joseph Barondess said there can be no freedom while a few own those things by which the necessities for the many are produced.

Senator Ford, who had been an ex-Senator twenty minutes when he began to speak, urged the laboring class to stand together and they could then get whatever they wanted, and get rid of the bosses as well. Michael A. Fitzgerald spoke in the same strain, and Samuel E. Moffett said the Mayor should be removable by the Municipal Assembly with twenty days' notice, and if in ten days the people wished to uphold the Mayor they could remove the Municipal Assembly.

Many had left by the time Senator Guy spoke. He talked of labor uniting its forces, as did W. J. Sullivan, and then W. D. F. Bliss told of the Federation's intended work. He said that it was hoped by moral force to make the people overthrow the bosses, and labor will then put in its own representatives.

THE ODELL FAMILY STEED.

Governor-Elect's Daughter Refuses to Leave "Duke" in Newburg.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Dec. 31.—Since Governor-elect Odell purchased a new team of horses some months ago, Duke, the old family horse, has been the especial property of Estelle, the Governor-elect's eight-year-old daughter. Miss Estelle is very fond of driving out behind Duke, and has conceived a strong affection for the animal. The other day the little girl, after one of her drives with Duke, went up to her mother and said:

"Mamma, are we going to take Duke to Albany?"

"No, dear," answered her mother.

"Then I'm not going either," declared Miss Estelle.

When Mr. Odell returned home in the evening his wife delivered to him their daughter's ultimatum.

"Well, then, Duke goes," said Mr. Odell, who would not be separated from Estelle, even for the Governorship.

PROBING BELLEVUE SCANDAL.

Commissioner Keller, Although Ill, Confers with Subordinates at His Hotel.

Commissioner of Charities John W. Keller was unable to leave his rooms in the New Amsterdam Hotel yesterday, but, notwithstanding his indisposition, he attended to the affairs of his office, with the assistance of a stenographer, at the hotel.

"I do not expect," said the Commissioner, "to be at my office for several days, but I am looking after affairs closely and directing things as usual. The investigation of alleged abuses in Bellevue Hospital is going on, but while I am ill I do not care to say anything about what has been accomplished."

During the day the Commissioner had a long interview with Superintendent O'Rourke of Bellevue, Deputy Commissioner Brennan, and Secretary Borden. Mr. O'Rourke, since Commissioner Keller was taken ill last Thursday, has been examining into several complaints of alleged abuses, but no definite report has as yet been made. Besides conducting routine affairs, Deputy Commissioner Brennan has been quietly looking into matters of alleged violations of the Code of Rules laid down by Commissioner Keller for the guidance of employes in the various branches of the department. Those were the matters that occupied most of the time they spent with Commissioner Keller yesterday.

When seen subsequent to his visit to the New Amsterdam Hotel, Mr. Brennan said that he had been sent for by his superior on business of importance, the nature of which he was not at liberty to disclose. Mr. O'Rourke's answer as to the purport of his interview with the Commissioner was in substance the same as Mr. Brennan's.

"Commissioner Keller is the head of the Charities Department," said Mr. O'Rourke, "and all information concerning this investigation must come through him."

"I am the head of the Department of Charities," said Commissioner Keller to a reporter for THE NEW YORK TIMES, "and I am responsible for the conduct of every branch of it. If, as alleged, abuses exist under my administration, I, as the head of the department, am responsible, and I have no desire to shunt the responsibility upon anybody else. I am going to fix things to suit myself, and when I am done the public can come and see and criticise to their hearts' content. I mean to do nothing unfair or unjust, but any one whom I may find guilty of any infraction of the rules I have laid down must suffer dismissal. Only a few days ago I dismissed an attendant at Bellevue for taking money from a patient to buy luxuries for him. There is an iron-clad rule that will permit of no deviation—that is, that hospital attendants, nurses, or physicians shall accept no money for any purpose from a patient. They all know the inevitable consequence if they do."

In relation to the allegation of Ex-Commissioner of Charities Gen. O'Beirne, that for the past twenty-five years patients have been robbed by doctors, nurses, and ambulance drivers, Commissioner Keller said:

"I must be that Gen. O'Beirne had reference to his own administration. During my term of office there have been no such cases that have not received adequate punishment."

Regarding the case of a contractor who was taken to Bellevue as a patient and robbed of $4,000, according to Gen. O'Beirne, Commissioner Keller said that there had been no such occurrence during the time he has been in office.

"Every abuse that I find to exist will be eradicated, and every man or woman whom I find is implicated will be dismissed," said the Commissioner.

District Attorney Philbin has announced that he will take a hand in putting a stop to abuses at Bellevue should the condition of affairs be found to be as deplorable as alleged. He expects to receive a report today, and will use his office to rectify some of the things complained of should the report warrant such proceedings.

PHILBIN LOPS OFF FOUR MORE OFFICIAL HEADS

Unger, O'Reilly, Hennessy, and McCann Asked to Resign.

WALSH IS PROBABLY SLATED

Franklin Pierce, George W. Shurman, and Howard S. Gans Appointed to Vacancies.

District Attorney Philbin yesterday requested the resignations of Assistant District Attorney Henry W. Unger and Deputy Assistants Daniel O'Reilly, Forbes J. Hennessy, and Charles E. F. McCann. The appointment of Franklin Pierce and George W. Schurman, full assistants, and Howard S. Gans, deputy assistant, followed the resignations.

Deputy Assistant Thomas F. Byrne was advanced to the position of full assistant and placed in charge of the Indictment Bureau, the post held up to yesterday by Mr. Unger. Assistant District Attorney James W. Osborne and Deputy Assistants Gerald Hull Gray and Keyran J. O'Connor were also retained in office.

District Attorney Philbin's appointments and advancements leave his office with nine full assistants, whereas the law provides for but eight, thus necessitating the deposition of at least one more. Those remaining who have not been asked for their resignations, and who, Mr. Philbin has not announced will be retained, are Assistant District Attorneys McClelland, Blake, and Walsh. Mr. Walsh was sent for in the afternoon by the District Attorney, but was not in the building. It is surmised that his head will be the next to fall.

The depositions of Messrs. Unger and Hennessy came somewhat as a surprise to the District Attorney's staff. Mr. Unger for fifteen years has been connected with the public prosecutor's office, having been appointed in 1885 by Randolph B. Martine. Mr. Unger will enter general practice in partnership with Abraham Levy. Mr. Unger, when sent for, knowing what was to come, entered the District Attorney's office with a large bundle of Hubbard's "Message to Garcia" under his arm. Mr. Unger is somewhat of a humorist, and after the official relations between himself and Mr. Philbin had been severed, the two chatted cordially for several minutes about the conduct of the office. Mr. Unger then tendered his copies of the "Message to Garcia" to the District Attorney and advised him to freely distribute them among his staff. "Don't fear to offend the sensibilities of any one of them at any time," said he, "by flinging a copy in his face and requesting that he read and profit by it." Mr. Philbin, with a grim smile, accepted the pamphlets.

Messrs. O'Reilly, McCann, and Hennessy preceded Mr. Unger into the Chief's office by a few minutes, and after emerging announced that their resignations had been requested and had been immediately tendered. Mr. O'Reilly is a protégé of Senator Timothy D. Sullivan. He drew a salary of $4,000 a year and assisted Mr. Unger in the Indictment Bureau. He is succeeded by Howard S. Gans. Charles E. F. McCann is a nephew of Richard Croker and also drew $4,000 a year. Both of these gentlemen were mentioned in the Hammond charges against former District Attorney Gardiner, as was Mr. Unger. Forbes J. Hennessy, removed, assisted Mr. McIntyre, and claims to have prepared the Kennedy case for trial. He was regarded as a personal friend of Mr. Philbin.

Thomas F. Byrne, placed in charge of the indictment bureau, was also a four-thousand-dollar deputy, having been appointed by Col. Gardiner three years ago. Mr Byrne has had charge of the cases against the discretionary brokers and bucket-shop operators of the Wall Street district. Gerald Hull Gray was known as a member of more clubs than any three of his associates. Keyran J. O'Connor, retained, is quite friendly with Recorder Goff.

George W. Schurman, appointed a full assistant at a salary of $7,500, is a brother of President Schurman of Cornell University and a member of the law firm of Carter, Hughes & Dwight of 96 Broadway. He has always been a Republican. Mr. Schurman has had much experience in commercial cases, and will be assigned to the work formerly performed by Thomas F. Byrne. He was born in Canada, July 6, 1867, and was graduated from Dalhousie College, Nova Scotia, and Cornell University. He is a member of the Bar Association, the Cornell Club, Alpha Delta Phi, and the Engelwood Golf Association.

Franklin Pierce is a lawyer of 31 Nassau Street, forty-five years old, and an independent Democrat. Mr Philbin said in announcing Mr. Pierce's appointment that the latter is one of the ablest trial lawyers in the city. He said that Mr. Pierce accepted the position only from a high sense of civic duty, which undoubtedly the public would appreciate. Mr. Pierce is a member of the City Club, the Reform Club, and the Bar Association.

Howard S. Gans, appointed a Deputy Assistant, is the brief clerk in the office of Stern & Rushmore of 40 Wall Street. Mr. Gans, said Mr. Philbin, is a young man of great ability. He is a member of the Reform Club, the Citizens' Union, the Harvard Club, and the Bar Association. John F. McIntyre will be especially retained to prosecute the Kennedy case, said Mr. Philbin, and it is understood that all of the assistants who are deposed will volunteer their services without remuneration in prosecuting any cases with which they were concerned before Col. Gardiner's removal. Mr. Philbin denied emphatically that Mr. Osborne's connection with the Molineux case had anything to do with his retention.

Lewis F. Nixon of the Tammany Committee of Five and Charles Stewart Smith of the Committee of Fifteen called on District Attorney Philbin later in the day and held short conferences with him relative to the work of the two committees and the measure of assistance that might be expected from the District Attorney. After the conferences Mr. Philbin announced that an Assistant District Attorney would be assigned to each committee to investigate and prosecute any violations of the law brought to light by either.

Assistant District Attorneys Townsend and Le Barbier were sworn in by Judge Foster and resumed their old duties during the day. The following letter, regarded as significant, was received by Mr. Le Barbier from Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, who brought the City Club charges against Col. Gardiner last Summer:

My Dear Mr. Le Barbier: I offer you my congratulations upon the opportunity to make a record of efficiency and integrity under the better conditions than those in which we had our first encounter. I accept your challenge to work together for the good of this city and shall interpret your share of that work by the spirit which now moves your chief. I think you will admit on our side we fight hard and fair. I would much rather have your help in doing such work as falls to me, and after talking with Mr. Philbin over the situation I recognize your capacity and opportunity, and write you this note of sympathetic and fraternal congratulations. Yours sincerely, THOMAS R. SLICER.

Tombs Prisoners to be Entertained.

The people who will be compelled to begin the new century behind prison bars in the Tombs ought to pass a fairly pleasant day of it to-day, all things considered, for the Warden has made arrangements for a New Year's entertainment more elaborate than ever before. The entertainment, which begins at 2 P. M. will be preceded by a bounteous feast, after which the male inmates will be liberally supplied with fragrant "perfectos." The entertainment will consist of vocal and instrumental music, recitations, and dialogues. Nearly a score of vaudeville artists have volunteered their services for the occasion, and there will be a host of amateur talent.

Doctors say that, out of 100 average people, about 25 are more or less tubercular. No very serious harm to half; but the other half half-live for a while, and die of consumption.

Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil saves many and would save most, but not all.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

CAPE GOVERNMENT APPEALS FOR HELP

Wants a Paid Defense Force to Repel Invasion.

CAPE DUTCH JOIN BOERS

About 1,500 Cast Their Lot with the Invaders — Sixty British Reported Captured.

CAPE TOWN, Dec. 31.—The Cape Government has called upon the Loyalists in twenty-seven districts, including Cape Town, to assist the military to repel invasion by the formation of a paid defense force.

In a preamble to the call, the Government announces the situation as follows:

"Owing to the fact that the armed forces of the enemy have penetrated south of Carnarvon in the west and south of Middelburg eastward, it is necessary to repel the invasion promptly, and the Government calls upon loyal inhabitants to aid the military in this duty by the formation of a colonial force for the sole and exclusive purpose of repelling invasion, guarding lines of communication, and maintaining order in the disturbed districts.

"Volunteers should enroll with the Civil Commissioners in their respective districts. They will be paid 5 shillings per day, with rations, forage, arms, and horses. The term of service is not expected to exceed three months.

"This notice specially applies to the districts named in it, but other districts may assist. Enlisting will begin Thursday."

It is estimated that no fewer than 1,500 Cape Dutch have joined the invaders, who have penetrated further south than ever.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The Boers have now reached a point half-way between the Orange River and Cape Town, and, in spite of the optimism of the London press, the Government announcement at Cape Town shows how seriously the invasion is regarded there.

The only thing that really touches the British public is the loss of a big naval gun. The Times to-day, however, draws attention to what might prove a serious danger, namely, the possibility of another outbreak of enteric fever among the soldiers, worn down by the hardships and privations of a prolonged and exciting campaign.

Lord Kitchener, in a dispatch to the War Office, dated Pretoria, Dec. 31, 9:35 A. M., says:

LONDON, Dec. 31.—Lord Kitchener, in a dispatch to the War Office, dated Pretoria, Dec. 31. 9:35 A. M., says:

"A small portion of the enemy's force which entered the colony to the east broke away in a southwesterly direction and crossed the railway at a point between Bangor and Sherborne. They did some damage to the railway. The column under Williams will be in touch with this body to-day.

"The force which entered the colony to the west passed the road from Carnarvon to Victoria West at 7 yesterday morning. They were going south and were closely followed by Thorneycroft and De Lisle.

"Very few recruits from the colony joined the enemy. Hertzog's men are already dropping their worn horses."

BOERS ATTACK A TRAIN.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—It is now ascertained that the Boers who trekked westward from Vryburg, and who were supposed to be going to Damaraland, are making for the Prieska district of Cape Colony. A dispatch from Cradock says:

"The Boers burned an empty goods train near Rosmead Junction. The authorities at Rosmead have sent the women and children away to Cradock. It is reported that a commando has crossed the line and is making toward Middelburg."

PORT ELIZABETH, Dec. 31.—Reports are in circulation here that the train which was held up near Rosmead was not empty, but had sixty of the Prince Alfred Guards on board, who were returning from the front, and about forty passengers, women and children.

The Boers numbered 200, with supports that could be seen in the distance. The soldiers defended themselves until their small quantity of ammunition was exhausted, when all were captured, though subsequently released.

The passengers had narrow escapes, as the bullets of the Boers perforated the carriages.

An officer and three soldiers were severely wounded.

The railway traffic has been stopped, but the Boers do not appear to have injured the permanent way.

THE DEFEAT AT HELVETIA.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—Gen. Kitchener, telegraphing from Pretoria, Sunday, Dec. 30, says:

"The post at Helvetia was surprised at 2:30 A. M., the enemy first rushing a 4.7-gun. At dawn the officer commanding the post at Swartz-Kopjes sent out a patrol and shelled the enemy out of Helvetia, making them abandon the gun temporarily. The Boers, however, formed our prisoners around the gun and got it away eventually. No ammunition belonging to the gun was captured. The casualties were four officers wounded, eleven men killed, and twenty-two wounded. A column was sent out from Machadodorp, but owing to bad roads, it failed to arrive in time."

GEN. COLVILE SNUBBED.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—Since his arrival in London Major Gen. Sir Henry Colvile has received information tending to show that Lieut. Col. Sprague actually received a forged telegram, purporting to be signed by Gen. Colvile, dated Lindley, May 23, saying:

"I am badly in want of mounted troops. Come here at once."

The telegram was sent off three days before Gen. Colvile reached Lindley and was the cause of Lieut. Col. Spragge hastening there. One of the principal charges against Gen. Colvile is that, after appealing to the Yeomanry for help, he abandoned them to their fate.

"I never heard of this telegram," says Gen. Colvile, "until now. But it explains the mystery of my alleged message to Col. Spragge. It was known at the time that some one was tampering with the wires near Lindley in the interests of the Boers.

Gen. Colvile reported himself at the War Office to-day. Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood, the Adjutant General, merely sent a subordinate to meet him.

Keep Open House at "The Tub."

ALBANY, Dec. 31.—Fred Nixon, who will be re-elected Speaker, and Col. Archie E. Baxter, who will be re-elected Clerk of the Assembly, will keep open house to-morrow at The Tub. While eggnog is being brewed considerable legislation will be brewed with it. The Tub is sometimes called the First House, for it is there that much of the legislation enacted at Albany receives its start.

HELD AS A FUGITIVE.

E. G. D'Essauer, Wanted in Chicago, Under Arrest in New Orleans.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 31.—E. George D'Essauer, who was arrested last Friday night at the St. Charles Hotel under the name of Dr. Carle of England, has confessed to his identity. He was being held a fugitive from justice from Chicago, and was this morning taken before Judge Gill, a Police Magistrate, whom he addressed "Your Lordship."

D'Essauer said he found it useless to further attempt to conceal his identity. He admitted that he left Chicago because it was charged that he had disposed of $100,000 worth of fraudulent bonds. After his departure, he says, his friends and relatives arranged matters, and when he was arested in London he was released because Secretary of State John Hay and Gov. Tanner of Illinois cabled Ambassador Choate that he was not wanted in Chicago. D'Essauer asked for his release this morning, saying there was no charge pending against him in Chicago, but later in the day a telegram came from Chief Kipley of that city saying D'Essauer was wanted there. D'Essauer says he will oppose the requisition for his return.

The prisoner admitted that the story about his lavish expenditure upon himself and an actress, after his disposal of the fraudulent bonds, was true. He said that he followed her about the country spending money, but he was young and foolish at that time. He claims that he spent $50,000 on the actress. He said that an estate of $50,000, which he received from his father, was used to pay the amount of the alleged swindle.

A TROLLEY FOR GREENWICH.

Desires of New York Property Owners Apparently Ignored.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Dec. 31.—The Wardens and Burgesses of the borough to-day filed their finding in the matter of laying tracks on the main streets, which particularly interests New Yorkers, many of whom have remonstrated on the coming of the trolley and insisted that if it did come the borough officials should order the wires laid underground.

The finding grants permission to the Greenwich Tramway Company to lay tracks and build an overhead trolley on roads in front of the property of many wealthy New Yorkers who have threatened to leave the town in case this was done. To-day the trolley company carted railway ties and pi

MAN MURDERED BY WOMAN

She Shoots Him Twice with His Own Revolver.

Evidence of Fierce Struggle in a Room Above a Brooklyn Restaurant—She Is Arrested and Confesses.

In his bedroom, above a restaurant he conducted at 101 Washington Street, Brooklyn, eGorge Deges, a Greek ,thirty-five years old, was found yesterday morning lying dead with a bullet wound in his neck and another in his heart.

Mrs. Margaret Ertel, thirty years old, a woman with whom he had lived, was missing. The murder was discovered at 9 o'clock, and twenty minutes later the police of the Fulton Street Station were on the trail of the woman suspected of being the murderess. They arrested her last evening.

The woman made a statement in which she admitted killing Deges, saying that she was glad she had done so, as he was "a brute." It had been supposed that the motive of the crime was jealousy, but this the woman denied.

Deges, besides conducting the little restaurant on Washington Street, ran a similar establishment at Coney Island in the Summer months. It was at Coney Island that he and the woman met three years ago. She was married and the mother of a boy. Her husband, George Ertel, is a journeyman baker.

The meeting of Deges and Mrs. Ertel occurred on the night of the big fire which devastated a considerable portion of Coney Island. The Greek and the woman were both slightly burned in the fire, and thereafter they were almost constantly together. The woman went to live with Deges, but they quarrelled occasionally, and she would leave only to return, sooner or later.

On one of the occasions in April last she was arrested for throwing acid in his face, nearly blinding him. The woman then claimed that Deges was persecuting her with his attentions and had caused trouble between her and her husband. The Greek did not appear against the woman in court, and she was discharged.

Mrs. Ertel was known to frequenters of the restaurant on Washington Street as Mrs. Deges, and she occasionally helped in the work about the place.

Shortly after 7 o'clock Pietro Paulos, the cook in the restaurant, saw Mrs. Ertel come downstairs and go into a washroom in an extension behind the kitchen. She had a bundle of clothes in her arms, and Paulos supposed that she intended to do some washing. After remaining in the washroom for a time the woman went back upstairs.

Deges had told Paulos to call him at 9 o'clock. At the hour fixed Paulos went up stairs and knocked on the bedroom door. There was no response, and, after repeated knockings and calls, he began to fear that there was something wrong.

Finding the door locked, he made his way into his own room, which adjoined that of his employer, and which was separated from it by a flimsy partition. Paulos kicked out one of the panels and stuck his head through the opening. He was horrified to see Deges lying beside the bed, covered with blood. A revolver lay near and there was every indication that a fierce struggle had taken place in the room.

Paulos ran to the bridge police station, half a block away, and reported his discovery. A policeman hurried back with him, and the two forced the door of Deges's room. The woman was not there, and the policeman saw enough to convince him that a murder had been done.

The police of the Fulton Street Station were informed, and Detectives Noonan, Brennan, O'Connor, and Doyle were sent around to the house. Coroner's Physician Harting, and Deputy Coroner Kelly, who accompanied them, found that the man was dead.

Part of the bed clothing had been removed from the bed and it was later found in a washtub in the extension behind the kitchen down stairs. The woman, it appears, after the shooting had taken the bed clothing down stairs and tried to wash out the bloodstains. Then she had locked the bedroom door, and, going down into the back yard, had made her way into High Street through a side gate.

Mother love was largely responsible for the arrest of Mrs. Ertel. After leaving the house she went to the neighborhood of her old home in Williamsburg, and tried to locate her husband, who had moved. She wished to find her young son, and expected to do so by locating the father, with whom the boy lived.

She was unsuccessful, however, and then hired a furnished room in Boerum Street. She remembered that her husband occasionally visited an employment agency for bakers, on Myrtle Avenue, near Sumner, and she went there in the hopes of finding him. The woman was told that her husband would probably call there during the day, and she said that she would return.

The detectives, in the meantime, had found the home of the husband, at 253 Stockholm Street, and from there they went to the employment agency on Myrtle Avenue. They were informed there that the woman had called at the place and they decided that she would return.

At 6 o'clock Mrs. Ertel appeared at the place and looked in through the window. Seeing the waiting detectives, she started off down the street. The officers pursued and caught her.

Detective Noonan said last night that on the way down to the station the woman had admitted the killing to him and told of the motive for the crime. She had shot Deges with the Greek's own revolver, which she had taken from the inside pocket of his vest, she said. The first bullet was fired into his neck.

Although badly wounded he grappled with the woman, and she carries a scratch from his finger nails on her throat. He struggled desperately for possession of the revolver, but it was pressed against his heart and fired again before he could get hold of it. The second shot killed him.

Mrs. Ertel made a similar statement to Sergt. Harking at the station house. As there is no matron at the Fulton Street Station the woman was taken to the Adams Street Station, where there is one, and locked up.

So far as is known, Deges had but one relative, a brother-in-law, living in this country. He is in the restaurant business on Third Avenue, Manhattan. Deges's father is living in Greece.

CLERGYMAN VISITS SALOONS.

Rev. Dean McNulty of Paterson Gives an Account of His Experiences.

PATERSON, N. J., Dec. 31.—The Rev. Dean McNulty went out Saturday night and again on Sunday morning in an anti-vice investigation, and to-day sent the following letter to the local papers:

On Saturday night I visited a vile den where women are harbored and where the bartender got ahead of me by locking the door of the room off the bar.

In another saloon where I did not expect to find women I was shocked to find a young woman and a young man in a room off the bar. With beer glasses before them. They quickly put out the woman to a side door, which showed that she knew the way.

These evidences of vile lawlessness led me to make a tour on Sunday morning.

Fitzpatrick's on Main Street, was ready to receive me for the man in his shirt sleeves. A man stood at the bar with a mug ready to drink. I got hold of the mug and was ready to wash him, when he dodged, and the floor was washed instead. This man was not Gibbons. He is worse than Gibbons, because drink has separated him for years from wife and children. Gibbons did not get out fast enough, and I knocked off his hat. The Sunday closing law is so generally violated that Mr. Gibbons forgot all about it.

I warn Fitzpatrick and Kearney of Jackson Street that complaints shall be made against them.

I warn another big place on Main Street to close bar and lunch counter on Sundays.

WILLIAM McNULTY.

The Gibbons referred to is a young parishioner of the clergyman. It was reported that he had thrashed him out of the saloon.

Cashier Westervelt May Plead Guilty.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 31.—Charles H. Westervelt, under indictment for the alleged embezzlement of about $40,000 from the Dime Savings Institution, where he was employed as cashier, was taken from the County Jail this afternoon to the court house, where he was closeted for more than an hour with Charles W. Hiker, the Prosecutor of the pleas; Joseph T. Gallagher and Harry E. Richards, his lawyers, and some of the officials of the Dime Savings Bank. It was said the conference was to show Westervelt the advisability of pleading non vult or guilty, when arraigned in court on the indictments. In order to save the county the expense of a protracted trial.

AMERICANS SEE THE POPE.

Ensign McCauley Describes the Audience Accorded Naval Officers and Men.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The Navy Department has received a report of a trip taken by Ensign Edward McCauley, Jr., attached to the United States ship Dixie, together with five warrant officers and 101 petty officers and men of that vessel, from Naples to Rome early in December, when the Dixie was cruising down the Mediterranean.

The party was formed and conducted as a pilgrimage to the City of Rome during this, the jubilee year, and as such the men were housed and cared for most hospitably. The party was controlled as a military formation, and carried the National flag at the head of the column, which latter, says Ensign McCauley, elicited considerable enthusiasm and show of patriotism on the part of resident and tourist Americans. Free access to many famous sights and places in Rome, to which entrance was, as a rule, prohibited, was given to the party. The appearance and behavior of the men while on their tour through the city are described as being exemplary in every way. The American rector, Mgr Schmitz, was untiring in his efforts to place all possible privileges in the way of the visitors. The men obtained an audience of the Pope, which Ensign McCauley describes as follows:

"The forenoon of Friday, Dec. 7, was the time set for the audience with the Pope. We marched through the Vatican into St. Peter's, and were assigned a place immediately fronting and on the right of the altar, with an unimpeded view of the service and ceremonies. There was no limit to the number of the audience, but it is sufficient to say that the whole of St. Peter's was crowded, which means many thousands, nor was every one who came admitted, for each one was required to have the usual ticket.

"The Pope was carried in state, accompanied by the noble and papal guards and a retinue of household chamberlains, prelates of the Church, and choristers. The acclamation, greeting, and applause were tremendous, and several times during the procession our men gave 'three cheers and a tiger for the Holy Father.' The Pope, in passing us, rose in his chair as he gave the benediction.

"After a short service the Pope's chair was placed for the presentation of the few who were allowed the honor of approaching him, and the American officers were called up immediately following the Italians. I thanked the Pope for his great kindness to the American sailors, and he replied by extending to us a cordial welcome and by expressing his pleasure and interest in every way. He made some greeting or show of kindness to each officer in turn.

GOVERNMENT FOR FILIPINOS.

Commission Has Completed Bill Touching Municipalities—Will Decide San Jose College Case Saturday.

MANILA, Dec. 31.—The Philippine Commission has completed the preparation of a general Municipal Government bill. The provisions, in many respects are similar to Gen. MacArthur's order establishing municipal governments and authorizing elections, but they are much more elaborate, covering all details. The most important new feature is the establishment of land taxation and doing away with the cedula, or head tax, and taxation on occupations. A feature new to the Philippines is that the revenue from land taxes is to be expended where it is collected. The manner of holding elections and the duties of officers are prescribed.

A decision in the San José Medical College case has been deferred until Saturday. The first question dealt with by the Philippine Commission, affecting an issue between the Church and the United States Government, was whether the control of the San José Medical College was vested in the Government or the Church. The college was established by bequest in the seventeenth century, and control of it was given to the Jesuit Order. When the authorities of the Jesuits in the Philippines ceased, the Spanish Government assumed direction of the college and later permitted the Dominican Order to conduct San José College as part of the University of Santo Tomas.

Following the American occupation, a representative of the people insisted that the college, under the treaty of Paris came into the control of the United States and ought not to be controlled by the Church. The clerical authorities claimed, however, that the Church had full legal possession. Otis finally closed the institution.

The first hearing took place shortly after the commission arrived. Archbishop Chapelle and Nozaleda made the presentations of the Church's position. If the commission decides that the control of the college is vested in the Government, litigation is considered probable.

MONEY IN THE PHILIPPINES.

Stock of Silver in the Archipelago is Rapidly Diminishing.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The Secretary of War has communicated to Congress a cablegram from the Philippine Commission indicating a grave crisis in the monetary affairs of the Archipelago. The message was communicated to Congress in connection with a mass of memoranda bearing on the problem which is now to be solved as to the coinage of some kind of silver to take the place of the Mexican dollar in the Philippines.

The commission has cabled that the stock of silver in the islands is rapidly diminishing, and they urgently request an answer to the message sent by them of date of Sept. 5, setting out the necessity for prompt action, and asking what remedy shall be applied. It has been found impossible, apparently, to continue the ratio of 2 to 1 established and maintained arbitrarily, and the Mexican money is being drained away very rapidly toward China and India, making it difficult for the army disbursing officers to transact their business.

INSURGENTS TRY TO ESCAPE.

Gen. Alejandrino's Men Have No Water and Little Food.

MANILA, Dec. 31.—Gen. Frederick D. Grant, wires that Gen. Alejandrino's men are trying to escape from Mount Arayat. Two of them were killed Sunday. There is no water on the mountain, and food is scarce.

An official report says the Fourth Infantry and the Fourth Cavalry, in Cavite Province, have captured 116 armed insurgents and taken possession of their camps at Anabo and Malagran.

Capt. Biddle, Chief of Engineers, has returned on the transport Meade from the Island of Guam. He says the conditions there have greatly improved by the planting of trees. The Arethusa, a water carrier, laden with supplies, arrived there Dec. 21, after a tempestuous voyage from Cavite, during which her boats were swept overboard. There is much suffering from hunger in the outlying districts of Guam, but no starvation. Two-thirds of the population are at Agana, the chief city of the island, and in its vicinity.

THE GRANT AT SAN FRANCISCO.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 31.—The transport Grant arrived to-day from Manila, Hongkong, and Nagasaki. On board are 67 cabin passengers and 336 sick and discharged soldiers.

The Grant also carries the remains of 288 officers, soldiers, and civil employes of the War Department who died in Hawaii, the Philippines, and China, including those of Lieut. Barber, the President's nephew.

WOMAN KILLED BY ELEVATED TRAIN

Mrs. Margaret McCarthy, Wife of a Clerk, Crushed to Death.

WAS PROBABLY AN ACCIDENT

Occurrence Witnessed by Many Persons on Platforms at Ninth Avenue and Forty-second Street.

Mrs. Margaret McCarthy, thirty-eight years old, the wife of Cornelius McCarthy, a clerk, of 608 Eighth Avenue, was ground to death under an elevated railroad engine at the Forty-second Street station of the Ninth Avenue line at 8:30 o'clock last evening.

Witnesses are uncertain whether it was a case of suicide or an accident. The husband declares it was certainly the latter.

The ticket chopper on the up-town station observed the woman as she dropped her ticket in the box and passed along toward the north end of the platform. She was pale and breathing heavily from the exertion of climbing the stairs. At the moment a south bound train was midway between the Fifty-ninth and Forty-second Street stations.

Before Mrs. McCarthy had reached the end of the platform the train was within a few rods of the station. The air brakes had been turned on and the train was moving slowly. The woman stepped to the edge of the platform and just as the engine reached the north end of the station she plunged head foremost out upon the track. The engine guard passed over the body, which escaped the wheels but was caught by the fire-box and pushed along the ties for thirty feet before the engine was brought to a standstill.

There were about forty people on the platform at the time, the majority of them women in the opposite platform were about an equal number, many of whom were women who had a plain view of the occurrence. When it was seen that the woman had been crushed under the engine some of the spectators fainted and there was a scene of wild commotion until the arrival of the police. Word was at once sent to the Fifty-ninth Street Station and all Ninth Avenue southbound trains were stopped. All the engine was jacked up and the body of the unfortunate victim removed.

When the body was laid out on the platform it was seen that the top of the woman's head was crushed in the arms and limbs broken, and the trunk badly torn and mangled.

An ambulance was summoned from Roosevelt Hospital, but the surgeon who responded said there was no need for his services as the woman must have been dead before she had been extricated.

The body was removed to the West Forty-seventh Street Station, where it was identified by the husband. He then left his home to look for the missing woman.

It could not have been anything but an accident, said Mr. McCarthy. The idea of suicide is preposterous. My wife had only just left a sick bed, having given birth to her first child five weeks ago. We lived happily together and her home life and family relations were pleasant. Besides, she was certainly sane and never showed any signs of mental alienation.

A trained nurse, who had charge of Mrs. McCarthy and the baby, said the woman left the house at 4 o'clock to go to the Paulist Fathers' Church, at Fifty-fifth Street and Columbus Avenue, for confession. Why she went on the platform for south bound trains neither the nurse nor husband could explain.

CASE OF COMMANDANT CUIGNET

French Military Board of Inquiry Reaches a Decision Which Is Not Divulged.

PARIS, Dec. 31. A military board of inquiry presided over by Gen. Noellat, commanding the Sixth Division of the Third Army Corps, began at Fort Mont Valérien this morning an investigation into the charges against Commandant Cuignet. Contrary to expectations the inquiry was concluded this afternoon but the decision of the board was not divulged. It is understood however, that a decision was arrived at on the question as to whether Commandant Cuignet's offence justifies his being dismissed from the army. The indictment charged him with writing directly to the Premier, M. Waldeck-Rousseau, and to the Minister of War Gen. André, instead of through his immediately superior officer, with publishing these letters, and with refusing to reply to questions put to him by the Minister of War Gen. André.

The witnesses who arrived in twos and threes, included the following former Ministers of War: The chatlfet Zurlinden, Cavaignac, and Krantz and Gens. Roget, de Boisdeffre and Gonse and Deputy Lasies.

As announced by a cable dispatch dated [illegible] the French Minister of War, Gen. André, had inflicted on Commandant Cuignet sixty days' confinement in a fort. This, it was added, was disciplinary punishment for, first, disclosing to a Deputy, M. Lasies, a confidential document of which Cuignet obtained knowledge while rearranging the Dreyfus dossier under the orders of M. Cavaignac, then Minister of War, and, second, in writing directly to the Premier, M. Waldeck-Rousseau, to accuse the Minister of Foreign Affairs M. Delcassé, of falsehood, thereby transgressing the regulations which require all officers of the army to forward letters of complaint through the proper hierarchial channels. Cuignet, the dispatch further said, would subsequently appear before a council of inquiry which would investigate his principal offence, that of divulging a copy of one of the interpretations put upon the Panizzardi dispatch of Nov. 2, 1894, which figured in the Dreyfus court-martial at Rennes.

FIRE DEPARTMENT CHANGES

Several Veterans Are Retired from the Service.

Chief Croker Says There Is No Political Significance in the Shake-Up—Many Promotions.

The Fire Department had its semi-annual "shake-up" yesterday, and as a result one Chief of Battalion and five company commanders were retired, four assistant foremen were promoted to commands about a dozen engineers and firemen received higher grades, and sixty men who were on probation became full-fledged firemen. Four captains were made acting chiefs of battalions, and in all eighty transfers were made.

The most pleasant part of the "shake-up" was the fact that all men who were up for trial during the holidays had their sentences suspended.

Chief Croker said last night: "This is the usual semi-annual change in the department, and has no significance. All those who were retired did so on their own request. I hope that the next change will not come for another year. There is no political significance whatever in the present changes."

At the headquarters of Truck No. 3, at 108 East One Hundred and Eighth Street, where Capt. Meagher, one of the Captains who had been retired, had been in command, the men were free to discuss the reasons for his retirement. One of them said:

"The Captain has been in the department for thirty-five years, of which time he has spent twenty-four years in this house."

A short time ago he was told that he would either have to go above the Harlem or resign. He resigned. We all believe that Capt. Clifford will come back into the department, if not into his old position he may become Fire Commissioner."

The other retirements were all made strictly on the "age limit," and on the application of each of the men who were retired. Battalion Chief John Walsh, who leaves the force, is the inventor of several appliances which have been adopted by the department. His successor will be Capt. Thomas R. Langford of Engine Company No. 21.

The Captains in addition to Capt. Meagher who were retired are Samuel Best of Engine No. 37, at 53 Lawrence Street, who has been in the department since 1866; William Rowe of Engine No. 63, at Wakefield, who entered the department on the same day with Capt. Best; Alexander McDonald of Engine No. 6, 1,187 Tenth Avenue, who joined the force when it was organized in 1865; Matthew Hines of Engine No. 64, 221 East Seventy-fifth Street, who was appointed in 1868.

The following Captains were made Chiefs of Battalions: Thomas F. Dougherty of Engine 33, as Acting Chief of the Tenth Battalion, Thomas Freer of Engine 8, as Acting Chief of the new Eleventh Battalion, Martin M. Coleman of Truck 3, as Acting Chief of the Sixth Battalion, and George H. Winter of Truck 12, as Acting Chief of the Seventh Battalion.

The new Eleventh Battalion will have its headquarters at Fiftieth Street and Lexington Avenue, and Battalion Chief George Farrell will be in command. In the message which Chief Croker sent to all the companies announcing the changes, the following passage occurs:

"When it is considered that the uniformed force of this department had to respond to and perform duty at a greater number of fires this year than last with the same number of men and that it has succeeded in keeping the insurance loss down to much smaller figures the actual work and real merit of the Fire Department of the people of Greater New York cannot fail to be thoroughly appreciated.

"I am also pleased to note the large reduction in the number of charges preferred for infraction of rules against members during the year, and the efforts of the force in the line of duty have been fully appreciated by the Commissioner, as shown by the additional time given my recommendation that he has allowed for vacations and the number of promotions he has made of men who have at one time or another performed acts of personal risk and whose names appear on the Roll of Merit."

BIG FIRE NEAR CHICAGO.

Destruction of the Bellaire Stamping Company's Plant with a Loss of $400,000.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31. Fire destroyed the Bellaire Stamping Company's plant at Harvey, Ill., a manufacturing suburb, early to-day, causing a loss of $400,000, and throwing 700 men, boys, and girls out of employment. Insurance to the value of $175,000 was carried on the plant.

A high wind carried great quantities of burning embers about the town, threatening its destruction. Citizens, half-clad for many instances, turned out and assisted the five companies which comprise the Harvey Fire Department, finally succeeding in confining the fire to the stamping works.

Many barns and sheds caught fire, but were saved. Household property was hurried into the streets, and for hours women and children, shivering in the snow, stood guard over it.

At 3:30 A. M. the water supply gave out. To add to the excitement several tanks, two of them filled with naphtha exploded. Fragments of flow flew almost everywhere, but no one was seriously injured. When the water ceased to come the firemen left the factory to its fate and turned their attention to surrounding property. At 4 A. M. the plant was a smoldering mass of ruins, but adjacent buildings were unharmed.

The factory building was a four-story brick structure, 200 by 400 feet. The station and freight houses of the Chicago and Grand Trunk Railroad caught fire several times, but the flames were quickly extinguished.

FRENCH SHORE MODUS VIVENDI.

British Government Expects a Renewal of the Measure.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The British Foreign Office expects a renewal of the modus vivendi in Newfoundland, but believes it will be immediately followed by negotiations with the view of finally settling the lengthy dispute.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Dec. 31.—The French Shore modus vivendi will expire at midnight, and the Colonial Cabinet has not yet received any intimation from the Imperial Government regarding the intentions of the latter with respect to renewal. It is supposed that the French Government will move in the matter within a few days and endeavor to force Mr. Chamberlain's hand.

None Wish to Enter Pringle Home.

POUGHKEEPSIE, Dec. 31.—The Pringle Memorial Home, established and endowed under the provisions of a will left by a wealthy New York banker named Pringle, was opened in the Beard mansion in this city early in October. The Trustees of the fund purchased the house for about $70,000 and furnished it throughout, putting in the pictures and plate that had belonged to the Pringle family. Notwithstanding that the home has been open for three months, not one application has been received for admission, and the only persons in the house are the matron and one servant. The will provides that applicants must have followed a literary or other high pursuit, must be of good character, and furnish $300 upon entering.

THE QUEEN'S HONOR LIST.

Hiram S. Maxim Knighted and Edmund Barton Made Privy Councilor—No Peers Created.

LONDON, Dec. 31. The New Year's honor list includes the name of Hiram S. Maxim, who was born in Maine and who is the inventor of the automatic system of firearms. He is knighted. Sir Alfred Milner, the Administrator of South Africa, is made a G. C. B. (Knight Grand Cross of the Bath). Col. Kitson, formerly commanding at Kingston College, and Lieut. Col. Irwin, Secretary of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, are made Companions of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, and Sir Samuel Griffith and Edmund Barton are made Privy Councilors.

In addition there is a long list of Australians, prominent in the federation, who have received minor honors.

Col. Jekyll, Secretary of the British Commissioner at the Paris Exhibition, is made a K. C. M. G. (Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George). Clive Bigham, an attaché of the Peking Legation, and C. W. Campbell, Vice Consul at Shanghai, who both served with Vice Admiral Seymour's relief column, are made C. M. G. (Companion of St. Michael and St. George), and a number of other British Consuls in China.

No peers are created, and only a few persons are made Baronets or Knights.

On the whole it is an uninteresting list, with the exception of the following:

Edmund Barton, who, according to the above dispatch, has been made a Privy Councilor, was reported Dec. 25 to have accepted the Earl of Hopetoun's offer to form the first Cabinet of the Australian Federation. He had been the leader of the Federal Convention. The Earl of Hopetoun first offered the important post of Premier of the new Australian Commonwealth to Sir William Lyne, and was much criticised for so doing. Sir William, however, declined. Mr. Barton, unlike Sir William Lyne, is a very popular politician. He is a native of Australia, having been born at Sydney in 1867. He was educated at Sydney University, and became a barrister in 1871. From 1877 to 1887 he was Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of New South Wales, and was Attorney General in 1889 and 1891. It was largely through Mr. Barton's exertions that the federalization of Australia has been accomplished. He was a leader of the movement from the start, ten years ago, and has taken a prominent part in all the deliberations which have resulted in the success of the scheme.

BRITISH COLONIAL TRADE.

Dependencies Imported Over $1,000,000,000 in Goods in 1899.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Great Britain's failed to decrease does not appear in the reports published in a statistical abstract just received here, showing by comparative tables the trade of Great Britain with her colonies for 1899.

The British colonies all over the world imported in one year goods valued at more than $1,000,000,000, and of this quantity Canada came from the mother country. India imported $200,000,000 of goods, $70,000,000 of this coming from England. Canada imported about $140,000,000 but only $74,000,000 from the United Kingdom.

Australia and the Australasian islands imported in 1899 not far from $300,000,000, of which about $120,000,000 came from the United Kingdom. The British West Indies imported about $23,500,000, of which about $13,000,000 came from England. Africa's colonies imported $120,000,000, taking $65,000,000 from the mother country.

THE PORTICO SUIT ABATED

Death of Relator Strasburg Ends Mandamus Proceedings.

Commissioner Keating Now Free to Carry Out His Ultimatum in Pabst Hotel Case

Simon Strasburg, relator in the mandamus suit to compel the removal of the Pabst Hotel portico, in Forty-second Street, died last Thursday, and was buried on Sunday. This ends all effort to have the obstruction removed, so far as private litigation now on the docket is concerned.

Mr. Strasburg was the keeper of a Raines law hotel at 502 Seventh Avenue, and his course in asking for a mandamus caused Commissioner of Highways James P. Keating to withdraw his ultimatum to the hotel management, in which he said that if the obstruction was not removed he would tear it down with a force of city employes.

It was on Aug. 27 that the Commissioner declared he would not act further in the matter until the mandamus case was decided. The case was to have been argued to-morrow in Part I. of the Supreme Court, where it has already been called and adjourned thirteen times.

Gen. S. F. Kneeland, who was Strasburg's attorney, wrote to Commissioner a letter yesterday, in which he said:

I understand that some time since you publicly announced your intention of removing the incumbrance in front of the Pabst Hotel, and that such action on your part was delayed by the pendency of the suit of Strasburg vs. Hotahan et al. As counsel for the late Simon Strasburg I have to state that this objection has been removed by his abandonment, owing to the death of the plaintiff. You are, therefore, perfectly free to carry out the well intention heretofore announced by you in the public press.

If I have not misinterpreted your authority to remove the structure I beg to refer you to the following cases:

Wormser vs. Brown, 149 N. Y., 163; Hart vs. Mayor, 129 N. Y., 142; People vs. Baltimore and N. Railroad Company, 127 N. Y., 150; Jorgensen vs. Squires, 144 N. Y., 280; The Consolidation Act, 1882, page 312, 317; Charter of the City of New York, 1897, pages 527, 528, Subd. 7, 11 609, 1499, 1500 and 1611.

Commissioner Keating, however, left his office shortly before 5 o'clock, and was not moved to talk of the Pabst Hotel incumbrance.

"I have not," he said, "with the fate of Mr. Gardiner before me, to be very careful in talking to reporters."

So far as I am concerned it is a matter of indifference to me whether it stands or comes down. I don't care one way or another. I have no interest in it. But it seems to me now that it is going to come down.

Gen. Kneeland in his letter to me cites a number of legal points, and I am no lawyer. So I have sent it to Corporation Counsel Whalen, and will do nothing until he passes on the matter. I expect a ruling in a couple of days."

Following is the text of the ultimatum sent to James Brosnan, proprietor of the hotel by Commissioner Keating:

City of New York, Department of Highways, Commissioner's Office, 13 21 Park Row, Borough of Manhattan, Aug. 20, 1900.

On Aug. 3, last, you were notified by this department to remove the portico erected by you, in violation of law, on the north side of Forty-second Street, between Broadway and Seventh Avenue.

You have paid no attention to the notice, and have given no indication of any disposition on your part to comply with it.

I am therefore obliged to finally and peremptorily notify you that if on or before Saturday, the 25th inst. you shall not remove or begin to remove said portico I will exercise my authority by proceeding to take it down and remove it to the Corporation Yard.

Transmit through the Superintendent of Incumbrances for personal service.

The Strasburg mandamus proceedings were instituted Aug. 27, and Mr. Keating, means the suit an excuse for inaction, said:

There are many items in the fire that no suggestions were ex ited. Began came and asked for a delay of ten days, and while I was considering the request the mandamus proceedings were started. Here is a man not known in the case at all who serves mandamus papers to compel me to action. Now, there are many men in the line, and I'm going to let the court pass on the case. It looks like a conspiracy, and I am going to investigate the matter myself.

The question of any law preventing Commissioner Keating from carrying out the intention set forth in his letter to Proprietor Hogan was submitted to George Hill, acting Chief of the Law Department.

"It is," he said, "too simple and too obvious to require an answer. There is nothing to prevent Commissioner Keating from taking this action."

Mr. Hill added that the mandamus proceedings were used to compel a public officer to do duty he has failed to do.

THE NEW YORK TIMES first called attention to the illegal encroachment on the public sidewalk in Forty-second Street by the Pabst portico in its issue of July 8. While there are other encroachments of a like kind in the entire block given by the neighborhood of the Pabst Hotel, this instance of illegal squatting was selected as the most conspicuous, as the structure is practically a building erected on territory which is the property of the public. The sidewalk area grabbed is 753 square feet, worth, on estimated current real estate values, in the locality, $58,300. Richard Croker and John F. Carroll have given Proprietor Hogan countenance in his resisting all efforts to restore the sidewalk to public use. The incumbrance now only takes up the sidewalk, but cuts off the view to and west on the north side of Forty-second Street. All sorts of dodges have been resorted to to put an ex post facto legalization on the obstruction. There was first an effort to pass an Assembly resolution giving Charles Thorley permission to "erect" a portico "within the stoop line and under the direction of the Commissioner of Highways." Then there was a resolution to keep and maintain a portico on the stoop line. Neither was legalized. Recently a resolution permitting Thorley to keep and maintain the existing violation of law passed the Assembly and got to the Mayor, but it was recalled by Alderman Joseph Oatman, who pledged himself not to release it.

The charter of New York City, in treating of the Department of Highways' jurisdiction, says:

"The Commissioner of Highways shall have cognizance and control . . . Seventh, of the removal of incumbrances . . ."

The Penal Code of the State of New York Chapter VI., "Other Offenses Against Public Justice," says:

Section 147. General Provision as to Neglect, &c. A public officer or person holding a public trust or employment upon whom any duty is enjoined by law, who wilfully neglects to perform the duty is guilty of a misdemeanor . . ."

Gen. Kneeland's brief in the Strasburg case recited:

"That the whole structure is upon property belonging to the city and is an interruption to the use of the public highway, and is now used by the owners or lessees of the building appurtenant thereto for their own or private use, which is not and never was the intention of the grantor upon which the grant was made, and which grant expressly provides that no one has obtained any right, license or permit by reason of such grant, license or permit has any board officer or official having any right or power to grant the same in the premises."

RESCUED FROM HIGH PERCH

Been for Forty-eight Hours on the Topmost Limb of a Tree, Too Frightened to Move.

A cat of unusual size created considerable excitement in and about Hamilton Park, Jersey City, from Saturday afternoon until 5 o'clock P. M. yesterday, when agent George W. McCarthy of the City Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals brought the performance to a close.

The cat had climbed to the topmost limb of a tree 100 feet high. Then it became so thoroughly frightened that it feared to climb down again.

Numerous boys discovered its dilemma and its meows of distress. They tried to climb to the cat's perch, but could not reach it. Then they tried to dislodge the animal by throwing stones at it, but the cat's attitude protected it from the missiles.

So Sunday wore on, and finally Monday came. By that time the cat was half starved, and its pitious cries attracted the attention of residents of the neighborhood. One of them notified President McCarthy, who took two of his officers to the scene. After a careful inspection of the situation, one of the officers climbed the tree, armed with a saw, which was strapped to his back. When he had reached the base of the limb on which the cat sat, and could get no higher, he sawed off the branch. This he carefully lowered. The cat, seeming to understand that the movement was intended for its relief, offered no objection. The moment it could do so it made a flying leap and landed on his shoulder. It purred contentedly in his ear as he went down the tree, but tried to scamper away as soon as it reached the ground. A watchful boy caught it, however, and a woman, who was waiting with some bits of meat, said: She offered to give the cat a home, and President McCarthy accepted her offer.

A QUEER LEGAL TANGLE.

Balleys Cannot Appear in Court in Manhattan Without Forfeiting Bail in Brooklyn.

A peculiar legal situation was disclosed yesterday in an argument to vacate an order of arrest which came up before Justice Blanchard in the Supreme Court.

A man, who was arrested on an order issued from the Supreme Court in New York County and then released on bail cannot come across the Brooklyn Bridge and personally appear in the courts without forfeiting his bail bond and being subject to another arrest, this time on the application of his bondsman.

Gustavus L. Balleys of 104 First Place, Brooklyn, is the man who is in this situation. From the papers in the case it appears that on Jan. 10, 1900, Mr. Balleys became general manager of the shoe department of Bornn & Co., the exporting agents. He continued in that position until Sept. 25, 1900. After this, Bornn & Co. claim, they discovered a shortage in his accounts to the amount of $602.05, and on this they sued in the Supreme Court, obtaining a civil warrant for Balleys's arrest. The warrant was granted in the Supreme Court of this county on several affidavits, the principal one being that of Frank Bornn, who gives a list of eleven firms from which he alleges Balleys had collected money and receipted for the same without accounting to Bornn & Co.

Balleys was duly arrested, the warrant being served on him in Brooklyn, and he was taken to the Raymond Street Jail, when he gave bonds, by which he was released from the prison and allowed to stay inside the "jail limits," which are Kings County. If he crossed the bridge the bond would be forfeited. This arrest and the giving of bail took place on Dec 11. Since that date Mr Balleys made an application in the Supreme Court of New York County to vacate the order of the arrest. One of the points of his application was that he and his wife had given a bill of sale of their furniture to Bornn & Co. and that the firm had forced him to give this bill of sale.

Charles McDermott of Boardman & Boardman appeared for Bornn & Co., and by affidavits denied that any compulsion had been used on Mr Balleys, and among the affidavits he submitted was that of Frederick W. Frost, a lawyer, who had been interested in arranging the settlement of the matter. Among other things, Mr Frost says that he called at Balleys's house with Frank Bornn and that Balleys said that he knew what his liability was in the matter, that he knew it was a criminal liability, that he had tried repeatedly to stop these peculations, that he had not been able to stop, and that he had constantly been drinking and that he had not been able to stop drinking, that he felt freer in his mind and conscience now that this thing had come out than he had felt since his return from Havana in June last.

The argument was made on the lines that Balleys, while arrested on a warrant from the Supreme Court of New York County, was really held within the jail limits of Kings County and therefore could not come into New York County pending the hearing of his case without forfeiting his bail.

Justice Blanchard reserved his decision on the motion.

ROBBED IN STREET OF $980.

Solomon and His Wife Attacked by Gang of Men at Third Avenue and Fourteenth Street.

After spending an evening at the theatre and eating a late supper at a restaurant, Frederick Solomon and his wife, who were on their way to their home at 11 Suffolk Street early yesterday morning, were set upon at Fourteenth Street and Third Avenue by a gang of men, and Solomon, after being beaten with fists and umbrellas, was robbed of $980. The cries of Solomon and his wife brought a policeman to the scene, and one of the men, Thomas Shelly, a bartender, of 97 Third Avenue, was arrested.

Solomon appeared against Shelly in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday morning, and said that as he and his wife were passing the corner mentioned one of the party of men made an insulting remark to Mrs Solomon. The husband resented it and engaged in a fight, but was soon overpowered by superior numbers, after being badly beaten. He says he was knocked down, and then one of his assailants reached into his inside pocket and took his pocketbook containing the money.

In court Shelly vigorously denied the robbery, although admitting that he was one of the number that attacked Solomon. No money had been found on him when he was searched in the station house immediately after the arrest. He asked for an adjournment, and was held in $2,000 bail for examination to-morrow.

STRIKING BAKERS HOPEFUL.

"King of the Boss Bakers" Has Complied with the Men's Demands.

The members of the Strike Committee of the Hebrew Bakers' Union were in high spirits yesterday. Hyman Bolenzweig, who is known as the "King of the Boss Bakers," having granted all the demands. Bolenzweig has six bakeries, his main establishment being at 7 Forsyth Street. His example, the committee said, was likely to be followed by the other boss bakers.

Up to late in the forenoon many sympathizers with the strikers were breakfasting. They consisted of the members of the United Hebrew Trades, the Brotherhood of Cloakmakers, and other unions, with their families, who had agreed to starve rather than eat non-union bread. Late in the forenoon union bread was sold from seventy-five trucks by agents of the Strike Committee. It had been bought from union bakeries in Brooklyn and Newark.

New demands have been made by the strikers. One is that the practice of compelling journeymen bakers to sleep in the bakeries, which is a frequent one, must be abolished. Another demand is that dogs be kept out of the bakeries. A further demand is that the bakeries be cleaned regularly and kept clean, and that the walking delegate of the union be allowed to make periodical inspections of the bakeries to see that all these conditions are adhered to.

SOCIALIST PASTOR RESIGNS.

The Rev. Mr. Vail Offers to Turn Over His Pulpit to His Wife.

The Rev. Charles H. Vail, pastor of the First Universalist Church, Jersey City, has tendered his resignation, to take effect May 1 next. At the same time, he has notified the Trustees that in case they have not selected a new pastor by the time fixed, his wife, who is also an ordained minister of the Universalist Church, will assume his duties for such period as they may determine.

It was reported that Mr Vail will hereafter devote himself to Socialism, but this statement he declined to confirm, though he would not deny it. He said he had not yet decided upon his future course.

Mr. Vail is well known as a lecturer on Socialism, and he is also the author of several works on the same subject. He said yesterday that he regarded Socialism as the coming world power and the consummation of industrial evolution, and he believes that the time will come when every man with an eight-hour day will be able to earn from $7,000 to $8,000 a year.

Unknown Man Found Dead.

An unknown man, shabbily dressed, with the appearance of one who did not expect much with the dawn of the new year and century, was found sitting in a doorway at 85 Park Row by a policeman of the Oak Street Station yesterday morning. The policeman tried to awaken the man in vain. He then summoned an ambulance, but it was time wasted. The man was dead. The body lies at the station house, unrecognized by any kinsman or friend. If somebody does not call very soon the wanderer will be laid permanently to rest in the Potter's Field.

Appeal for the African Treaty.

Bishop E. G. Andrews of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and many Methodist preachers yesterday signed a message, which will be sent to Senator Frye, President of the Senate. The message is as follows: "Undersigned petition Senate to make a ratification of the African treaty, with Lodge resolution, keynote of new century." The treaty in question, designed to protect African savages from the liquor and arms of the white man, has already been ratified by fifteen nations.

STATE OFFICERS' REPORT

Heads of Departments Review Conditions for the Year.

Discuss New Barge Canal, Public Instruction, State Finances, and Other State Matters.

ALBANY, Dec. 31.—Heads of various State departments have completed their reports to be submitted to the Legislature, in them the condition of the departments for the last fiscal year is discussed.

Edward A. Bond, State Engineer and Surveyor, says in his report that one of his principal duties has been the making of a survey and plans and estimates for a barge canal across the State, for which $200,000 was appropriated. This survey is completed and the results are in progress of preparation, and will be presented to the Legislature in February, 1901.

The report will be exhaustive, and will include the results of studies by specialists in all the different features involved in the design of a modern canal, it being the intention of the State Engineer that the plans for this work will be so thoroughly considered that the estimates of cost for its various portions shall be agreed upon by so many well-known and experienced engineers, that these estimates shall be in such form as to aid a comparison with the estimates and plans recently presented to Congress for a United States twenty-one-foot ship canal from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario and from Oswego, on Lake Ontario, to Albany, on the Hudson River, and that they shall command the confidence of the public and enable the Legislature and the people of the State to form a full and unbiased judgment as to the desirability of building this great barge canal.

The locks of this canal are specified by the law which ordered the survey to be 300 feet long, 28 feet wide, and 11 feet deep, with a capacity to pass two boats, each 150 feet in length and 25 feet in width and 10 feet draught, with a cargo capacity of 1,000 tons each.

The State Engineer has also had charge of the survey, design, and construction of good roads under the Higbie-Armstrong law of 1898, under which law the sum of $2,000,000 has been appropriated by the State during the three years it has been in force. Twenty-three roads have thus been built, located in twelve counties and aggregating 93½ miles. In addition to this, 131 petitions have been received from twenty-seven counties for an aggregate of 800 miles, of which surveys and estimates have been made or are in progress for 80 roads in twenty-three counties, aggregating 400 miles, and showing an average estimated or actual cost of $7,625 per mile.

PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Charles R. Skinner has finished compiling the school statistics for the past school year. There was expended for all purposes in support of the public schools of the State the sum of $33,621,401.37, this being an increase over the previous year of $5,300,301.08. About $4,300,000 of this increase is shown in New York City alone. There was paid for teachers' salaries $19,210,962.61, and the average annual salary paid teachers throughout the State was $403.78. There were employed 31,766 teachers, which was an increase of 1,290 over the previous year.

Out of the 1,501,658 pupils of school age residing in the State, 1,230,374 attended the public schools some portion of the year, and 161,896 attended private schools. This shows that 88 per cent. of all the children of school age in this State attended either a public or private school some portion of the year.

A number of weak rural districts have been annexed and a larger number of small districts have taken advantage of the law permitting them to contract with adjoining districts for the education of their pupils than during any previous year.

The report shows that there were 247 less men employed in the teaching force of the State than during the previous year, while there were 1,053 more women employed.

The increase in the value of school property during the year is reported as $6,614,-000. The entire public school property of the State is valued at $81,700,000.

FOREST, FISH, AND GAME.

The annual summary of the work of the Forest, Fish, and Game Commission shows that the commission has collected and passed over to the State Treasury a total of $13,250.70, made up as follows: Fines and penalties, $6,000.67, trespasses, $2,002.31, net licenses, $1,651, shell-fish rentals, $2,173.41, miscellaneous, $417.31. The total collections to the close of the current year amount to $16,000.53.

Extensive improvements have been made to the State reservation on the St. Lawrence known as the International Park.

The State fish culturist, acting under the direction of the commission, has distributed in the various waters of the State the enormous total of 219,135,000 fish of different kinds.

During the year the game protectors destroyed 2,615 illegal devices for the capture of fish and game, which were used as $30,612.55, and the department prosecuted a total of 357 offenders against the fish and game laws, securing 336 convictions. There also were 53 cases of trespass on State lands, which were taken into court and convictions secured.

The area of forest controlled and cared for by the commission at the close of the current year amounts to 1,370,921 acres of this total 1,200,987 acres are included in the Adirondack preserve and 70,941 acres in the Catskills.

THE NATIONAL GUARD.

The annual report of the commanding officer of the National Guard, Major Gen. Charles F. Roe, shows the aggregate strength of the National Guard on Sept. 30, 1900, to be 14,251, divided as follows: Commissioned officers 455, enlisted men, 13,396. The report says:

"A grand total of 10,045 enlisted men and seamen qualified in general and supplementary practice, the same being 81.74 per cent of the number practising. The result of the artillery practice was as follows: First Battery—Shell fire, 10 hits, shrapnel fire, 31 hits, total, 41. Second Battery—Shell fire, 10 hits, shrapnel fire, 107 hits, total, 107. Sixth Battery—Shell fire, 10 hits, shrapnel fire, 115 hits, total, 125.

"The condition of the guard is much improved since the last report, with the exception of a few organizations. The attention paid to the detailed work, books, and internal discipline is marked. The change of having the inspections and musters in the Fall of the year only a month preceding the report to the Governor as to the condition of the guard is believed to be much more satisfactory, as it shows the actual condition of the guard at that time and after a period of vacation.

"The performance of field service and practice marches by the organizations in camp this year was very satisfactory. That this practice is a good thing and should be continued is fully demonstrated by the manner in which the organizations at the Croton Dam strike got into the field and were capable of taking care of themselves in performing the practical duties of a soldier with the knowledge born of experience.

"I desire to call special attention to the fine showing of the guard in small arms practice. The figures show a decided improvement over last year. Great credit is due to the inspector of small arms practice of the National Guard and his assistants for the admirable manner in which everything in their line of duty has been carried out in the whole State."

Under the head of recommendations the commanding officer says:

"The instruction of the guard has now progressed so far that more outdoor instruction in the shape of practical field service is very desirable and should be extended from regiments to brigades. In order to allow the brigade commanders an opportunity to handle their brigades and give practice to the brigade staffs in their various duties. The present appropriation is inadequate, as only one-half of the guard can be ordered for field service in each year. A man may enlist in the guard, serve five years, and only have field service twice. I therefore most urgently recommend that the appropriation be sufficiently increased to warrant ordering the whole of the guard for field service each year.

"It is earnestly recommended that steps be taken to acquire land in rear of the long range targets at Creedmoor, this being absolutely necessary to make the range safe. The land required is estimated to be about thirty-five acres, the cost of which should not exceed from $7,500 to $10,000. It is further recommended that the State house on the range at Creedmoor be enlarged sufficiently to double the seating capacity at mess, so that commanding officers of organizations will be able to feed their men on the range and keep them constantly under their supervision and control."

CULTIVATION OF RUBBER.

Consul James M. Mally Points Out a Field in Guatemala Open to American Enterprise.

Owing to the enormous increase in the uses of rubber, such as in electrical work, the manufacture of rubber tires, &c., the American Consuls stationed in rubber countries are frequently called upon to report on the rubber cultivation with a view to interesting American capital. The latest report on this subject comes from Consul James M. Mally of Guatemala.

The report points out above all the necessity of locating such a plantation on suitable land:

Some lands, while having all the elements required for fruitful production, lack the fertility necessary for quick growth. The time required for developement depends entirely upon the soil and the advantages of location. Some lands will develop the growth of the trees so rapidly that in seven years it will produce milk, while others need from nine to ten years. Land situated near the sea and at its level having the full benefit of the sea breezes will produce in much shorter time than land of a higher elevation and further inland. In the cultivation of rubber one must also cultivate patience, for at least seven years are required before any return is made on the investment, however, cocoa, sugar cane, tobacco, and other marketable products can be raised at the same time, which will pay expenses for rubber cultivation.

The rubber lands in Guatemala are equal to any in the world, and with proper care and intelligent cultivation the product will command a price equal to any. The climate, soil, and atmosphere of Guatemala are entirely favorable to the cultivation, not out of rubber, cocoa, tobacco, coffee, and sugar, but of all vegetables and articles of domestic use. It is, in my judgment, the ideal land for the farmer, who, with the application of modern farm implements, could win a recompense for his labor much beyond that to be obtained in our own country. Two crops a year can be raised, and there is absolutely no limit to the articles of farm production which could be cultivated here.

Every inquiry received desires data as to the probable cost of rubber production. This is difficult to give, as much depends on the person engaged in the work. However, these points must be considered. The cost of the land, its location, and the quality of the soil, the facility for securing workmen, the means for getting the rubber to the coast or railway, &c. It is estimated that 600,000 trees can be planted in one cultivated acre, and $15 an acre is the land was purchased for about $10 an acre. The labor is cheap, the native workman getting about 6 reales or 12 cents in United States currency a day. Small inexpensive huts must be erected on the plantation for the workmen. Plantains are the first crop that can be grown in sufficient quantities without any expense whatever. After the trees are planted very little cost is incurred, unless the planter is raising other marketable products. I know of no enterprise or business requiring as little money as the cultivation of rubber. After the seventh year, each tree can be counted upon to give a product worth at least $1 gold per year, and sometimes $2.

The report then enters into details as to the tapping of the trees, dealing with the treatment of the milk the report says:

As to the treatment of the milk when extracted opinions differ. The natives make a canal in the tree and let the milk run into a hole in the ground made particularly for that purpose, which answers as a receptacle. In the process of hardening solidifying, dirt is taken in and, of course the rubber is not pure and is of less value. Some permit the milk to flow into a barrel and the juice of a vine, quiebra caja, is used to solidify. Alum, which has an almost immediate effect on the rubber, is much used. Sweet fire is also used to cause the evaporation of the water in the milk. Another process is to pour the milk into water, the will sustain immediately and when taken out is in appearance much like a sponge. It should then be pressed through a press and all the rain squeezed out. An American wringer can be used for the purpose. When this is done the rubber is of a bluish color and is the pure post.

EXTRADITION FROM CUBA.

Attorney General Will Decide Application for Return of a Fugitive.

WASHINGTON Dec 31 The War Department has referred to the Attorney General the application of Gov Pingree of Michigan for the extradition of Charles J. Thompson, now in Cuba, who is wanted in Detroit to answer to the charges of forgery. There is no case analogous to this in the history of the War Department's control of Cuba. It is deemed well, therefore, to have it determined by high authority before establishing a precedent.

The officials of the War Department have no doubt that the Attorney General will sustain Gov Pingree's application. It is recalled that upon one occasion when the Mexican Government honored the request of the American Military Governor of Cuba for the extradition of fugitives from the island who had escaped to Mexico the Mexican Government surrendered them upon a promise by the United States Government that it would reciprocate in case fugitive Mexicans escaped to Cuba.

It probably will be held that if Gen Wood can honor the demand of a foreign Government for the surrender of a fugitive he cannot resist a similar request from the Government of the United States.

RUBBER FROM THE HULE PLANT.

F. Merrill Griffith, American Consul at Matamoros Mexico reports in a communication under date of Nov 30, 1900 a process for extracting rubber from the hule plant. The process was discovered about a year ago by a Mexican doctor residing in Sierra Mojada. This plant which contains about 40 per cent of rubber, grows in the mountainous districts of Mexico, as well as in certain localities of Texas, Wyoming, and Nebraska. It is a species of sage brush, with small leaves, and grows to a height of about three feet.

A patent on the process has been taken out in the United States and Mexico, and a manufacturing plant has been located at San Luis Potosi. All the machinery for use in extracting the rubber has been invented and patented in both countries by the Monterey Foundry and Manufacturing Company of Monterey. The principal steps in the manufacture are as follows:

There are special machines which feed the plant automatically into cutters, after it comes out of these, it is carried by a bucket elevator and dumped into a steam jacket mixing tank, containing chemicals. The product then is allowed to run into hydraulic filter presses, after which it is subjected to a hydrostatic pressure of 75 pounds to the square inch. It is then conveyed into settling tanks where the gum, being heavier settles to the bottom, leaving the chemicals and the residue to be drawn off.

The cost of production is slight. The principal difficulty to be overcome at the present time is the high rate of freight.

MONTREAL LUMBER EXPORT.

The Consular report regarding the Montreal lumber export shows a decrease, as compared to last year, of about 2[illegible],000 feet. According to Felix S. S. Johnson, commercial agent at Stanbridge, the marked feature in the export lumber trade for the past season has been the steady advance in values and the firmness with which stocks have been held, principally owing to the destructive fire at Ottawa in April. Besides this, the earlier shipments, made in fulfillment of existing contracts that were taken at only a slight advance over last year's prices, met a sharp rise in ocean freight rates, which materially reduced the shipping margins. Owing to the fire, only 40 per cent. of the shipments from Montreal came under the Summer insurance rates, while 60 per cent. were under extreme Autumn rates.

The following figures show the export lumber trade for the season of 1900, as per Custom House returns.

	Feet.
Quantity exported	224,000,000
To South America	600,000
Total	224,600,000
Quantity shipped last year	260,000,000
Decrease	35,000,000

The report further says:

"Some two dozen replies to letters sent out by The Canadian Lumberman go to show that logging operatives are unable to obtain a sufficient number of employes. Wages and food have advanced, and the chances are that the output of logs will be materially reduced. The Lumberman adds that the increase in the wages of woodsmen in the United States has amounted to nearly 50 per cent. during the past four years. It is believed that there has been an almost equal advance in Canada. This increase cannot be disregarded by manufacturers, who must of necessity secure for their product a price sufficient to cover the higher cost of production.

"The consumption of lumber for manufacturing purposes is likely to grow. In addition to a steadily growing home demand, the export of furniture and wood supplements is increasing. It is not improbable that the United States and Great Britain will take from Canada next year fully as much, if not more, lumber than in the season now closing."

PRESS CLUB RECEPTION.

President Bryant Meets the Members—A Talk by A. C. Harmsworth.

President William Cullen Bryant of the New York Press Club gave his annual reception yesterday afternoon to the members of the organization. The guests of honor were A. C. Harmsworth, proprietor of The Daily Mail (London) and the Comte de Lahune de Lafayette, a great-grandson of the Marquis de Lafayette. The apartments of the club were tastefully decorated.

Mr. Harmsworth was the first speaker. "I am most happy," he said, "to meet my confreres of the New York Press Club. It is a matter of regret to me that I have not more time to spend among you, but I have taken upon myself a task to-day the laboriousness of which I but faintly conceived at the time I agreed to it.

"One thing I must remark here. It is that you newspaper men here are not properly renumerated. I pay the high-class men on my papers far more than they are paid here. I know just exactly what the work is. I have gone through it all, from reporter of general assignments to owner, and I know, furthermore, that the average life of the newspaper man is not above fifteen years. Only the other day in fact, coming from England to this country—a newspaper owner said to me: 'What is the matter, I wonder? My best men are constantly leaving me?' I said: 'It is probably because you don't pay them enough.' This fault may have been overcome within the last few days, and some of you gentlemen may be able to say so. Now, I would remark as to the pay of the other reporters that it is much the same in England as in New York."

Mr. Harmsworth expressed pleasure at being able to speak to "the largest and most distinguished body of journalists" he had ever addressed.

The Chinese Minister to the United States, Wu-Ting-Fang, was expected, but was unable to attend. He sent as his representative Mr. Chou, Chinese Consul General at New York, a member of the Press Club. In a brief address Mr. Chou said that he had the kindest feeling for newspaper men, and thanked them sincerely for the indulgence shown to his country by the press.

Comte de Lafayette made a short speech, expressing his pleasure at being able to attend the reception.

An interesting talk was given by Franklin Brooks, formerly a New York newspaper man, but now proprietor of The Manila American, the first American newspaper published in the Philippines.

CITY EMPLOYES DROPPED.

Thirty-four Attaches of the Department of Charities Let Out.

A New Year's greeting that was not expected to inspire feelings of gratitude and thankfulness was received yesterday by thirty-four employes in the Department of Charities.

The "greeting" was in the form of an order of dismissal from the service, to take effect forthwith, and was handed to the several persons for whom it was intended when their work for the day was finished.

The order of dismissal was issued by Commissioner John W. Keller. Following is the list of names of those "dropped," their occupations, department branch, and amount of salary:

Storehouse, Joseph Hunter, hospital helper	180
Storehouse, J. T. Ragan, general storekeeper	1,000

The total saving in salaries by these dismissals amounts to $14,940, which, according to Commissioner Keller, reduces the estimates to figures within the appropriation of $43,816 for 1901.

"None of the persons whose names appear on the list," said Commissioner Keller, "was dismissed for 'cause.' The investigation of abuses that I have been prosecuting revealed nothing affecting the character of any of the persons dismissed. As it stated in my order, the expenses of the department had to be reduced to bring the same within the appropriation, and those employes whose services could be most easily dispensed with were let go."

ANOTHER BELLEVUE CASE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

While the disgraceful management of Bellevue Hospital is being discussed I deem it wise to give my experience of Friday, the 25th inst. Upon my advice a lady, a member of my church, a woman of character and standing in the community, was taken to Bellevue Hospital on Thursday last. She has been an invalid for some time. We had a private nurse for her. She was treated by two of the best physicians in the city.

At 4 o'clock on Friday the daughter of this lady came to me in great distress, saying that grandmamma says that "mamma is in the alcoholic ward among the drunkards, that she is lying on a naked bench, without a pillow." I couldn't believe the story. I went at once to Bellevue. I got there at 5.30, and waited until 6.15 to see Dr Moore, who had charge of this patient. I was sent to No. 32, where I found Dr. Moore. I asked him about the patient. He said: "She is here." "What is the matter with her, Dr Moore?" It is a protracted case of alcohol and whisky drinking," said he.

"What?" said I. "Have you examined her?"

"No."

"You have a respectable woman here, half dead, for twenty-four hours among drunkards, and haven't examined her?"

"No," said he, "she will be examined to-morrow (Saturday) at 2 P. M."

"What sort of a method have you here, anyway?" I asked. "You keep a respectable woman in an alcoholic ward for twenty-four hours without an examination?"

Then I asked to see the patient. The nurse ushered me into the room. There sat a woman with her head leaning across the end of a naked bench, as a dead woman. I was shocked. I was horrified. My righteous indignation had no measure, no limit.

The conduct of this institution is a disgrace to civilization. I lived in the country for many years. I never treated my dogs, hogs, or cows as patients are treated at Bellevue. I am now verily of the opinion that Cornelius Plesants was murdered in Bellevue about six months or a year ago. It will be remembered that he was both blind and insane. He was taken to Bellevue. In this butcher pen he was beaten almost to death. Two of his ribs were broken. He died from the effects. The shocking murder of Hilliard is yet fresh in our minds.

Who is responsible? Primarily, the Medical Board, secondarily, the Commissioner of Public Charities. The Commissioner appoints the nurses, but these nurses are under the supervision of the Medical Board.

But what about patients who are brought to the hospital and are not examined for twenty-four hours? What about Mrs Brasilia Hodsden of 346 West Fifty-ninth Street, who was sent to Bellevue last Thursday, and who was not examined until Saturday at 2 o'clock? Why did Dr. Moore say that it was a case of "protracted alcohol and whisky drinking," when he nor any other hospital doctor had examined the woman? Bellevue is rotten from centre to circumference. The same and past history ought not to be allowed to sink beneath the stagnant waters of politics, greed, and gain. A thorough investigation ought to be had. The truth of the matter ought to be known. The light must be thrown on the action of these murderers.

P. BUTLER THOMPKINS.

The Abuses at Bellevue.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

With the dawn of the twentieth century, and in view of the revelations of Bellevue horrors, would it not be in keeping with progressive journalism, to which the general public is indebted, to keep alive the agitating question of the condition of the outraged and abused poor of New York who have the misfortune to have recourse to the sanitariums of New York for relief. For years Bellevue has been a by-word—an equivalent for everything that was brutal and inhuman—in fact, the very name of it seemed to the unfortunate being who had the misfortune to go behind its walls another name for hades.

Speak advisedly and am not groping in the dark in the matter. It was only yesterday that I was speaking to a victim of their brutality, John Hardigan. He had just come from the hospital, and his denunciation of the hospital and its methods of so-called "relief" would be interesting if it were not distressing.

Instead of being a relief, therefore, it would seem that the whole system of so-called "charity" institutions in New York is simply an incubus on society, and needs a thorough overhauling. It is not, although it may seem so, an audacious paradox. The raking up of the dregs have brought to the surface the rotten germs which have been long lying dormant at the bottom, and which should be at once eliminated from the already too turbulent waters of our social system.

A JOKE THAT REACTED.

Mrs. Boertlein Pretended to Take Poison, and the Consequences Were Painful to Her.

Mrs. Catherine Boertlein of 256 East One Hundred an Twenty-fifth Street, who, it would appear, is passionately fond of a joke, succeeded on Sunday afternoon in making her husband, a policeman, and an ambulance surgeon believe that she had taken a bottle full of carbolic acid in an effort to kill herself. When she appeared in the Harlem Police Court yesterday to answer to a charge of attempted suicide, she explained her little joke, but said that, owing to the drastic measures the ambulance surgeon took to save her life she had deeply regretted having perpetrated the same, which she was inclined to believe was "on her."

On Friday afternoon Mrs. Boertlein and her husband had a little quarrel, and Mrs. Boertlein suddenly raised a bottle to her lips, swallowed the contents, and fell to the floor, screaming and writhing, as though in great pain. The bottle was labeled "Carbolic acid," but Mrs. Boertlein says it contained only whisky and water. The husband, terribly scared, called a policeman, and the officer called an ambulance. When it arrived, Dr. Levy, the surgeon, did not stop to inquire whether Mrs. Boertlein was joking, but at once took heroic measures to revive her. Mrs. Boertlein tried in vain to explain that she was only joking, the surgeon kept on pumping. Finally the woman was rushed to the hospital, and other heroic measures were taken to save her life. Everybody about the institution seemed to be singularly devoid of humor, and no one saw through Mrs Boertlein's little joke at the time. She was finally laid out on a cot, limp and penitent, while the surgeons and nurses rolled down their sleeves in utter ignorance of having been made the victims of a practical joke.

M

MANY NEW PLAYS ON NEW YEAR'S EVE

Viola Allen, Ada Rehan, E. S. Willard, and the Empire Company in Town.

A New Modern Play by Henry Arthur Jones—"Sweet Nell of Old Drury," "In the Palace of the King," and "David Garrick."

By accident, probably, rather than by design, the last night of the old year had a richer and more varied programme of new plays than almost any other night of the last year of the nineteenth century. Most of the playhouses were well filled, too, as many thousands of New Yorkers and visitors to town went to the theatre early in the evening merely to fill in the time before the festivities attendant upon seeing the old century go down into history.

On that account, because people were in the reverse of a critical mood, and were rather nervously inclined to be jolly no matter what happened, it was a good enough night for the introduction of some of the new things offered, but others must have suffered from lack of the right sort of appreciation.

At the Empire Theatre a new English play by Henry Arthur Jones, "Mrs. Dane's Defense," was acted in an admirable manner. It is a notable work of its kind and deserves the attention of cultivated playgoers. At the Knickerbocker Theatre, Ada Rehan, and the the Theatre Republic Viola Allen appeared in showily mounted plays new to this neighborhood, which had been acted in many other cities and much talked of here beforehand. The actresses and the plays were cordially received.

Edward S. Willard began an engagement at the Garden Theatre in the old play called "David Garrick," "Quo Vadis" was put forward with a new and efficient cast and gorgeous scenery, at the big Academy; a burlesque piece called "The Burgomaster," in which Henry Dixey carried the chief rôle in his accustomed blithe and artistic way, was well received at the Manhattan Theatre, while a new German play was cleverly performed by Mr. Conried's comedians in Irving Place.

"MRS. DANE'S DEFENSE."

The Best of the Recent New Plays Uncommonly Well Acted at the Empire Theatre.

One of the best of modern plays, and by far the best of the new plays recently produced in this city, is "Mrs. Dane's Defense," a social study of modern life, acted at the Empire Theatre last night by the permanent company of that house. The performance could scarcely be bettered, except in one or two of the minor rôles, and the occasion was therefore one for general congratulation. The professional theatregoer rarely has so pleasant an experience to record.

Henry Arthur Jones, the author of the play, has quite surpassed his previous work in verity and logic, if not merely in smart writing, and while perhaps a few habitual carpers will take some delight in pointing out that the last act, as is the case with so many of the best English plays, including "The School for Scandal" and "The Gay Lord Quex," is inferior to its immediate predecessor in interest, if not in constructive skill; yet the denouement reached therein is logical and right. The story does not end with an exclamation point.

Mrs. Dane is a pretty and charming woman, supposed to be "two or three years older" than the fascinating "twenty-seven" to which she confesses, dwelling in a residential suburb of London and received by the "best people." Nothing is known, however, of her past, of the business, fortune, and habits of Mr. Dane, supposedly deceased, of her origin or breeding, and that fact is enough in itself for Mrs. Bulsom-Porter, who is the chief gossip and protector of innocence and virtue, and the most malicious human creature in the neighborhood.

To make matters worse, James Risby, Mrs. Bulsom-Porter's nephew, a foreign attaché, thinks, when he first meets Mrs. Dane, that she is a certain Felicia Hindmarsh, who was responsible some years before for a very disagreeable scandal in Vienna. Afterward he thinks his hasty identification was mistaken, or says he does, but Mrs. Bulsom-Porter has a clue, and she uses it promptly.

Mrs. Dane has become betrothed to Lionel Carteret, the adopted son of Sir Daniel Carteret, a famous lawyer, and he, objecting to the engagement in the beginning, though consenting to it later, is naturally most anxious to clear Mrs. Dane's reputation.

For two acts and half of an another this seems an easy task. Mrs. Bulsom-Porter is left without a bit of proof or a single supported. But having, as she thinks, secured sufficient proof that she is not Felicia Hindmarsh, Sir Daniel then starts in to obtain from Mrs. Dane the means to prove in court if need be that she is, as she says, Lucy Allen.

Here the play reaches this point its "great scene" is at hand, and this is one of the most ingeniously devised and ably developed episodes presented on our stage in a long while.

It is quite as good as the famous bedroom scene of "Lord Quex" in its construction and is vastly more moving in its effect. It culminates, logically, in the woman's confession.

Thereafter, the final discomfiture of the meddling Mrs. Bulsom-Porter, the departure of Mrs. Dane to a new field, with the assurance of friendly assistance if she should need it, and the arrangement, as far as possible, of the amatory interest lead to the denouement.

This hasty summary gives but a poor idea, probably, of the dramatic interest and remarkable emotional strength of "Mrs. Dane's Defense." It is a play of the very best modern type which everybody who is interested in the development of dramatic art must see. While the dialogue contains no smart speeches to quote, it always exactly fits the situation, and is witty, grave, or pathetic, as the mood or emotion dominating the speaker requires. A

There is probably not a superfluous word spoken, excepting a few allotted to the young Scotch lassie who, as everybody surmises when the curtain falls, will be married to the stricken young lover of Mrs. Dane when he gets over his narrow. And that, as mem's passions go in this workaday world, will not be a long while. The Scotch lassie is not interesting.

In the performance the chief honors naturally fell to Margaret Anglin, who had by far the best part in the play and the best of her career. Her acting was remarkable if only for the extraordinary variety of expression it revealed. In the scene of nervous excitement and mental torture of Act III., culminating in a great emotional outburst, she moved the spectators deeply.

The verity and the sensibility of her work were altogether uncommon and the performance will advance her in public esteem. In the minor but desirable qualities of delicacy and grace, and in all its pictorial details, her impersonation was admirable, too. She wore expensive and tasteful dresses so that they seemed to belong to the scene and the situation.

Charles Richman, making his first appearance at the Empire Theatre, was happily placed as Sir Daniel Carteret. In the scope of the examination he "played well up" to his associate, as the saying is, and he was generally equal to all the demands of his graceful and easy rôle, excepting, perhaps, in the speech justifying his stern conduct and the attitude of the world toward the fallen woman in the last act. There, surely, he failed to touch the right key.

Miss Millward, wearing two lovely afternoon gowns, and two surprising evening dresses in the four acts, carried the rôle of an amiable woman of the world of fashion with ease and distinction. The character offered no difficulties she could not easily surmount. Perhaps a tone and manner a shade or two less theatrical would serve better in some of the lighter scenes.

The green spangled dinner gown she exhibited in Act IV. created a rustle and a thrill of astonishment in the audience because of the gorgeousness of its material and the extreme of style shown in its cut.

Ethel Hornick also made a distinct hit as Mrs. Bulsom-Porter, while Joseph Wheelock, Jr., as Lionel, Guy Standing as Risby, and George Osbourne, Jr., as the perjured detective, were all admirable. The setting was beyond cavil, too.

ADA REHAN'S RETURN.

"Sweet Nell of Old Drury" at the Knickerbocker Theatre.

Ada Rehan made her first appearance on the New York stage since the Spring of 1899, at the Knickerbocker Theatre last night. There was a numerous and cordial audience, and the distinguished actress was affectionately welcomed. She appeared as Nell Gwynne, in a four-act piece by Paul Kester, entitled "Sweet Nell of Old Drury," in which the translated Orange Girl of the King's Theatre is exhibited as a heroine of romance, a protector of innocence and virtue, an enemy of wicked Judge Jeffreys, and the most interesting and estimable personage of her hour.

Though many an anecdote of frail Nelly has been put to use by Mr. Kester in concocting this combination of farce and melodrama, and some sort of acquaintance with history is shown in the piece, yet it is certainly not as a study of manners or as a historical picture that "Sweet Nell of Old Drury" will make its way. There are plenty of the bustle and humor essential to a play dealing with the period of the gayest of the Stuarts, however, and an intrigue, which is at least intelligible, is carried out satisfactorily.

In Act I. Nelly, then an orange seller, is represented as cherishing a secret and vain passion for Roger Fairfax, whose favored sweetheart, Lady Olivia, she rescues from rude treatment at the hands of roysterers. She meets the King for the first time, and mistakes him for an ordinary gallant. She tricks Jeffreys, who is personally heading a search for Fairfax, who has incurred his wrath and been branded as a traitor. From the vengeance of Jeffreys Charles II. saves her.

In Act II. Nelly, now a famous actress, is exhibited as a ministering angel, and also as the friend and confidant of Fairfax, whose betrothed is to be married, against her will, to wicked Rochester. She again tricks Jeffreys, and smartly causes him to incur the King's anger. But in the climax of this act fate seems against her and her friends. In the next two acts, however, Nell triumphs over Jeffreys again, and over the enmity of the fashionable women of Charles's Court as well. Obviously, there is no sort of logic and verity to be looked for in such a play, which must be judged only by its entertaining power.

Miss Rehan's performance was received with positively tremendous enthusiasm. She had a dozen curtain calls during the night. Once she brought her author, Paul Kester, out with her, but he declined, modestly, to make the customary speech, saying only "I thank you" and "Good night."

The rôle Nell Gwynne offers the popular actress many opportunities, and her acting was brilliantly effective in every scene. Any detailed account of it is out of the question this morning, but this new entertainment can be cheerfully commended to theatregoers. There is one scene in which Nelly impersonates Jeffreys, wearing his wig and gown, and this was particularly liked.

The piece was handsomely mounted and costumed. The supporting cast was generally proficient, and White Whittlesey was admirable in the rôle of Charles II., excepting in one or two of the lighter episodes, in which his touch was rather heavy.

WELCOME TO WILLARD.

The Favorite Actor in "David Garrick" at the Garden Theatre.

Edward S. Willard made his first appearance in New York in four years at the Garden Theatre last night, acting the title rôle in T. W. Robertson's long-familiar adaptation of "Sullivan," or "Dr. Robin," as it is called on the German stage, entitled "David Garrick." The character has long been esteemed as admirable alike in sentiment and humor, and it would not be worth while at this late day to attempt to disturb a popular prejudice at once so amiable and so harmless.

No youth who sees David Garrick deliberately try to disgust a girl whom he loves and who he knows loves him, by pretending to get drunk in her presence and smashing the family glassware, is likely to go and do the same thing. The stage Garrick is more nearly the "good reading part." If the good actor is at hand, and Mr. Willard has the force, the elegance of bearing, the command of humor and pathos, the dignity, flexibility, and variety of expression the part requires.

He is, of course, delightfully effective in his early scene with Ingot, and he lends all the variety of pictorial and dramatic effect needful to the make-believe drunken scene. To the denotement of Garrick's passion for Ada Ingot he lends seriousness without detracting from the emotional value of his material.

Mr. Willard was received with many manifestations of pleasure, and the performance was frequently applauded. In the bright and taking rôle of Miss Ingot, Maud Hoffman acted as usual with admirable skill and sympathy. Her return to our stage is welcome. The play was all very well acted, and Harry Cane, so long associated with Mr. Willard, received his own little reception from the audience.

IRVING PLACE THEATRE.

A Festive Performance of a Problem Play.

There were low-priced seats and high-priced gowns at the Irving Place Theatre last evening. For the "Sylvestre Feier" there were popular prices and the house was packed to the doors with an enthusiastic audience, the women in handsome, light dresses, which gave a festive appearance to the theatre. The play "Die Strengen Herren," by Blumenthal and Kadelburg, was a play after a German audience's own heart. It was in the nature of a problem play, with the actors chiefly men, only two women, Hedwig Lange and Maria Eisenhut, appearing to inject a little leaven of beauty, love, and distrust.

Gustav von Seffertitz as Gabriel Wernicke, recently elected to the Reichstag, and the leader of a moral reform party which aims to reduce Berlin to a state of Puritanical morality, with other of Herr Conried's commedians as the "party," an unregenerate son-in-law, would-be-son-in-law, and uncle of the family, made a situation which gave room for a lively play of repartee which the author and the players made the most of last evening. The audience was kept in a roar of laughter from the beginning to the end of the play.

The conclusion is reached by the discovery that Herr Wernicke, owing to a mistaken count, has not been elected to the Reichstag. This has the effect of cooling his ardor for moral reform. A banished Venus is restored immediately to the family parlor by the ex-reform man who bestows a kiss upon his son-in-law, the hand of his daughter upon the writer of a so-called wicked play, and his own approval, the reform party is horror-stricken and every one is left at the curtain fall in a condition living happy ever after.

Max Hanseller, Otto Ottbert, and Adolph Zimmerman were in the cast, which was excellent in every particular. Fräulein Lange wore one of those wonderful gowns of hers which fill the feminine mind with envy and admiration because of their skin-like fit, without immodesty or an unpleasant suggestion of underwear beneath.

"Quo Vadis" at the Academy.

Stanislaus Stang's version of "Quo Vadis" was produced in this city at the Academy of Music last evening for the first time since it was produced last season at the New York Theatre. It can be said that smoothness characterized the performance, and the series of magnificent stage pictures which were brought to this country from the Adelphi Theatre, London, and painted by London's best known scenic artists, including W. T. Helmsley, Julian Hicks, W. Harford, and William Perkins, were handled with promptness and precision. Wilton Lackaye played Petronius, Miss Elita Proctor Otis was Coppea, Aubrey Boucicault, Vinicius; Miss Bijou Fernandez, Ligia; Samuel Edwards, Nero; Frank Mordaunt, Glaucus, and Willard Newell, Chilo.

"IN THE PALACE OF THE KING."

Viola Allen Achieves Success in the Play at the Republic.

"In the Palace of the King" last evening served as a medium for the reappearance of Viola Allen in New York. The Republic Theatre was the house selected, and in spite of the attractions elsewhere it was crowded to its capacity. Viola Allen would be very different from other women of the stage if she was not flattered by the warmth of her reception, for it came from the body of the house rather than from the spots at the rear where ushers and claque leaders usually congregate.

It reached what seemed a climax at the end of the fourth scene, a most effective one, in which the heroine unwittingly witnessed the attempted murder of the Cardinal by the King. This was the culmination of a plot created by the King's mistress, the Princess of Eboli, in order to win Prince John for herself and so defeat his plan to wed Dolorsa, with whom the King is in love. But that proved an anti-climax, for the real enthusiasm came following the next scene. In this Dolores finds herself and her lover separated, she powerless to save him from the death to which he had been sentenced by the King in order that the latter might clear himself of the supposed murder.

Don John has made himself the idol of the populace because of his triumphs in the wars against the Moors, from which he had just returned. So at a Court reception in honor of the Prince's return, at which the murder of the Cardinal is announced and Prince John is charged with the crime, she as a last resort appeals to the grandees of Spain there assembled. To them she appeals to rescue Prince John.

Her appeal, first but a whispered one in favor of a man unjustly accused, becomes persuasive, then seductive, and finally, in an outburst in which love for her Prince is coupled deftly with an appeal to their admiration for his heroism and honor and valor as a soldier, she rouses them to such a frenzy that they adopt her battle cry and pour out of the throne room with shouts of "Justice, not treason!"

Admirably worked up as it was, pictorially strong, and theatrically effective, Miss Allen won from her auditors a storm of applause that was generous, heartfelt, and sincere. It was the triumph of the evening and would alone save the play had it no other merits. Those it had, however, and, though the first two scenes necessary to the unfolding of the plot dragged somewhat, the rest went rapidly, smoothly, and prettily enough to make the play a genuine success.

Well written as a whole, superbly mounted, with six very cleverly painted scenes by Ernest Albert, and with rich costumes, "In the Palace of the King" pleased both eye and ear. Miss Allen achieved a personal success without a doubt, for the character fits her well. But Liebler & Co. have furnished her with a supporting company of wonderfully even merit, and whatever of success comes to the production is due in great part to these supporting players as well as to the star.

Robert T. Haines made a thoroughly acceptable Prince John and satisfied the eye as well as making a wholly sufficient lover. Edgar L. Davenport was self-contained in the picturesque Cardinal, and Miss Van Dresser was all that could be desired as the plotting Princess.

William Norris as the Court fool achieved a distinct success in a very difficult part, that was very easy to overact and so ruin. But he was always on the safe side of the dividing line from buffoonery that was so plainly in evidence, and deserved the personal success he won

MANHATTAN THEATRE.

"The Burgomaster," with Mr. Dixey, Pleases a Large Audience.

"The Burgomaster," which was performed for the first time in New York at the Manhattan Theatre last night, is a musical burlesque, or burletta, written by Frank Pixley and provided with some tuneful tunes by Gustav Luders. It had a long run in Chicago, and has since been revised and freshened for performance in this neighborhood, and in its new form has been presented in various near-by towns. Wherefore its performance went smoothly last night. It is exceptionally well-mounted and has the great advantage of the presence of Mr. Henry Dixey, who caricatures, without offense to the prejudices of our oldest families, old Peter Stuyvesant.

In the opening scene the worthy Dutch Governor is represented having much trouble in New Amsterdam. In the second scene he is dug up, wooden leg foremost, from under the Franklin Statue in Printing House Square, and resuscitated, and thenceforward he views modern New York and its environment close at hand as sage and mordant. There is not a suspicion of a new idea in this scheme, but it is well enough for light entertainment, and there are fun and melody enough in the piece to make it "go."

There was one change in the cast—Zelma Rawlston taking the part of Willie Van Autorbilt—for which Eleanor Otis's name down on the programme. The latter's voice failed in New Haven two days ago, and Miss Rawlston took the part on short notice, but very successfully.

Of the men in the cast outside of Mr. Dixey, who was as humorous and nimble as ever, Knox Wilson carried off the honors of the evening, he scoring a great personal success. Raymond Hitchcock was amusing as E. Booth Talkington, an actor, and James T. Kelly was good in a small Irish part.

The chorus was well drilled, the costumes were beautiful, and the scenery left nothing to be desired, and presented with vim and dash, the piece ought to enjoy a long and successful run.

MME. SEMBRICH'S CONCERT.

An Operatic Entertainment of an Old-Fashioned Sort.

Mme. Marcella Sembrich, the great lyric soprano, who is about to depart into the expectant West on a tour with a small operatic company, gave a concert at Carnegie Hall last night for the purpose of introducing the members of her organization. Her previous entertainments—their memory will never die—have been song recitals, in which unaided she has held fast under the spell of her matchless art audiences of several thousand persons; but "a concert road" she will give performances of opera with the aid of the artists heard last night. In this city, however, it was not necessary for her to embark on the stormy seas of lyric drama, and so the entertainment of last evening was one of those old-fashioned operatic concerts which used to fill us all with joy in our early days. We have grown older and more fastidious, but whatever Marcella Sembrich does is a delight, and so her concert had a large and happy audience.

The members of her company whom she introduced last night were Signors Rossi, de Lara, Bonnard, and Bada. Of these, Mr. Bonnard, a baritone with a light and ready voice, has been here before. He is an acceptable, though not a great, singer. Mr. de Lara is the tenor of the organization. He proved to be a singer with a fresh, strong voice of pure tenor quality and very agreeable to hear. He sings with taste and will doubtless be very much in demand in addition to her visitors. As for Mme. Sembrich herself, she was in magnificent voice last night, and sang with all the plenitude of her beautiful tone and with all the resources of her unsurpassed art. Signor Bevignani conducted a respectable orchestra, and the audience plainly enjoyed the entertainment. Operatic concerts do not call for detailed comment at this period of the world's existence. It is sufficient to say that the selections were pleasing and well adapted to a display of the best qualities of the various singers. Mme. Sembrich's solo numbers were "Ah, fors e lui," from "La Traviata," and the Strauss vocal waltz, "Voce di primavera." She was also heard in a duet from "Don Pasquale" with Signor Bensaude.

OPERA IN ENGLISH FAILS

Last Performance of Grau-Savage Company Jan. 25.

MANY DATES ARE CANCELED

Organization Was to Have Performed in This City Again in the Spring —Mr. Grau's Views.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—The end of the Metropolitan English Grand Opera Company is announced. Managing Director Henry W. Savage, tonight at the Auditorium Theatre, where the company is appearing, gave out the information that when Washington is reached and the engagement there is filled, the company will be disbanded and all further dates will be cancelled. The dissolution will take place on Jan. 25. Notice was given to the members of the company to-day, and with nearly a months' preparation for the end, none of them expects to be long out of an engagement.

The company, when it completes its engagement in Chicago, will appear in Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, and then Washington. The other cities that have been expecting the troupe will be disappointed, for after the engagement in the capital the company will cease to exist.

"There is nothing sensational in the disbandment of the company," said Mr. Savage to-night. "The Directors of the organization have decided that it should be disbanded because the percentage of earnings is not great enough to warrant us in taking any great chances. After leaving Washington our jumps between towns would have been long ones, and the uncertainties of travel in Winter are too serious.

"We have a highly expensive organization. We are carrying 165 people on our salary list; we transport them and our scenery in a special train of nine cars, and there are a hundred and one other expenses that have to be met."

When asked if the same men would launch another company on the road next year, Mr. Savage was non-committal. He felt sure, he said, that another company would be formed next year, but declined to say whether the same men would be behind the venture. He thought the experience gained by the members of the present company would be of great benefit to the company next season. He remarked that several operas proved favorites, while others were not at all well received.

The first intimation that opera in English with an expensive organization would not prove successful was when, about Oct. 20, the prices for seats were materially reduced in all parts of the Metropolitan Opera House.

A further reduction was later made in the upper part of the house, and all kinds of inducements were offered to gain the patronage of the public. They were, however, of no avail.

During the two weeks' engagement on the Pacific Coast, when Maurice Grau was also in the West, the wires were kept busy with messages between Mr. Grau and Mr. Savage as to what course it would be best to pursue, as the enterprise was losing large amounts at every performance.

It was then urged by Mr. Grau that it would be best to terminate the enterprise by giving all the artists and musicians two weeks' notice. However it was discovered that this could not be done, owing to the contracts with the musicians, whereby it was stipulated that four weeks' notice must be given.

When this was called to the attention of Mr. Grau he consented to continue the organization, without giving notice to the members of it, as far as Chicago, trusting that the two weeks in that city and the remaining part of the tour would prove more successful.

But the success anticipated did not materialize, as business in Chicago, it is said, has been decidedly poor with the exception of one performance in which Fanchon Thompson sang.

Mr. Grau, when seen in his office at the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday afternoon, said: "My first information as to the closing down of the English Opera Company in Washington on Jan. 25 was from some of the principal members of the company made telegraphic application to me for positions in the Grau organization.

"The direction of the affairs of the English company was entirely in the hands of Mr. Savage, and, when he would confer with me on matters of importance, he practically had the entire company under his control.

"This can best be explained when I say that I have all I can possibly do looking after the details of the Maurice Grau Opera and Bernhardt-Coquelin Companies.

"It is very unfortunate that the public will not patronize such performances, even at the prices at which this organization has been giving them.

"However, I continue to maintain, as I did from the outset, that English opera by a company with an important individuality in it would prove successful to-day.

"It has been plainly demonstrated in this case that a large and powerful chorus and extra fine mise-en-scene are not sufficient to carry an operatic organization, nevertheless I will say that the class of operas and talent furnished by this company were cheap at the prices which prevailed at the close of the season.

"What Mr. Savage's future plans are I cannot say."

When asked if any of the principal members of the company would become identified with the Maurice Grau Company, Mr. Grau said:

"What the future has in store for me I am in no position to say, but from the present outlook I can say they will not sing with me next season. I am carrying more people now than I absolutely require."

The Metropolitan English Opera Company has been in existence about ten months. It was the outcome of interests consolidated between Henry W. Savage of the Castle Square Opera Company and Maurice Grau.

In the early part of March the announcement was made that Messrs. Grau and Savage had joined issues and founded the English Opera Company, with Mr. Grau and Mr. Savage as managers. The operas and principal singers. The same month the company was incorporated under the laws of New Jersey, with a capital of $100,000.

These preliminary details having been arranged, Mr. Savage sailed for Europe in the latter part of May, and while there visited all the principal cities on the Continent in quest of English-speaking artists for the company. With the assistance of Mr. Grau, who was in London at the time, a number of artists were secured.

Upon Mr. Savage's return to this country it was announced that the season in this city would begin at the Metropolitan Opera House on Oct. 1, and continue until Dec. 15, when the entire organization would go on tour, opening Dec. 24 in Chicago, and staying there two weeks.

The company would then visit a number of large cities on their homeward trip, and would begin in this city.

During the eleven weeks in this city the company gave nineteen different operas, as follows: "Faust," "Tannhäuser," "Mignon," "Carmen," "Il Trovatore," "Lohengrin," "Aida," "The Bohemian Girl," "Romeo and Juliet," "Cavalleria Rusticana," "Pagliacci," "Martha," "The Milan," "Huguenots," "Pinafore," "Lucia," and "La Traviata."

Of these, Mr. Savage said that the opening performance, the first ever given in English of "Carmen," "The Huguenots," and "Aida" in Washington on Jan. 21 the appearance of the company in the following cities will successively be expected:

OPERATION OF THE NEW FINANCIAL LAW

Government Has Saved Over $10,000,000 by Refunding Bonds.

$439,000,000 in Old Securities Exchanged for New 2's—395 National Banks Organized Since March.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Refunding operations under the financial act of March 14 last close to-day, the books of the Treasury Department having been open to the exchange of bonds for a period of nine and one-half months. In discussing the subject to-day, Assistant Secretary Vanderlip said:

"The refunding has been successful from every standpoint. Holders of the old bonds, 3s, 4s, and 5s of 1908, 1907, and 1904, respectively, have voluntarily offered for exchange into 2s approximately $439,000,000 out of $839,000,000, leaving outstanding of this part of the interest-bearing public debt less than one-half the amount subject to the law. Exact figures will not be known for several days, as some bonds are still in transit.

"The net saving of interest to the Government by these transactions is substantially $10,700,000. This saving has been accomplished by the payment now of the sum of $42,300,000, which is really an anticipation of $52,000,000 interest which would have had to be paid within the next eight years, in case the old bonds were permitted to run to maturity. The difference is the net saving.

"The 4 per cents. of 1907 have been exchanged in greater amount than any other class, their total up to and including Dec. 29 being $254,000,000. Of the 3 per cents. of 1908, $96,000,000 were exchanged, and of the 5 per cents. of 1904, $70,500,000.

"The Secretary of the Treasury still has authority under the law to resume refunding should he deem it proper to do so. Whether or not refunding will be resumed depends largely upon whether the interests of the Treasury seem to require it at any time in the future.

"The public debt is now in far better condition for retirement than ever before. It may well be doubted whether the Treasury within the next eight years, during which the bonds subject to refundment were to mature, could have discharged that total indebtedness of $839,000,000. The present sinking fund requirements are substantially $50,000,000 a year, and the retirement of the public debt can be more easily accomplished at the rate of $50,000,000 for each of the next eight years than if the Secretary of the Treasury had been confronted with the problem of disposing of an average of $100,000,000 a year.

"The success of the operation is due mainly to two causes, one being a well-fortified Treasury, and therefore magnificent public credit; the other, and less sentimental reason, being the greater advantage which the new 2 per cent. consols offer to National banks as a basis for the security of circulating notes. The banks of the country have exchanged $231,900,000 of the old bonds for the new ones, while individual holders have exchanged the balance.

"There is another feature of the operations of the financial act which merits attention, and that is the effect of the law upon National banks. From March 14 to date 395 new banks have been organized, of which 290 were with a capital stock less than $50,000, and 115 with a capital stock over that amount. The aggregate capital of the former class was $7,375,000, and of the latter $12,650,000, a total addition to banking capital of $20,025,000. Bank note circulation in the meantime has increased by the sum of $35,253,000.

"The department is gratified to note that the principal increase in the smaller class banks is throughout the Western and Southwestern States, sections which heretofore were unable to accept the benefits of the National Bank act, owing to its illiberal provisions."

FESTIVITIES AT TUXEDO.

Society Attends the Annual New Year's Eve Ball—Younger Set at the Domino Ball.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO, N. Y., Dec. 31.—The Tuxedo Club annual New Year's eve ball took place here to-night. Extensive preparations had been made by the members of the club to make this year's ball more successful than those of previous years. The club houses and annexes have been filled with crowds of people over Saturday and Sunday, and not a room remained vacant. The Domino Ball this year attracted more attention among the younger class.

After dinner the guests began to arrive at the clubhouse, and at 10:30 o'clock, when dancing began, the ballroom was thronged with the masked gathering. At 12 o'clock the usual programme was carried out. The punch bowl was brought in, all filled their glasses, removed their masques, and joined in singing "Auld Lang Syne." From the stage there dropped a frame with "1901" in numerous electric lights, then all hailed the new century. There were no favors and no cotillion. Supper was served in the dining room at 1 o'clock, after which dancing was resumed.

During the evening many dinners were given at the club and cottages, one of which was that of Mr and Mrs Frederic H. Benedict, at the clubhouse. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs Richard Mortimer, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic De P Foster, Mr. and Mrs. James Brown Lord, Mr. and Mrs. Newbold Leroy Edgar, Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Pleasure Planning for 1901 has created an outburst of

and has been accorded a popularity which have centered upon it the attention of the civilized world.

Royalty, including most of the crowned heads of Europe, and the highest musical authorities have united with the general public, not only in expressions of admiration, but in purchasing Pianolas for their entertainment and pleasure.

The history of the Pianola has no parallel. The marvelous performances of this dextrous little piano-player, coupled with the need of the great music-loving world for an instrument—an assistant—a means—by which any one can produce upon the piano the music for which he cares, is the reason for the promptness of its appreciation by the world at large.

There are millions of pianos distributed throughout the world. There are tens of thousands of compositions which the whole world should enjoy. Yet how many of these pianos bring forth this music? A very few. These few play a still smaller fraction of what constitutes the musical literature of the piano.

And there is but one reason—the music is hidden behind a technic, the mastery of which but few people have time to acquire.

There is no investment which you can make which will pay as large a dividend in pleasure as will the purchase of a Pianola. It will give you the full use of your piano, the benefit of the genius of all the great composers and the enjoyment which alone comes with producing music yourself.

PRICE $250.

Can be bought by moderate monthly payments if desired.

The Pianola has changed all this, has slipped the bolt, so to speak, unlocking the keys of the piano and performing this same technic.

With its aid any one can play any piano, and play upon it anything he desires to hear—the most difficult classic as easily as the simplest accompaniment. He has all the pleasure of hand-playing because he controls the expression.

Figure it out yourself from a personal standpoint. You have a piano. You know what you paid for it—how many of your family play it and the aggregate repertory of them all. You know whether you would enjoy playing it yourself, and how many others would like to play it. Every day you learn of some new selection which you would like to hear, but which no member of your household knows how to play.

When you realize that for $250.00 additional you can obtain the Pianola which will enable you, yourself, to play upon your piano everything ever written for that instrument, its purchase must appeal to you as a practicable and profitable investment.

You owe it to yourself to hear the Pianola if it is possible for you to do so, if not, to send for detailed description. Catalogue mailed upon request.

pages of lists of people and houses to be open to callers on Jan. 1. The Star to-night prints about three columns of names of individuals receiving and another column of persons receiving with organizations of a semi-social kind.

The list of people "at home" contains very few names of those at all conspicuous in society. A short list of people not at home has a comparatively large proportion of familiar names. The receiving custom has about expired here, where it was more tenacious than in New York. The Cabinet families will keep up the practice, but it is early becoming more oppressive to the wives of Cabinet officers, who are annually subjected to the task of welcoming a vast throng of callers inspired chiefly by curiosity and hunger or thirst.

RETURN OF JEAN DE RESZKE.

The Famous Singer Welcomed at the Metropolitan Opera House.

The experienced young gentlemen who sell the tickets of admission to the performances at the Metropolitan Opera House fell into a habit of saying in the last days before the season began that the real opening night of the Winter would be that on which Mr. Jean de Reszke, the popular tenor, made his reappearance. Mr de Reszke did not visit these shores last Winter, and the public, having reconciled itself to that fact, got on without him as well as it could. But Mr. Grau thought that the gentleman's presence was necessary to the welfare of the enterprise this Fall, and so engaged him again. Meanwhile Mr. de Reszke had been through a season of great tribulation in London, where he had vainly tried to keep his engagements with the public while suffering from a severe attack of influenza, and had been rewarded by the world-wide publication of a story that he had lost his voice. Consequently, when he made his reappearance at the Metropolitan Opera House last night he was greeted by an immense audience with every manifestation of pleasure at his return and interest in his vocal welfare.

It was as the Schwanritter in Wagner's "Lohengrin" that the famous singer chose to renew his acquaintance with the public, and his first appearance, floating down the Scheldt in the shallop drawn by the property swan was the signal for a burst of applause, which was with difficulty stilled soon enough to permit his action to the bird of transportation to be heard. Those who are familiar with Mr de Reszke's singing need not be told that his first measures are no demonstration of the state of his voice on any occasion. His voice is one which needs warming up, as its tones at the outset of a performance are usually veiled. But last night, though the famous singer was palpably suffering most painfully from nervousness, he sang the farewell with delicious beauty of tone and that consummate mastery of phrasing and declamation which make all of every vocal utterance a delight. Throughout the first act his voice sounded clear and fresh, and the most anxious could trace no evidence of weakness, unless they chose to accept as such the unusual care displayed in the attack of difficult tones. But if their memories are good they will remember that Mr. Jean de Reszke never sang recklessly, and that in recent seasons he has always shown a wise and artistic recognition of the fact that he must trust not in strength, but in the perfection of his art.

At the close of the first act the enthusiasm of the audience, which filled every seat and box, and packed all the standing room such an audience as the house has not seen since Mr. de Reszke's debut, broke out in a paean of tumultuous applause and cheers. The curtain was raised many times, and finally the leading singers appeared before it. At the second curtain call, Mme. Nordica tactfully slipped off the stage and left Mr. de Reszke alone. There was no doubt then as to whom the audience had gone to welcome. Mr de Reszke was hailed with a storm of cheers and bravos, and when he retired the calls continued till he was forced to respond to them again. It may as well be stated here that at the ends of the other two acts there were also scenes of great enthusiasm.

For the rest of the performance Mr. de Reszke was, as he has been since he studied the rôle in German, an ideal Lohengrin. His performance has been so often described in these columns that it is unnecessary to recount its beauties. The main question has been answered. The story that the greatest male singer of our time had reached the end of his career was proved to be untrue. In the course of nature he will not sing to us much longer, and we may for the present rejoice that he can still delight us. The other members of the cast were Mme. Nordica as Elsa, Mme. Schumann-Heink as Ortrud, Mr. Bertram as Telramund, Mr. Muhlmann as the Herald, and Mr. Edouard de Reszke. Of these the soprano and the bass were interested with the nervousness of the tenor before his appearance, and sang out of tune. But when Lohengrin had arrived he seemed to straighten out other matter than the accusation of Elsa, and the lyric work of all the artists was thenceforward what might have been expected of them. Mr. Damrosch conducted the performance with judgment, and the orchestra discharged its duties efficiently.

NEW CENTURY PARTY IN LENOX.

Dance at Mrs. Stokes's—Skating but No Sleighing as Yet.

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Dec. 31.—Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes gives an informal dance at Shadow Brook to-night to usher in the new century for her house party of thirty which came up with her from New York, and which will return on Wednesday. All the members of the family are here except Mr Stokes. Anson Stokes, Jr., preached at Trinity Church on Sunday. Among the visitors to Lenox, who are at the dance to-night, are Miss Evelyn Sloane, John Sloane, Jr., Mr. Wyckoff, the Misses Parsons, George Crocker, Jr., and Miss Emily Rogers.

The young people are having a jolly time and have been skating to-day on Mankeenac Lake. They also took long walks, as there is not snow enough for sleighing.

Mr. John E. Parsons and his daughters are staying at the hotel for the present. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Astor Bristed are at Lakeside. They will go to Mexico in February for the remainder of the Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Whistler of Baltimore are also among the Winter visitors to Lenox.

George W. Folsom and family are still at Sunny Ridge.

Mrs Folsom will give a dance for the young people who are members of the various house parties to-morrow evening.

POLICE AT VANDERBILT WEDDING.

Mrs. French Arranges for Officers at the Church and Harbourview.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Dec. 31. Wedding gifts for Miss Elsie French, who on Monday, Jan. 14, will become Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, have now begun to arrive in large numbers. They are not kept long at Harbourview, however, but are hurried off to the Aquidneck National Bank vault.

Mrs French arranged with Chief of Police Richards yesterday for officers at Harbourview and the church on the wedding day. Chief Richards went to Harbourview to talk the matter over at Mrs French's request. The interest in the wedding is so great among the people at Newport that a rush is naturally expected at the church, though it is not believed that anything disorderly will occur. It is thought that the large crowd that is sure to be there will appreciate the fact that the church is not the largest in the world, and that the friends of the French and Vanderbilt families who will be here will be numerous enough to fill it.

Mr. Vanderbilt it is learned is not expected at Newport till Monday next, when he will arrive with his mother and sister. His week's tarry here will be a very busy one.

Dan Eaton, with Mrs Eaton a sister of Miss French, returned here from New York this evening, and will remain until after the wedding.

IN WASHINGTON SOCIETY.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. The engagement is announced of Miss Esther Hunt, daughter of the late Richard M. Hunt of New York, to George M. Woolsey of London, eldest son of Mrs. Edward M. Paddleford of this city. Miss Hunt arrived in Washington yesterday for a visit to Mrs. Paddleford at her K Street residence, where the formal announcement of the engagement will be made. The wedding will take place in New York Feb. 16, at the house of the bride's mother, 178 Madison Avenue. The future residence of the young people to be in London.

The engagement is announcement of Miss Nellie Reeder, daughter of Commander William H. Reeder, United States Navy, of the schoolship St. Mary, to Mr. Ernest Blandy of England. The marriage will take place at St. John's Church the second week in February.

The series of Christmas dances came to a close to-night with a beautiful ball at Rauscher's by Mr and Mrs George Bloomer, entertaining 250 young people, friends of their daughters.

SON'S DISGRACE KILLED HIM.

Physician Says Father of Young Lenso, Who Was Arrested on Charge of Theft, Died of Broken Heart.

"I shall never live down this disgrace," said John Lenso of New Durham, N. J., when informed two weeks ago that his nineteen-year-old son had been arrested for stealing. The father's prediction came true. He died yesterday at his home, on the Hackensack Plank Road, and the physician who attended him declared that a broken heart was his only affliction.

Lenso was forty-eight years of age, and enjoyed good health up to the time of his son's arrest. The youth was arrested for complicity in the robbery of the office of F. S. Dix, a local coal merchant.

The father kept brooding over his son's disgrace, and refused to eat. Yesterday his wife tried to break his long fast by preparing a tempting dinner. He left her preparing the meal in the kitchen and retired to his room. When the dinner was served she went to call him, and found him lying dead on the bed.

The Action Against Dr. J. J. Kindred.

Justice Leventritt, in the Supreme Court, yesterday, granted an order to show cause, returnable to-morrow, under which George C. Spann, the lawyer who claims $25,000 damages from Dr. J. J. Kindred for alleged negligent treatment in a sanitarium, will have to show why the order for an inquest by a Sheriff's jury to assess damages should not be set aside. Dr. Kindred alleges that he was never served with the summons and complaint, and knows nothing about the case.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The new year and the new century find New York society out of town. Since the good old day when New Year's calling was the feature of the beginning of another twelve months, and when the circle of society was so small that the agreeable but provincial custom could flourish, New Year's Day has been a dull one in the city. There were few who could escape to the country yesterday of the men and women of leisure who did not do so, and more will leave town this morning.

***

Notwithstanding the exodus from town recently, some of those who went out of town last week returned yesterday for a few hours' shopping. Among these were Mrs. Fish and Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs. Many, however, took late trains back to Tuxedo, Hempstead, Westchester, Lakewood, and other resorts. Never has a New Year's Eve been celebrated with so many dances out of town as was that of yesterday. There were balls at Tuxedo, Dongan Hills, S. I., and Morristown, and dances at Ardsley, Knollwood, and other country clubs. At the numerous house parties in all the suburbs there was also much informal dancing. Among those who are entertaining house parties at Tuxedo over the New Year's holidays are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mortimer, Mr. and Mrs. Grenville Kane, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederic Tams, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic H. Betts, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Garrison and Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Hyde. The Tuxedo Ball, of which a story appears elsewhere, at Tuxedo last evening was very successful. The ball at the Richmond County Country Club, on Staten Island, was the largest and most successful in the club's history. The ball at Morristown was the first of the regular assemblies, but assumed more importance and was larger in consequence of its falling on New Year's Eve.

***

Mrs. J. Lenox Banks, Mr. will entertain at her country residence, Cedarhurst, at New Hamburg to-day a party of young people at luncheon. These will leave the city on the Brooklyn A. M train and will return at 5 o'clock P. M., in time to attend the dance to be given this evening by Mrs. Morgan Grinnell, at her residence, 38 East Fiftieth Street.

***

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., has taken practically the whole of the second and third floors at Sherry's for her dinner dance of to-morrow night. The dinner is to be served in the large ballroom at twelve or more tables at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Vanderbilt, assisted by Mrs. Ogden Goelet and Miss May Goelet will receive the guests in the suite of rooms on the Forty-fourth Street side of the building and adjoining the large ballroom. There will be constructed an arbor in grapes and floral decorations. The large ballrooms will have large reception halls and along the walls, and the tables will be beautifully decorated. After dinner the guests will descend to the small ballroom on the second floor, where the cotillion will be danced.

***

The first of the five cotillions of the season of 1901 was danced last night at Sherry's. The patronesses of this set of dances are Mesdames Schuyler Quackenbush, Everett P. Wheeler, Walter Cook, Francke H. Bosworth, Alfred Corning Clarke, William G. Choate, Charles Havens Hoppe, and Charles Finney Cox. The dance last night was largely attended, and the favors were appropriate to the holiday season. Among the dancers were the Misses Lucille Bacon, Madeline Cary, Ruth Cox, Melerie Critten, Mary Wagstaff, Isabel Fowler, Lillian Carpenter, Cornelia Merrill, and Prentice Strong, Benjamin Sheffield, Harry M. Brookfield, Walter Grace, Charles B. Gunn, Richard Elliott, Howland Brown, Stephen Tilton, W. W. Southack, Ethelbert Law, Aymar Emory, Jr., and W. D. Thompson. The class numbers some 125 members.

***

The list of large dances or private balls is increased almost daily, and the latest hostess in the field is Mrs. Clarence Mackay, who, it is said, will give a ball at the Astoria early in February, probably on Friday night, Feb. 1. Mr. and Mrs. Mackay are occupying the Cutting house, 99 Madison Avenue, this Winter.

***

Mrs. George Crocker of 1 East Sixty-fourth Street, will give on Tuesday, Jan. 8, a large reception at her residence for her two daughters, the Misses Alice and Emma Rutherford. Miss Emma Rutherford has only recently returned from Europe.

***

Mrs. Daniel Butterfield has sent out cards for two musicales to be held at her residence, 616 Fifth Avenue, on the afternoons of Wednesday, Jan. 9 and 16.

***

Mrs. Ramsay Turnbull (Miss Martha Benedict) has issued cards for two receptions at her residence, 87 Park Avenue, for Wednesday Jan. 9 and 16.

***

The engagements are announced of Edward L. Child of Philadelphia and Miss Lillian Rushmore Cornell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Cornell of 316 West Eighty-first Street, this city, and of C. Irving Patterson of Brooklyn and Miss Annie Haight Cooper, daughter of Dr. James E. Cooper and Mrs. Cooper of Shrewsbury, N. J., and a sister of Mrs. James M. Brown of this city.

***

The engagement has been announced of Richard Bayley Post, son of the Rev. Richard B. Post and Mrs. Post, and Miss Silvie Livingston Strong, daughter of the late James H. Strong. Miss Strong's mother was Miss Georgiana Berryman, and through her mother she is the cousin of Mrs. Casimir de Rham, Mrs. Lorillard Spencer, and Mrs. Egerton Winthrop, Jr. Her elder sister, Miss Henrietta Strong, married Daniel Fearing of Newport.

***

Another engagement recently announced is that of Clive Pringle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roderick Pringle of Canada and a nephew of Lady Dillon, and Miss Rebecca Brooks Cornell.

***

Mrs. J. Campbell Smith (Miss Amy G. Smith) will give a large reception at her residence, 29 West Sixty-ninth Street, early in January.

***

The many people who have Summer homes at Southampton, L. I., will be interested to learn that Samuel L. Parrish, who has done so much for the improvement of that town, and who gave to it two years ago an art gallery, &c., proposes to convert the old Village Hall into a clubhouse for young men and women. Mr. Parrish will contribute as his share the building as it now stands, which will be remodeled on plans drawn by Mr. Atterbury, and will be rented to the club to be organized for about 5 per cent. interest on the necessary expense of alteration. This, together with the cost of maintenance, will amount to about $1,000 per year, so that 200 members at average dues of $5 per year would justify the undertaking of the work. The lower story of the hall will be fitted up for rooms, and there will be rooms where games can be played and probably a small gymnasium. The management of the club will be in the hands of a self-perpetuating board of governors.

***

If Count von Goetzen is made the Governor of German East Africa, as is proposed by the German Government, the Countess von Goetzen, formerly Miss May Stanley Loney of Baltimore, will have relatively as high a social place as Lady Curzon, formerly Miss Leiter of Chicago, and now the Vicereine of India. She will be the first lady among 40,000,000 of people. Miss Loney married for her first husband the late William Matthew Lay. When he died he left her a large fortune. In 1897 Mrs Lay met Count von Goetzen at a New Year's dinner given by the late Senator Brice in Washington. He was then Military Attaché of the German Embassy, and had a short time previous returned from a remarkable expedition into Darkest Africa. Mrs Lay was married to the Count on Jan 4 1898, in Washington, in the presence of a distinguished company. The Count and Countess took a wedding trip to California, and on their return to Washington the Count was called to Berlin by his Government. Count von Goetzen's great-grandfather was an aide de camp to Frederick the Great. He is a distinguished officer and diplomat, in addition to being a man in science and an explorer.

***

Mrs John W. Mackay will sail on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse for Cherbourg on Thursday. Immediately on her arrival in France Mrs Mackay will proceed to Rome. The Teutonic, which sails for Liverpool to-morrow, and which, with the New York, which also sails to-morrow, will be the last swift Atlantic liners with the exception of the Kaiser Wilhelm on Thursday leaving this port for three weeks, has booked among others Stephen Brown, Mrs and Miss Day, A. L. Tennyson d'Eyncourt, Mrs W. W. Gordon, Mr and Mrs Edward T. Howe, Mrs. H. J. Maynard, James P. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ritchie and Miss Ritchie, H. Scott Russell, and Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Sanderson.

***

Dr. Everett M. Culver and Mrs. Culver gave in their apartment, 175 West Fifty-ninth Street, last evening an informal reception, to which some forty or fifty friends were asked. There were cards for those who wished to play and music for others who preferred to dance. Later there was a belated supper, and the new year was welcomed in.

***

Mr. and Mrs. J. Pierrepont Edwards of 12 East Forty-ninth Street gave a theatre party last evening for their débutante daughter, Miss Dorothy Edwards. There were eight young people in the party, and the play seen was "Janice Meredith." After the play Mr. and Mrs. Edwards gave a supper at 12 o'clock at their residence, and the young people watched the new year in.

***

The holidays at Tuxedo have been unusually lively and gay. The main clubhouse, the Winter club, The Racquet and Tennis Club, and the annexes, have been filled with numerous guests throughout the week, and many of those who came from town for the Preston-Hoffman wedding remained over for the new year and the ball. All those who still occupy cottages in the Park entertained largely during the latter part of the week, and many dinners were given. One of the most interesting house parties of the week was that of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Tuck French, many guests having been invited to meet Miss Elsie French and her mother, Mrs. Francis Osmond French, in whose honor a dinner was given on Thursday. Alfred Vanderbilt was expected to be present, but was detained in New York. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. Frederic Tams, Col. and Mrs. Eaton, Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Le Roy, Jr., and Mrs Le Roy, mother of Mrs. French.

***

Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Pierson, Jr., who now occupy their new house at the south end of the large lake at Tuxedo, entertained a number of friends at dinner Saturday evening. Among those were Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Fish, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tuckerman, Miss Miles, and Miss Grace Hoop. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mortimer gave a dinner Friday evening to numerous guests, invited to meet Mr. and Mrs. William Cothout, their guests throughout the week. Mr. and Mrs. R. Fulton Cutting opened their cottage on Tower Hill for the holidays, and Mrs. Charles Hoffman also opened The Breeze for the wedding of her son. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Alexander, who are now stopping at the clubhouse, gave a dinner of fifteen covers Saturday evening. Mrs Henry Munroe gave a children's party to the children of Tuxedo Park Friday at the Barbey's cottage, at which were present the Misses Kane, Master Herbert Eaton, Master Francis Ormond French, the Misses French, Master Clearmont Barnwell, and others.

***

The skating on Weewah Lake Sunday afternoon was much enjoyed. The most graceful skaters were Miss Hull and the Count Montaiquon. Other graceful skaters were Miss Alice Preston, Miss Potter, Mrs William R. Garrison, Mrs. George Griswold, Miss Sybil Kane, Miss Violet Cruger, Mrs. Richard Mortimer, and Mrs. Suffern Tailer. Some of those now at the Tuxedo Club are Mrs. Henry Redley, Miss Redley, Mr. A. W. Boultbee, Mr and Mrs. Archibald K. Mackay, Mr. and Mrs. George Henry Warren, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, Miss McCook, Mr. R. W. G. Welling, Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., Mr. and Mrs J. F. D. Lanier, Mr. and Mrs George W. Forsyth, Mr. Joseph Moore, Mr. and Mrs G. AMERICAN SILK INDUSTRY.

Conditions Favored the Consumers in the Year Just Ended.

Franklin Allen, Secretary of the Silk Association of America, in a review of the American silk industry in 1900, shows that the conditions throughout the year have favored the buyer and consumer of silk goods. He says that silks have been sold in the retail stores at prices below the cost of manufacturing. This fact is attributed by Mr. Allen to the Presidential election and the competition among mill owners, as well as the heavy auction sales early in the Autumn.

A table, prepared by Mr. Allen, showing the movement and cost of raw silk in the United States for the past two years, is as follows:

Value of raw silk, imported	77,614	$6,123
Number of pounds	11,163,317	9,210,700
Invoice value	$42,200,000	$33,000,000
Spun silk, imported, pounds	2,070,000	*1,000,000

Dane Arrested on Arrival Here.

Martin H. Pedersen, a Dane, who arrived on the Holland-American steamship Statendam yesterday, was arrested and detained on his arrival by the immigration authorities, at the instance of the Danish Consul. He is charged with embezzling 24,000 crowns from a lumber corporation in Denmark of which he was the manager. He traveled in the steerage, and appears to be a very intelligent, as well as well-educated, man. He looked on the Statendam as Gustav Gerlupfen.

HEROD

A Tragedy in Three Acts, by

STEPHEN PHILLIPS

Author of "Paolo and Francesca."

Price, $1.50.

"Herod" was produced at Her Majesty's Theatre, London, Oct. 31, by Mr. Beerbohm Tree. Following are some comments by the London press:

THE TIMES:

"That Mr. Phillips has the poet's imagination all who have read 'Paolo and Francesca' must be well aware. Has he the imagination of the dramatist? That was the first question raised by his 'Herod,' and the performance of this tragedy last night leaves no doubt about the answer. Mr. Phillips has not only the technic, the 'fingering,' but also the bold, visualising imagination of the dramatist.

"Here, then, is a noble work of dramatic imagination, dealing greatly with great passions; multicolored and exquisitely musical. Though it is 'literature' throughout, it is never the literature of the closet, but always the literature of the theatre, with the rapid action, the marked contrasts, the fierce beating passion, the broad effects proper to the theatre. In other words, Mr. Stephen Phillips is not only a poet, and a rare poet, but that still rarer thing, a dramatic poet."

THE DAILY NEWS:

"The drama possesses the sovereign quality of movement, and it is even prodigal in the matter of dramatic situations. To this we have to add that its dialogue speaks the language of passion, and is rarely encumbered by mere descriptive or reflective passages."

THE OUTLOOK:

"Mr. Phillips has done a blank-verse play which is not only poetry of the purest water, but dramatic poetry. In 'Herod' he has given us a poem of rare beauty and distinction, rich in music and color, and in striking thought and image. If he should never write another line, his 'Herod' will remain a pillar of dramatic imagination on which its author and the manager who produced it, and the public who applauded it, may each and all look back with pride."

THE SPECTATOR:

"The purely dramatic quality of the play is surprisingly high. There remains the literary quality of the verse, and here, too, we can speak with few reservations. Mr. Phillips's blank verse is flexible, melodious, and majestic."

STOWAWAY'S TRICK FAILED.

Curt Koralik, a Belgian stowaway, was among the foreign contingent landed at the Immigration Station on Ellis Island on Sunday. He came across on the American liner New York, and was evidently well posted on the laws in reference to the admittance of persons of foreign nativity to this country, for he lost no time on his arrival at the island in devising a plan by which he could elude the Immigration Inspectors and land. He accordingly began looking around, and spying a pair of cast-off overalls, appropriated them to himself and hid them in the detention pen.

Yesterday morning Koralik donned the overalls, and, finding a bucket of white-wash, spattered some of the wash over his blouse, walked around a few minutes as if he owned the station, and then walked out of the pen. He followed the admitted immigrants down the improvised board walk to the immigration ferryboat John G. Carlisle, and walked aboard. This was as far as the deception went, however. Word of his escape was brought to the boat, he was quickly identified, taken back to the station, and told to get ready for his departure on the New York next Wednesday.

Two other stowaways on the New York were Ferdinand Hover, who says he is an American citizen, and John Prigge, a discharged fireman of the New York, who is a native of Belgium.

BACHELOR'S ROOMS INVADED.

Two Colored Women Walked Into Mr. Johnson's Apartment Uninvited and Stole His Valuables.

After visiting friends on Saturday night Charles W. Johnson, who has a suite in the bachelor's apartment house at 10 West Twenty-first Street, reached his rooms at 1 o'clock on Sunday morning, and at once set about preparing to retire. He was just about reaching for the electric light button, when he heard a step at the door, and was surprised beyond measure to see two colored women enter the apartment. Mr. Johnson was still further surprised when one of the callers, uttering a cry of joy, rushed up to him and threw her arms about him as if he had been a long-lost brother. In vain Mr. Johnson protested that he had not had an introduction; the more he pleaded the more effusive became the greetings of the new arrival. The other lady, after the first greeting was over, busied herself with an inspection of the furniture in the Johnson apartments.

The visit lasted for several minutes, and then the callers bade Mr. Johnson an affectionate adieu and took their leave.

The bachelor, after his guests had departed, bethought himself to take a look around his room before retiring, and, when he did so he found that the two late arrivals had taken other things besides their leave. The first thing he missed was a two-hundred-and-fifty-dollar diamond pin, which had been taken from his scarf, which lay on the chiffoniere. Then he missed his fifty-dollar pair of cuff buttons and then $80 in cash, which had been taken from his trousers pocket.

He notified the police of the West Thirtieth Street Station. Last night Detectives Brennan, Sheehan, and Lockwood of the Nineteenth Precinct saw two colored women standing at the corner of Thirty-second Street and Sixth Avenue. They acted suspiciously and were arrested. When taken to the station house one of the women gave her name as Sarah Limm of 231 West Thirty-second Street. She had on a man's solitaire diamond ring worth at least $400. She also wore a beautiful pair of diamond earrings and other jewelry, the whole being worth at least $1,000. The other woman, who said she was Nellie Benson of 227 West Thirty-sixth Street, also wore much expensive jewelry and had in a pocket of her skirt $110 in cash, which the police suppose includes Mr. Johnson's "roll."

The women had only been locked up a short time when a colored man, who gave his name as William Singleton of 101 West Twenty-seventh Street, called at the station and said he was a friend of the Limm woman. The police, after questioning him, arrested him and found considerable money and jewelry in his pockets.

The trio will be arraigned this morning in the Jefferson Market Police Court.

SHOT HIMSELF IN THE PARK.

Frank Somers Found Wounded in Summer House Opposite Eighty-seventh Street.

Policeman Gagley heard a pistol shot he heard yesterday afternoon in the Summer house in Central Park, opposite Sixty-seventh Street, on the Fifth Avenue side. He found a man lying on a bench shot through the right temple. A revolver lay by his side. He was hastily taken to the Presbyterian Hospital, where he was brought back to consciousness.

He said he is Frank Somers, fifty-five years old, of 128 East Thirty-sixth Street. He was estranged from his family, he said; had been unable to find work, and became despondent, so he shot himself.

The police communicated with the East Thirty-fifth Street Station police, who said the house at 128 East Thirty-sixth Street had been vacant a long time.

The man later said he lived at 251 East Sixty-third Street. It was said there that the Somers family lived in the rear. No response could be had to knocks at the door of the apartments. The janitress said the family recently moved in, but consisted of the mother, two sons, and a daughter. They are quiet people, it was said.

RETIRED DRUGGIST DERANGED.

Morris C. Marsh Recently Subject to Temporary Hallucinations.

Policeman William McHugh of the West One Hundredth Street Station reported about 6 o'clock last evening that Morris C. Marsh, seventy-five years old, a well-to-do retired druggist, living at 77 West Ninety-first Street, was suffering from melancholia at his home. The officer, on being called in, had summoned Dr. Addoms of Manhattan Hospital, who had refused to take the man to the hospital as he was then rational. The family refused to talk of the case.

Mr. Marsh lives in the first flat of a handsome apartment house, which he owns. His daughter lives with him. He is a fine looking man with a gray beard. There was a fire in his flat last Thursday, a pan of fat burning and setting fire to a few articles. Mr. Marsh put the fire out himself, and this is said to have so worked on his mind that it somewhat upset it. He has several times since then shown signs of a deranged mind. He became terrorized when anybody came near him, and experienced hallucinations.

D. A. McMichael of 67 West Ninety-sixth Street, had to be summoned on Sunday, but Mr. Marsh was rational again when the doctor arrived. Later, it is said, he ran out on the stoop with little clothing on him. Dr. McMichael was again summoned, and he treated Mr. Marsh, but the latter's condition is said to have been such that he had to be locked in a room.

Members of the family have stated that Mr. Marsh will probably be taken to a private sanitarium.

THE WEATHER.

LOCAL FORECAST: Fair, much colder.

The extreme limit of the cold wave extends from the interior of Texas northeastward through the Lower Ohio Valley into the upper lake region and it continues throughout the West. The cold wave will progress eastward and by Wednesday morning will reach the Atlantic Coast with freezing temperatures into extreme northern Florida and the Gulf coast. It will continue cold Wednesday and Thursday throughout practically the entire country with generally fair weather. On the Atlantic Coast the winds will be fresh west to north.

THE XIXTH CENTURY.

When men speak of the achievements of the Nineteenth Century they show disrespect for historical truth and natural law. Nature has its rhythms, and history may move in cycles, but the world's progress cannot be scanned by the artificial prosody of the calendar. The endless story overlaps the centennial divisions, and he who reads only from the year 1801 onward begins, not with a chapter, but in the middle of a sentence. We can profitably measure the progress made from century to century under the impulse of continuing forces, but to enumerate a few of the recent triumphs of man and say "these belong to the Nineteenth Century" disjoints the orderly succession, detaches effects from parent causes, and pillages all past time to tickle the pride of the present. Of this secular plagiarism THE TIMES will not be guilty in the review here undertaken of the world's growth and gain during the past century.

We call it a century of marvels, and it should be marvelous, for it is the flower of all the others. The rose kindles the eye of admiration and awakens the sense of beauty, but the homely little bush is not less wonderful in its structure and development, and the unconsidered roots far down in the soil are the most wonderful of all, for they transform the despised dirt into this beautiful flower. Away back in some immensely distant age there was a hairy fellow, living in a cave, who one day picked up the fallen branch of a tree and used it as a club to kill a wild goat for his dinner. If we knew him we should erect a statue to him as a father and founder of the arts that have come to such development in the Nineteenth Century, for his was one of the earliest triumphs of man over nature, a first and helpful act that put him fairly on the way to the lordship of creation. He was a wonderful man, that hairy cave-dweller and primal tool-user; and the heirs to his genius and his devices in all the ages have been wonderful fellows, tugging and toiling and thinking at their unceasing purpose for our behoof, and the glory of the Nineteenth Century. Let us give them their just due.

THE ADVANCE OF LIBERAL INSTITUTIONS.

Science and politics, the material and the ethical, admit of no very profitable comparisons in regard to their respective rates of advancement. We cannot very well set them apart for comparative study and examination. If we say, as we are prompted to say, for we think it is true, that the growth and spread of liberal institutions, the onward march of freedom, has been the noblest distinction of the Nineteenth Century, some seeker after perfect truth and ultimate origins instantly reminds us that the chief help to shackle-breaking is enlightenment, of which science is the industrious handmaid. That being granted and the obvious answer recorded that most of the inventors and discoverers of the Nineteenth Century would have been publicly hanged had they burst untimely upon the world with their pretensions in the days of Pope Paul the Fifth and the Inquisition, we renew the expression of our belief that the sum of human happiness has been most largely augmented in the last hundred years by the transfer of the control over the destinies of nations from the hands of Princes to the hands of the people. Republics had flourished and liberty had been enjoyed by man in times anterior to the beginning of that century, but no man could then say with confidence what we now say in the deep tone of conviction, that freedom was never again to perish from the face of the earth. Popular institutions had not then come to the firm stage of assured establishment. Throughout much of the then civilized world the first steps had hardly been taken, and reaction watched like a bird of prey in hungry and hostile expectancy over every experiment at government by the people. The young Republic of the United States had not passed the precarious stage of infancy. JEFFERSON had seen in HAMILTON'S Treasury system an ultimate purpose "to prepare the way for a change from the present republican form of government to that of a monarchy." "Big passions strutting on a petty stage" was the best WORDSWORTH could say of us. In the eyes of Continental Europeans we were sordid, vulgar, boastful, and insignificant. Reaction against the bloody unreason of the French Revolution had come in the person of NAPOLEON, a sublime despot in whose determinations of policy the interests of the people were a subordinate factor, even when he deigned to consider them at all. The rest of the Continent was governed in the spirit of METTERNICH, the most consistent foe of freedom that the modern world has produced. In England, indeed, PITT had not lived in vain. A public opinion had been created, and royal prerogative was on its way to extinction. But as late as 1771 printers were brought to the bar of the House of Commons for daring to publish reports of its debates; and WILLIAM IV., VICTORIA'S immediate predecessor, insisted upon the right to dismiss Ministers at the pleasure of the Crown.

II.
POWER TRANSFERRED TO THE PEOPLE.

The people themselves, under trusted leaders who knew and loved and served them, have changed all that, or much of it. Nobody doubts, or at most only a few sad pessimists any longer pretend to doubt, the indestructibility of the American Union of States governed by popular suffrage; and the guarantees of the British Constitution are no more open to question than the orderly succession of the seasons. It remains true, as it was true half a century ago, that the United States and England are the most advanced types of government by the people for the people. But the progress of other races than our own has been marvelous when we consider how late they made their beginning, and the dreadful weight of royal resistance and monarchical tradition that has hung about their necks at every step. Measured by mere geographical extent, a very great part of the inhabitable globe has undergone the actual transformation from monarchy to republic. At the beginning of the Century Mexico and practically the whole of Central and South America were under the rule of Spain, with the exception of Brazil, which was a Portuguese colony. The tumult of the Napoleonic wars gave Spain's South American colonies the opportunity to gain their freedom during the second decade of the Century. Mexico achieved her independence in 1821, and became an organized republic in 1824. The royal Portuguese house of Braganza, driven to Brazil by NAPOLEON, maintained there an intermittent sway, the empire established in 1825 having been set aside for a quasi-republican form of government in 1834, until in 1890 Dom PEDRO II., doubtless the mildest-mannered Emperor that ever sat on a throne, set sail for the old home of his house, leaving behind him a revolution that quickly produced a republic. Two years ago we destroyed the last remnant of Spain's power in this hemisphere, and, save in the British Dominion of Canada, the Guianas, and a few islands of the sea, the flag of no monarch now floats anywhere in the New World. In Europe the Helvetic Republic of Switzerland, proclaimed in 1798, has become established under a Constitution. After passing under the imperial sway of two NAPOLEONS and finding after a sufficient trial neither branch of the Bourbon family to her taste France enjoys a republican form of government, now thirty years established and gathering strength in the confidence and loyal preference of the people with every passing year. In the distant Philippines nine millions of people have passed from the control of Spain to our own, under a political status not yet defined, which is not satisfactory to all of them or to all of us, but of which it can be said with confidence that if they are not destined to continue under the flag of this Republic they will live under one of their own. The extinction of the two South African republics has been effected, but we know too much of the nature of the Government maintained there, at least in Mr. KRUGER'S republic, to mourn the transfer of these States to British control as a loss to liberty.

III.
FROM ABSOLUTISM TO CONSTITUTIONS.

Reverting to those countries where we must measure the progress of liberty by observing what has been accomplished in the overthrow of absolutism and the erection of constitutional protections, the countries where Kings are tolerated but with powers greatly abridged, we see Greece freed from the cruel Turkish yoke by the intervention of the Western Powers at Navarino in 1827, an act of high policy, beyond the formal sanctions of law, but altogether commendable and salutary, even if Greek independence has disappointed the generous expectations of Philhellenism. We see the Ottoman dominion further diminished at the conclusion of the war with Russia in 1878, when the Berlin revision of the Treaty of San Stefano erected or confirmed the Danubian principalities of Roumania, Servia, and Bulgaria, gave Bosnia and Herzegovina into the care of Austria, and compelled a reformed administration in Eastern Roumelia. The friends of liberal progress are compelled to observe with pain and wonder that in Germany, united and under a Constitution, real freedom of speech and of the press does not exist, owing to prosecutions that affront the spirit of the age for the crime of lèse majesté; and they are not unaware that in the German, Austrian, and Russian Empires the interests of the subject attend the pleasure of the sovereign. But the advance from FREDERICK WILLIAM III. of Prussia to WILLIAM II. of Germany, from Emperor FRANCIS II. of Austria, dominated by the evil mind of METTERNICH, to FRANCIS JOSEPH, has covered a space wider than that which separates the reign of VICTORIA from the rule of GEORGE III.—wider even than the reach from CASTLEREAGH to GLADSTONE. From the historical point of view, however, it is manifest that German unity is in truth German freedom, just as united Italy, in comparison with every previous state of that people, is free Italy. In Germany as in Italy the union of petty States into a strong, independent sovereignty, a consummation long postponed by reactionary intrigues, was accomplished in obedience to the demands of an awakened sentiment of nationality among a people of one blood and a common interest. That in itself was a vast betterment over the old conditions of dispersion or loose federation and absolutism, and a great stride in the advance toward liberal Constitutional Government. These are doubtless the most important and lasting of all the changes in the historical geography of Europe during the Nineteenth Century. If we cannot speak in positive terms of the advancement of the people in Russia, notwithstanding the emancipation of the serfs by ALEXANDER II., it is chiefly because in that great empire the power of the nobles has not yet been broken. The story of the ancien régime in France and the struggles of many weak Kings against the exactions of a selfish and heartless nobility teach the lesson that the reduction of the titles of the aristocracy to the empty status of a "symbol of a complicated tradition," as Pendennis called it, is a fundamental procedure in the emancipation of a people.

We may therefore say without fear of dispute that men are freer at the end of the Nineteenth Century than at its beginning. Are they for that reason happier? Demonstrably, and beyond the possibility of doubt. We may admit all the proofs adduced of the wrong-headedness of the people and the failures of popular suffrage. It remains true that the people can govern themselves better than one man can govern them. In any argument for "the man on horseback" in these days of enlightenment and reason it should be postulated that the man on horseback must possess all the talents and all the virtues, an impossible being, inerrant, impeccable, supra-human. Most of the great men on horseback have been infra-human. The Nineteenth Century has pretty nearly done away with them. For that its memory will live to be blessed in coming ages by men who read in amazement of the oppressions that went before and rejoice in the large freedom that follows it and tends to become universal.

IV.
THE PUBLIC SYSTEM OF EUROPE.

Related to this great political movement which we have traced in outline, a part of it, in fact, is the complete change in the public system of Europe effected during the first quarter of the Nineteenth Century, a change of which the large results are every day visible to our eyes. The public system of the United States was established in 1789 by the adoption of the Constitution, and it endures without any change in spirit or substance to this day, unless we make exception of the amendments following the abolition of slavery, but they were not structural changes. New States are added, the old relation subsists. Our dominion expands, the body of the Union remains homogeneous. In Europe a new public system has been adopted. The common interest is recognized. The old game of the ceaseless shifting of boundaries as played among Princes in trade or in war has given place to the balance of power, maintained as a guarantee of peace. That union of forces which a hundred years ago was effected only by special treaties of coalition hurriedly negotiated in the presence of the exigency that called them forth is now accomplished by the permanent European Concert. The concert adjusts or aims to adjust the conflicting interests of nations, national interest is its foundation idea, and next to that the peace of Europe. The jealousy and the clashing ambition of Princes, who had very little regard for the interest of their States and none for that of their people, were the controlling forces in the system that preceded the concert. Back of that roll the thousand years of the centralized system of the Holy Roman Empire, under which States without independent sovereignty were in vassalage to the Frankish Emperors, the Hohenstaufens, and to the Hapsburgs. The Holy Roman Empire, having its beginning when Pope LEO III. put the crown on the head of CHARLEMAGNE on Christmas Day in the year 800, was really put out of existence at the end of the Thirty Years' War, in 1648, by the Treaty of Westphalia, which established the independent sovereignty of the Princes in their own States and gave them the right to form alliances within and without the empire. The empty name and its trappings were definitely laid aside seven months after the battle of Austerlitz, Aug. 6, 1806, when FRANCIS II. of Austria formally renounced the title of Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire of the German Nation. The present public system of the European Concert came into existence a little less than ten years later, an outgrowth of the supreme necessities of the struggle for existence against the aggressions of NAPOLEON.

V.
THE MIGHTIEST FIGURE OF THE CENTURY.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE will always remain the most massive, conspicuous, and terrible figure of the Nineteenth Century. From the dawn of history we see but two or three mighty makers of the chronicles of their time whom it is permitted to compare with him. CHARLES V. was very far his inferior in capacity, and had his opportunities for greatness thrust upon him by inheritance. CÆSAR and ALEXANDER, as Lord ROSEBERY observes, are too remote for satisfactory comparison. Attempting here no survey of his career we may say that the calm and discerning judgment of history pronounces NAPOLEON'S policy senseless and his ambition sterile. He was the greatest military organizer and commander that ever lived. He was wonderfully capable in civil administration. Both these eminent qualities together failed to endow him with the genius of creative statesmanship. In the intoxication of his successes he had planned a vast Empire of the West, made up of vassal kingdoms. All the Kings of Europe should maintain their royal residences at Paris; the archives of their States should be kept there. The crown of this gigantic empire was to rest upon his brow, his hand should hold the supreme sceptre. We cannot so much marvel at the unparalleled splendor of this conception as at its absolute sterility. Cruel it was, of course—wholly heartless, for it meant the butchering of a million men and the humbling of a continent. But to what earthly end? Where was the human soul that would have been the better or happier for it, where the people whose interest would have been promoted, where the laudable cause that would have been advanced? There was nothing, no fruit, no flower, only the immeasurable selfishness, the insatiable ambition of one man to be gratified. France was nothing to him but a base of supplies, her people only the instruments of his designs. He made them drunk with aspirations of glory, and without any pity exacted of them enormous sacrifices that left them crushed and prostrate.

Nevertheless, NAPOLEON sped the departure of an old and barren system and roughly hastened the coming of a new one that has endured to our day. The world has to thank him for that. Despot as he was, hating and fearing the spirit of the Revolution that had prepared the stage upon which he was to play his astonishing part, he could not make the people of France and the people of Europe forget that a King's head had been struck off in the Place de la Concorde. The horror of the Revolution's crimes and madness could not efface the fact that the people had demonstrated their power, and that the divine right of Kings had received a terrible shock. NAPOLEON'S policy nourished and strengthened the sentiment of nationality. When he shifted boundaries and transferred cities and principalities from one rule to another he brought vividly before the minds of angry and protesting men the conception of national frontiers determined by race and kinship, not rivers and mountains, community of language and feeling, not the bargaining of Princes. It was an old enough law, but outrageously violated. Reparation was not yet to be made, but it was preparing. The treaties by which the Powers arranged their successive coalitions against NAPOLEON, at Kalisch, Reichenbach, Töplitz, and Chaumont, brought England, Russia, Prussia, and Austria into an alliance based on the new idea that the nations of Europe had a common interest. After NAPOLEON had been packed off to Elba, the Congress of Vienna, called to repair his depredations, confirmed this principle and fully established the European concert. It is plain that this was a great step toward the realization of the people's hopes of nationality. But the Ministers who negotiated the Treaty of Vienna were unaffected by the new spirit. They patched up the torn map of Europe according to the principle of legitimacy, as nearly as might be the restoration of the status quo ante NAPOLEON, subject, of course, to considerations of present expediency. This suited TALLEYRAND, for it recognized the Bourbon restoration in France. But in these readjustments Belgium was united to Holland, a sin against the principle of nationality that had to be repented and made right a few years later. METTERNICH'S intriguing policy imposed upon the German States their makeshift Confederation and postponed for half a century the accomplishment of German Unity, which was finally effected when the sentiment of nationality glowed again in the ardor of the union against NAPOLEON III. In the Franco-Prussian war, and WILLIAM I. in the Palace of Versailles was crowned German Emperor.

VI.
THE HOLY ALLIANCE.

The impress which NAPOLEON'S career has left upon history, much of it quite contrary to his intent, is visible again in the preposterous Holy Alliance, one of the curiosities of the history of the Nineteenth Century, of which it may be said that its existence and its futility were consequences of his turbulent activities. ALEXANDER of Russia in his pious musings hit upon the idea that as Providence had permitted the allied sovereigns to confound the Corsican, they ought to sign a compact making the principles of the Christian religion their rule of conduct and of policy. They signed it, Russia, Prussia, Austria, France, Spain, Naples, and Sardinia agreeing to establish and perfect human institutions according to the teaching of the Bible and the Saviour. It has been repeatedly pointed out that the Holy Alliance was of no historical consequence whatever. It was in the treaties of alliance made at Paris in 1815 and 1818 between Russia, Prussia, Austria, England, and France, and in the Congresses of Aix-la-Chapelle, Troppau, Laybach, and Verona that the resolutions and the measures were taken to make common cause against revolutionary movements, to repress popular uprisings, and beat back the advancing spirit of liberalism wherever manifested. This conspiracy of Kings against the people had its hands full. Throughout Latin Europe the spirit of the Revolution was rife, and thrones became quite too unsteady for comfortable sitting. The liberal undertakings then successfully baffled, to be renewed again in the revolutionary movement of 1848 in Germany, Austria-Hungary, and Italy with little greater immediate success, supplied the germinal ideas and the unconquerable impulse of Constitutional liberty, the accomplishment of which or the advance toward which has been the distinguishing political characteristic of the Nineteenth Century.

VII.
THE MONROE DOCTRINE.

The Monroe Doctrine, although it had shaped itself in the minds of American statesmen at a period long anterior to the royal conspiracy against freedom in Europe, was formulated and proclaimed as a warning against its threatened aggressions in this hemisphere. CASTLEREAGH, the English Premier, in his later years had small sympathy with the reactionary tendency of the alliance, and CANNING, his successor, none at all. England was therefore not made a party to the business of throne-propping on the Continent. When it became evident that the allies, having completed their reactionary work in Europe, would attempt to restore to Spain her revolted American colonies, CANNING made to our Minister, Mr. RUSH, the suggestion that bore fruit in President MONROE'S declaration, in his message of Dec. 2, 1823, that the free and independent American continents "were not to be considered as subjects for future colonisation of any European Powers"; and that while we should not interfere with existing dependencies, "with the Governments who have declared their independence and maintained it, and whose independence we have, on great consideration and on just principles acknowledged, we could not view any interposition for the purpose of oppressing them, or controlling in any other manner their destiny, by any European Power in any other light than as the manifestation of an unfriendly disposition toward the United States." A little more than one year ago ex-President HARRISON, before a distinguished Court of Arbitration held in Paris, presented the case of Venezuela in her boundary dispute with Great Britain, a controversy which President CLEVELAND brought to a peaceful ending by his firm assertion of the Monroe Doctrine as a principle "applicable to every stage of our National existence." Never acknowledged as a part of the public law by the Powers of Europe, they nevertheless will not cease to respect it while we are strong enough to enforce it. We made NAPOLEON III. pay heed to it when at the conclusion of our civil war the ominous concentration of Federal troops on the Rio Grande hastened the departure from Mexican soil of the French soldiers who had been used to impose the unwelcome MAXIMILIAN upon the Mexicans.

VIII.
THE GREAT REPUBLIC.

If we have devoted what may seem to be a disproportionately large part of this review to European affairs, it is because political consummations that have there occupied the entire Century in their working out, or have left to generations yet to come their large part in the uncompleted work, were here achieved in the Declaration of Independence, the War of the Revolution, and the Constitution. Our system, our institutions, then took a form we have never wished to change. In the events of the Century in the United States we should put on a plane with the civil war, if not above it in respect to its influence on our destiny, JEFFERSON'S purchase from France of Louisiana and the great West and Northwest in 1803. That transformed a belt of States into a continental empire. That vast territory we must have had, sooner or later, in peace or by war. It was JEFFERSON'S genius and good fortune to seize the favorable moment for the transaction. The civil war accomplished two things that were essential to our greatness and to our honor and welfare. It put it beyond all question that this is an indissoluble Union, and it abolished slavery. DANIEL WEBSTER'S personal irresolution in regard to the slave power was richly atoned for by those words of memorable eloquence by which he implanted in the bosoms of the people that love of the Union and devotion to it that fortified them for the struggle to maintain it. It was WEBSTER'S greatest service to his country.

The war of 1812 was disgraceful to England and, though just and necessary, not creditable to ourselves, save that by a series of brilliant victories on lake and sea it demonstrated the power of our navy and the bravery of our seamen. Between the Berlin and Milan decrees, by which NAPOLEON aimed to destroy the commerce of England and the Orders in Council with which England retaliated, our own growing merchant marine was being ground to pieces. Our neutral flag was respected by neither party, our seamen were impressed, paper blockades were set up which we were asked to respect, and our trading vessels were harassed on our own coast. There was abundant cause of war in these outrages put upon us in the pursuance of a policy stupidly maintained by a narrow and obstinate British Ministry. Yet we were not well prepared for war, though we could not escape it without degradation. HENRY ADAMS in his history says that "the war of 1812 was chiefly remarkable for the vehemence with which, from beginning to end, it was resisted and thwarted by a very large number of citizens who were commonly considered, and who considered themselves, by no means the least respectable, intelligent, or patriotic part of the Nation." The British orders in Council were rescinded, but too late to prevent war. The Treaty of Ghent ended hostilities, although in ignorance of its conclusion JACKSON won the battle of New Orleans Jan. 8, two weeks later. It left unsettled the questions of our maritime rights out of which it grew, but our victories had established the principle we asserted. It was the New England Federalists that opposed the war of 1812, and were accused of giving secret aid and comfort to the enemy. It was the Massachusetts Whigs who denounced the war with Mexico as a slaveholders' war. They had ground for that opinion, but they forgot that it was also their Government's war. LOWELL'S first series of "Bigiow Papers," which we read with keen enjoyment as an American classic, would have got him into Fort Warren as a Federal prisoner accused of treason if they had appeared during the patriotic excitement of the civil war, their shafts of satire aimed at the Lincoln Administration and the Union Generals in the field. But as he observed in the first paper of the new series of 1862, "Ther's gret changes hez took place in all polit'cle matters." The slave power was then arrayed against the Union, as the Massachusetts Federalists had been almost arrayed against it when they discussed making their own terms with England in 1814, and Mr. LOWELL'S rustic muse sang to a responsive and this time public opinion. The treaty which ended the Mexican war gave us the territory out of which were formed New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada, California, and a part of Colorado, and the Gadsden Purchase in 1853 added to Arizona territory south of the Gila River. Oregon and Washington were confirmed to us by the treaty of 1846 with Great Britain, which ended the "Fifty-four forty or fight" controversy. Texas, having gained its independence from Mexico in 1836, was admitted to the Union as a State in 1845. All the rest of the territory west of the Mississippi from the Gulf to the northern boundary was obtained by JEFFERSON'S Louisiana Purchase; Florida was bought from Spain in 1819 and Alaska from Russia in 1867. We have grown in population from 5,308,483 in 1800 to 76,299,220 in 1900.

The war with Spain in 1898, by which Porto Rico, Guam, and the Philippines were brought under our flag, has left some unsettled questions which the Nineteenth Century passes on to the Twentieth. Chief of these and of fundamental import is that of Constitutional jurisdiction and interpretation now before the Supreme Court. Does the Constitution of its own force extend to the newly acquired territory, making its people citizens and forbidding us to levy duties on products exchanged with them? Or is it within the power of Congress to determine the political status of the Porto Ricans and the Filipinos? Cuba in shaping its Constitution, and is about to embark on its own ship of state upon a voyage not without peril, which experienced mariners expect to see voluntarily conducted in a United States port. The new questions that have arisen in the Far East through our possession of the Philippines and the present suspension of sovereignty in China through the intervention of the Powers belong to this century, they were but opened in the last. Of Japan, however, it must be said that if a world's prize for general advancement in the Nineteenth Century had been offered the judges must have awarded it to that empire. Considering her condition at the time PERRY opened her ports with American cannon fifty years ago and her present place among the nations and her present aspirations, her record of progress is wonderful.

IX.
THE END OF A COSTLY DELUSION.

A word must be said, in passing from political changes to other themes, of the ended experiment of a double measure of value and the general adoption of the gold standard throughout the commercial world. England made gold the sole standard of her money system in 1816. In this country we had no quarrel of the standards until the combined attack of the silver mine owners and the greenbackers and inflationists was made upon the act of 1873, which dropped the silver dollar from our authorized list of coins, as it had long been obsolete. Over this "Crime of 1873" and the pottering with the question we wasted twenty-five years of discussion, lost untold millions in a financial stringency, and saw one of our great parties debauched, until on March 14, 1900, the single gold standard was established by law. The Latin Union of Europe long ago suspended silver coinage. Great Britain closed her Indian mints to the metal in 1893, and Germany, Austria, Russia, and Japan, as well as the United States, have adopted the gold basis. The world, let us hope, has seen the end of a very costly delusion. We need do no more than make a passing reference to the rise of the United States in commercial importance. It is one of the most notable developments not merely of the Nineteenth Century, but of all history, that a Nation perfectly new and raw, numbering only 5,000,000 souls in 1800, should have advanced at such a pace that in 1900 the serious economists and statesmen of European nations more than ten times her age should be taking thought how to protect themselves against the great commercial rival of the West, with her $430,000,000 a year of exports of manufactures and her National wealth increasing at such a rate that from being the borrower of enormous sums she now easily supplies the needs of Old World Governments, municipalities, and private corporations, who have begun to come here whenever they are in need of funds. It "expands the imagination" to attempt a forecast of the commercial future of such a country.

X.
THEORY OF ORGANIC EVOLUTION.

The world of science has been more profoundly affected and learning helped on further in the true path by the propounding of the theory of organic evolution than by any other philosophical discovery since man appeared on earth. Fiercely combatted by men of science and theologians when CHARLES DARWIN gave to the world the first detailed exposition of the theory in his "Origin of Species," published in 1859, it has come to such universal acceptance that it is now impossible to maintain a discussion of biology, morphology, anthropology, geology, sociology, astronomy, or any other science that concerns itself with natural phenomena save in terms of evolution and natural selection. The honor popularly accorded to DARWIN by reason of his celebrated formulation of the theory must in some measure be shared with WALLACE, who had independently constructed a theory of natural selection; and LAMARCK, BUFFON, ERASMUS DARWIN, and GOETHE had had more or less distinct perceptions of this explanation of life long before DARWIN and WALLACE in 1858 read their famous papers before the Linnæan Society. Evolution explains everything that we now see in nature as the product not of special creative impulses, but of natural forces. The law of natural selection, or as HERBERT SPENCER defines it, the survival of the fittest, has guided the course of organic evolution, producing the types and conditions that we now see out of the types and conditions of preceding ages. The thorns that protect briers from browsing cattle, the inconspicuous colors of the ruffed grouse that elude the eye of the hawk, and the quills that make the porcupine impregnable are the product of "successive selections of favorable variations", that is, individuals that through some accident of food or environment approached these protected types were most likely to escape their enemies and live to reproduce their kind, and as a tendency was set up along the line of evolution that has produced the existing characteristics. The visible forms of nature are accounted for by the action of forces still at work. Geology has been revolutionized. The old catastrophic theory, which held that the earth had been wrought upon by annihilating and upheaving catastrophism, gave place to the uniformitarian theory expounded by LYELL, which accounts for change by the action of slow and potent forces. The theory of the formation of the solar system out of a nebulous or meteoritic mass through the action of the attraction of matter succeeded to the dogma of special creation. The great space that lies between the lowest organisms and the highest, between monera and man, is theoretically traversable by this explanation. In the great philosophical system of HERBERT SPENCER the growth of political institutions, the development of ethics, and the habits of the human mind itself are traced up the evolutionary line to remote origins. The irresistible advance of the theory of natural selection is due to the circumstance that it satisfactorily explains the observed facts—always a strong point in favor of a theory.

XI.
MAN'S ANCESTRY.

DARWIN and SPENCER, and even HUXLEY, who was a frank expounder of things to be believed, have shown a conservative prudence in refraining from pushing the development theory beyond the limits where it could find reasonable support from observation. Not so with the daring ERNST HAECKEL. Inasmuch as the ancestry of man has naturally been the matter of which popular curiosity has most impatiently demanded an explanation from science, we may here present in briefest outline, as a record of how far the theory of evolution was carried in the Nineteenth Century, the line ascendant of man as conjecturally traced by HAECKEL in his "The Last Link." We start with the monera, each being "a simple granule of protoplasm, a structureless mass of albuminous matter," the first monera "owing their existence to spontaneous creation out of so-called anorganic combinations, consisting of carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, and nitrogen." That is the common parent of us all, and it arose early in the Laurentian period. In successive stages descending from the monera we have the simple single cell of protoplasm with a nucleus, which divides by fission, until a group of cells pushed together like a mulberry forms the morula, which becomes a blastula, a ball with walls made up of a single layer of cells, and filled with fluid that nourishes them, the ball by doubling in upon itself forms the gastrula, a cup with double walls, the cavity of which forms the primitive intestinal system. So far biology and the cell theory have guided the speculation. Now, by hypothesis, a sort of flat worm is produced, a thing with a few organs and a primitive nervous system; then higher worm-forms, up to the very important stage of the prochordonia, where a spinal cord and organs of respiration first appear. The amphioxus comes next, still without a head or ribs or limbs, the cyclostomata of the lower Silurian epoch at length has a cranium; then we have the first fishes in the Devonian and Carboniferous epochs; the amphibia, the proreptilia, a low group of reptiles, the protomammalia, warm-blooded and with fur, of which the duck-billed ornithorhynchus is the type, marsupialia of the Jurassic epoch, widely distributed in Europe and America represented by 130 living species, early placentalia of the Cretaceous epoch, or else, or prosimians almost represented collaterally by American long-tailed monkeys, 21 extraordinary monkeys, with mentality in the position familiar to us; the large apes, represented by the gorilla, the orang-outang, and the chimpanzee; the Pithecanthropus erectus, of which we have the celebrated fossil from the Upper Pliocene of Java; and last, Man, "known with certainty to have existed as an implement-using creature in the last glacial epoch." It will be observed that HAECKEL is not afraid to bridge the chasm between the inorganic and organic, between "blind matter and the seeing eye." The sun of a hot geological epoch "shining on a bank of miry clay," is enough to start off his entropy of creation. It is also necessary to observe that he is much too venturesome to be followed or fully accepted by careful scientists.

XII.

CHEMISTRY—LIGHT—HEAT.

The researches in physics which had been pushed with such zeal during the latter part of the Eighteenth Century ripened into the formulation of laws and theories of larger interest and importance in the Nineteenth. The theory that heat is not matter, but only a mode or manifestation of motion, and that energy is not produced or lost but only transformed in the processes of nature and the work of man, which makes it evident that the sun is its source, and that the capacity for work that resides in a coal bed, in a waterfall, in a locomotive, or in the muscles of a horse, is derived from the sun, has revolutionized the reasoning processes of science and substituted logical procedure for blind groping and imaginative guessing. DALTON'S atomic theory of chemical combination, from which it appears that the elements in uniting to form compounds enter into the union in definite ratios of weight, the irreducible atoms of the one joining in some fixed proportion with the irreducible atoms of the others, so that weights or equivalents become the law of combination, has been of like significance in chemistry. Spectrum analysis, by which we determine not only the chemical composition of the heavenly bodies, but also the direction and speed of their motion, contributes to the science of astronomy a wealth of facts not otherwise to be brought within its ken, and enlarges human knowledge of the universe. It is beginning to be realized that the telescope has about reached the limit of its development, but when optics can do no more, light is subjected to the processes of other sciences and discovery lures on along its endless course. The artificial solidification of gases and the liquefaction of air have produced the conviction that the three states of matter, most familiar to us in the case of water, are common to matter, and that the difference between the solid, liquid, and the gaseous states is determined by degrees of heat and pressure. The theory of ether, itself a substance of such a nature that it pervades space and other grosser substances and yet so eludes our powers of observation that it is as yet only an intellectual conception, something that must exist in order to explain and account for sensible phenomena, is fascinating as a key to mysteries. The wave theory of the transmission of heat, light, sound, and electricity is dependent upon the supposition that ether fills space, whether apparently empty or already occupied. Light is not matter that travels. It is transmitted by etheric waves, the impulse communicated at the point of origin being given off in such a way as to produce an impression upon the organ of vision, just as the vibrations impressed by the voice upon the disk of the telephone transmitter are given off by the disk of the receiver and communicated in waves of sound to the organ of hearing. In two notable instances in the Nineteenth Century science gave to man the power to assert the existence of things unknown and unseen, and the gratification of seeing his prophecies fulfilled. ADAMS and LEVERRIER determined by independent mathematical computations that the behavior of Uranus indicated the existence of an unknown planet by whose attraction it was affected, and Neptune was discovered by astronomers who looked for it where the mathematicians declared it ought to be. MENDELIEFF'S formulation of the law that the properties of the elements are periodic functions of their atomic weights has made it possible to construct a table in which the elements are arranged in groups that follow each other in a definite order. Thus the gaps in the table will show where an element that would complete a series has not yet been discovered, though there is logical probability that it exists. In that way gallium, germanium, and scandium have been first inferred, then discovered.

XIII.

THE GREAT INVENTIONS.

The triumphs of applied science during the century are largely of a nature that brings them within the range of that close acquaintance that comes of familiar use. The electric telegraph and the telephone serve our need, but no longer excite anybody's wonder. Indeed, we chafe already under their manifest defects, and Signor MARCONI has gone far enough in his experiments with wireless telegraphy to give rise to the conjecture, in sanguine minds ripening into belief, that the art of communicating thought and speech by electricity is in its almost helpless infancy: but that belongs to another century. Photography, in which optics and chemistry join forces, from its early status of awakening a simulated pleasure by enabling one to look upon the reluctantly faithful image of a distant friend's face, has come to serve the sciences in a hundred ways, and, as some of the supposedly judicious think, to disserve art by giving a deathblow to wood engraving. The important development of the Nineteenth process of photographing the interior aspects of the human body by the use of X ray that is not wholly impeded by opaque substances has given to the surgeon and the physician a new means of information. It is the prevailing tendency of science to substitute observation for guesswork. It would be superfluous to dwell upon the importance of the railway and the steamship. They are the most important contributions of the Nineteenth Century to the commercial development of the world. Probably nothing in its power to humanity as the inventions and customs and policies that tend "to associate all the races of mankind," as the development of electric and steam communication had done. The removal of the barriers of time and space gives men a chance to know each other better, stimulates the arts of peace, and by deepening men's intellectual impulses, as well as by engendering mutual respect and esteem, tends perpetually to make war unpopular, discreditable, and less probable. The world has as yet imperfectly learned the lesson that trade is a good thing for both parties to the bargain. It is still held by some, notably in the United States of America and by its statutes, that an one party must necessarily be cheated, especially if the other party is a foreigner, it is better to discourage the exchange.

XIV.

ADVANCE IN MEDICAL SCIENCE.

The art of healing is so intimately related to our comfort and happiness that we cannot pass over—as in this sketch we must pass over innumerable inventions and discoveries—its most notable forward steps in the last century. Cellular pathology is certainly one of these, for it threw a light upon the nature of disease where there was not much light before. After SCHWANN'S researches into the nature and work of the cell in organic growth had yielded their fruits of discovery, there was no possibility that science should fail to understand the relation of the cell to the development of animal and vegetable tissues, to the unit upon which all else depends; nor could pathology fail to take up the work where physiology left it and show that morbid growths, tumors, inflammation, and pathological changes generally arise from the abnormal behavior of cells. Every pathological structure, said VIRCHOW forty-two years ago, has its physiological prototype. The discovery of the use of anaesthetics to render the patient unconscious of pain is, of course, a mountain peak in the chain of medical progress. It spares the patient the torture of the knife, enables the surgeon to perform his work with a free mind and a steady hand, and tends to promote a favorable result. Its importance cannot well be overstated. The germ theory of disease, leading to the preparation and use of antitoxins, and to the antiseptic precautions of surgery, is nevertheless the chief and distinguishing advance in medical science made in the Nineteenth Century. The knowledge that the so-called zymotic diseases, like diphtheria, typhoid, and cholera, are caused by the poisons of minute organisms that have entered the system and have failed to be put under arrest by the white corpuscles of the blood, whose business it is to take care of such intruders; that we can escape disease by keeping out or destroying these germs, and that we can baffle them, or become immune, by the use of remedies that make our bodies a barren field for their operation, has already much enlarged the effective powers of the physician and has made it possible for us to escape the enemy where we formerly in perfect ignorance put ourselves at his mercy. Evidently, too, we have only made a beginning. It was in 1860 that LISTER, applying the lesson of PASTEUR'S discoveries of the bacterial nature of putrefaction, declared that the suppuration of wounds was largely due to their exposure to the septic germs that existed everywhere—in the air, on sponges, instruments, and the hands of the operating surgeons. Now no intelligent surgeon operates save under antiseptic conditions, with sterilized instruments. Yet it was in 1881, more than a score of years after LISTER'S announcement, that the surgeon called to attend a President of the United States who had been shot down in a public railway station in the City of Washington made on the spot a preliminary exploration of the wound with his finger!

XV.

THE FINE ARTS.

Into the field of art it is a daring venture, for there the forbidden gigantes of taste arise. If we say, however, that in music, as in literature, the romantic movement was the significant development of the Century we may not transcend the limits of prudence. The attempt to express the emotions was the controlling motive in the art-songs of SCHUBERT, in the instrumental compositions of BEETHOVEN, and in the music dramas of WAGNER, which were the most conspicuous and most passionately resented of the musical productions of the Century. Sculpture has notably broken away from the traditions of the stone-chrome school, which paid more attention to surface than to structure, a school of which several early American sculptors were distinguished practitioners, and has advanced, along with the other reproductive arts, to a fuller recognition of the principle that wholes and parts should be represented with some attempt to denote structure and possible use. In some of the statuary now less than a century old the cylindrical marble shaft of the supporting pedestal might be substituted for one of the legs of the statue. A good many sculptors now aim to produce statues in which this exchange could not be effected without risk of detection. Painting has in no respect, perhaps, shown any more notable change than in the prevailing tendency to present nature by reproducing the impressions she makes on the eye through the medium of the atmosphere in its varying conditions. But while American art has risen far above its early beginning to a real creative stage, and while some English and German painters and many French painters and sculptors have done work worthy to live, it is probably needless to say much about the progress of art in a Century whose the main dispute was about methods and the masterpieces of long ago remained unquestionable.

XVI.

THE GREAT WRITERS.

Of literature there is no space to be said that an adequate summary would be much too voluminous and anything less unpertinent. There was much work that the world will not willingly let die. It must accredit to the Nineteenth Century DUMAS, the incomparable teller of stories of adventure; BALZAC, the world's greatest master of fiction; THACKERAY, DICKENS, finished, and a creator of human characters that are more vividly present to the mind of the reader than those of any other novelist; HUGO, of wide popularity, already appreciably diminished; HAWTHORNE, psychological and entrancing; COOPER, whose Leather Stocking Tales can never be equaled, since the subject and environment have passed away; SCOTT, to whom legions of good people owe all that they know of English history; SHAKESPEARE and KEATS, original and indispensable; BYRON, the greatest name in English poetry of the century; TENNYSON, BROWNING, WORDSWORTH, HUGO, DE MUSSET, HEINE, GOETHE, for the second part of "Faust"; PUSHKIN, in Russia; HOLMES and LOWELL, who are dear to us now though they may not survive, and EMERSON, who will doubtless share their fate, are names that must enter any list of Nineteenth Century poets. In historical writing, MACAULAY, MOMMSEN, RANKE, TAINE, CARLYLE, THIERS, and the historian of American beginnings, JOHN FISKE, have laid future generations under the obligation of gratitude. Philology has been created, it may be said, by the employment of the comparative method, which through the labors of BOPP, SCHLEICHER, and GRIMM, determined the family relationship of languages, and in particular traced the history of the great Indo-European group to which our own belongs.

EXPLORATION AND DISCOVERY.

At the beginning of the Nineteenth Century no white man had ever made the journey across this continent or across Africa. Now it may fairly be said that there is no considerable part of the globe unexplored, except the frozen regions around the poles. The Antarctic Continent still holds its secrets locked, but sledge journeys over the ice have been made to a point so near the North Pole and the effort to reach it is so persistent that it is one of the commonest prophecies that some daring explorer's field-book will presently bring us notes of observations taken at 90 degrees north latitude. There is not much left to find out about this country. The "great American desert" of the school geographies of forty years ago is now settled and the settlers are raising great crops, in scorn of the prediction that nothing could be grown west of the one hundredth parallel. Africa is the chief conquest of exploration during the century. LIVINGSTONE and STANLEY, and after them military expeditions bent on delimiting "spheres of influence" have left no part of the dark land untrodden. The whole north coast of Siberia has been traversed and cold Alaska and British Columbia have in great part been visited by hunters of gold or adventure.

Just as the century was distinguished, as we have pointed out, for the advancement of the people to a larger share in legislation and government, a change of the highest beneficence, indicating a continuing development of the idea of equality and brotherhood, so in works of humanity and mercy, in hospital service, Red Cross societies, the alleviation of the miseries of war, and in charitable care for the poor, the principle that man is his brother's keeper has gained new recognition. The Arbitration Conference at The Hague and the resulting treaty came too near the end of the century to affect its action, though they have affected its thought. It would require a special treatise to show the advance that popular and higher education has made. There are other works of the Century, of great and lasting value, but perfectly well known. There are many things which made a great stir in their time that have not changed the course of history. We leave them out altogether.

Men will cease to wonder at the worth and the progress of man in the Nineteenth Century only when the Twentieth shall have surpassed them.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—There is hope for Mr. EDWARD ATKINSON yet. He still thinks that he is an unhappy as ever, and that the country has gone to irretrievable smash, but we note in his last letter to The Springfield Republican a gleam of humor that has long been missing from his productions—a gleam hinting that almost before he knows it he will again be writing for papers other than The Agriculturist's Own. The letter begins most lugubriously with moans over the building of warships for which we would have no use if all virtue and wisdom were not departed from everybody except the anti-imperialists, and then follows a declaration that "few but deadbeats and degenerates will now enter that vicious and degraded service," meaning the United States Army. This, however, is only habit. The fact that Mr. ATKINSON is on the way to recovery is shown plainly enough toward the close of his letter, where, in explanation of the disagreement of his fellow-citizens with himself, he asserts that they are all the victims of "optical apperception." "There must be," he goes on, "a physical cause. Is it not to be found in that appendix, said to exist in the brain, a survival from the brute, which corresponds to the appendix in the digestive organs, which, when congested, destroys the power of digestion? This newfound appendix is said to be in the neighborhood of a third eye of the base of the brain, discovered beyond the ken, except that in my youth I could look through the optic chamber. GOLF CONTEST A LOTTERY

Water Puddles Partially Submerge Lakewood Greens.

DOUGLAS LEADS LOW SCORES

Five Cups Draw a Good Field for New Year's Tournament—Uncertainties of the Game.

Golf was played yesterday on the links of the Lakewood Club beneath a gray sky, from which an irritating drizzle of rain fell incessantly until late in the afternoon, while half a hundred or more mud puddles were in view from every point on the links. Notwithstanding these depressing features, nearly fifty enthusiasts turned out and did their share to make the special New Year's open tournament of the club a success. In this respect the result was better than might be imagined, for thirty-eight complete scores were handed in for the qualifying medal-play round in the morning, and the club, with a twentieth century generosity, divided them into five sets of eight, each set of which has a special cup for match-play competition, the final rounds coming to-day.

Col. G. B. M. Harvey was one of the notable golfers, who found the weather the severest bunker to his game, and he dropped into the rear end section with a score of 126. He won his round in the afternoon, however, and is still in line for the fifth trophy.

In contrast to Col. Harvey's score was the 88 of Findlay Douglas, America's former amateur champion. Although seven strokes worse than his winning score in last Saturday's handicap, it was an admirable performance. Good putting was almost out of the question, for many of the greens were partially submerged in water, and a special putting rule was in force that a player could lift his ball when stymied by water. Many a ball from a good drive was half buried in the soft surface of the ground, and on the whole the game was more or less of a lottery.

Douglas had a close call for his low-score prize. Just one point behind him, with 89, was W. H. Davis of the home club, and who met Douglas in the final round at Atlantic City. Both of these men won their matches in the afternoon, Douglas beating J. C. Rennard, while Davis disposed of J. M. Naething, a young St. Andrew's golfer. In the semi-final round this morning for the Lakewood Cup, the chief trophy, Davis will play the Philadelphian, W. M. McCawley, and Douglas will meet the former Lakewood champion, Jasper Lynch.

The closest match in the afternoon was between Arthur P. Clapp and Harry Suydam. They were in the third cup division, and Clapp won, after a tie, in the nineteenth hole. John Milby started the competitors off, and Frank M. Freeman, captain of the club, acted the part of general manager to prime satisfaction.

Chicago Golfer Will Retire.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—President Charles B. Macdonald of the Chicago Golf Club, former amateur champion, and one of the best golfers in the United States, will sever his official connection with Chicago golf when the annual election of the Wheaton organization takes place Jan. 19. Mr. Macdonald, whose business interests demand his residence in New York, will be succeeded by Robert S. McCormick, one of the pioneer members of the club. The Nominating Committee last night announced its selection of Robert S. McCormick for President. Mr. Macdonald, the retiring President, won the first amateur championship of the United States Golf Association at Newport in 1895.

GUNNERS WILL BE KEPT BUSY.

Trap Shooting Competitions Planned by Many Clubs To-day.

Many of the most important trap shooting contests of the year are annually held on New Year's Day, and this, the first day of the new century, promises to be no exception to the general rule. On all of the local gun club grounds there will be competitions galore at both clay and live birds, and some very interesting contests are assured by the number and skill of the competitors.

In New Jersey an exceptionally interesting programme is planned. The Boiling Springs Rod and Gun Club will have an all-day shoot on its grounds, at Rutherford, N. J., the principal contest being a team shoot between the members of the organization, in which Gus E. Grieff and other noted shots will compete. The shooting will last all day. The Meonachie Gun Club has a big shoot planned for decision on its grounds, near Rutherford. In the City of Newark the South Side Gun Club will have an all-day clay bird trap shooting tournament, open to all comers, while the East Side Gun Club will hold a big open tournament, in which everybody may compete, at Foundry Street and the Plank Road, opening at 10 o'clock in the morning.

On Long Island the biggest event of the day is the Carteret Gun Club's tournament at the grounds of the organization, on Stempstead Heath, near Carlton City. The shoots there are all at live birds, and the principal event is at twenty-five live pigeons per man, the competition being for the Holiday Cup. This will be followed by two special cup shoots for trophies offered by club members, and a series of impromptu events arranged for the benefit of the contestants as they may elect.

At Babylon the Westminster Kennel Club grounds will be the scene of an old-time gathering of wing shots, an all-day tournament at live birds being planned. The Recreation Gun Club will have its regular holiday shoot on its grounds, at Glen Cove, L. I. The Flushing Gun Club grounds will be the scene of an all-day holiday cup and sweepstakes competition. At Bay Ridge the Crescent Athletic Club will have one of the biggest shoots it has ever held. There will be a special prize offered for a fifty-bird event, known as the New Year's Cup, and several other trophy events, in all of which the best-known gunners of this organization will meet.

At Queens, L. I., on the famous Interstate Park grounds, Capt. J. A. H. Dressel announces an optional series of events to be arranged on the grounds, all at live birds, in the order desired by the majority. events are open to all, and promises to events are open to all, and promises to provide for some keen sport.

Manager John G. Wright will have the Hamilton Gun Club grounds open all day at Union Course, L. I., for sweepstakes and club competitions, and on the grounds of the Aqueduct Gun Club, at Aqueduct, L. I., there will be some interesting sport. Every hamlet, town, and borough on the island will have its holiday shoot to-day which promises to be the greatest day at the traps ever known in this vicinity.

EXPERTS TO MEET AT THE TRAPS.

Noted Pigeon Shooters Will Finish for Inter-State Handicap.

Special to The New York Times.

QUEENS, L. I., Dec. 31.—Some of the best-known and most skillful trap shooters in America will meet here next Wednesday, in the second of the events of the second series of the Inter-State handicap. By reason of the absence from the city of two of the four contestants entitled to shoot in the event last week, the match was declared off, through the courtesy of the other contestants, so far as the shoot-off was concerned, and on Wednesday, in addition to the entries in the regular event, the four winners—Harold Money of Oakland, N. J.; John S. Fanning of San Francisco, Cal.; J. P. Daniells of New York, and Stephen M. Van Allen of Jamaica, L. I.—will meet for the cup and the gold piece that is to accompany it. These men are all of the young trap shooters, and should provide one of the best matches ever decided in or about New York at a similar event.

It will be the start-off of the new year's open events after the Holiday, and a representative field is expected to compete in the big handicap. The conditions are twenty-five live birds per man, handicap rises, from twenty-eight to thirty-three yards, high guns to win, not class shooting. Thomas W. Morfey of Queens, L. I., Robert A. Welch, the Carteret Gun Club expert; Charles A. Lincoln of Hempstead, L. I., Lockwood Ade of New York, William H. Hopkins of Aqueduct, L. I., and others of equal repute have signified their intention of competing in the event and in the extra sweepstakes contests at the Inter-State Park traps.

GAME BIRDS IN A CITY PARK.

Covey of Ruffed Grouse Established in Van Cortlandt.

Strange quarters on city property, a family of ruffed grouse, wandered from none knows where, have established themselves in Van Cortlandt Park, apparently to stay, and for months now has held possession, to the wonderment of park employes and the sportsmen who have noted the odd occupation, for the ruffed grouse now is about the rarest of the native birds in the country about New York. Gunners must go far to find quail or woodcock, but they must go even further to find grouse, and it was natural that the visitors in Van Cortlandt were not identified until some time after their first appearance. How long the parent birds had been there is not known, but it is beyond question that they were there through the breeding season, for when they were recognized as game birds astray from the woods and fields they already had reared a brood and the young grouse were large enough to fly into trees and keep out of possible harm's way when too curious men approached them. Laborers about the park had seen some uncommonly large and strange-looking birds in the brush, but there had been no remarks about them until park officials, who knew the grouse on sight, noticed them. That was late in August. Then there were thirteen in the covey, the pid cock and hen and eleven well-grown youngsters, but thirteen seems to have been an unlucky number for the family, for now but nine members are left, the parent birds still being of the list. In the past three years several from the greatest enemies of their kind, for hawks and owls, and foxes, minks, and coons inhabit city parks only when caged, and, though cats run wild might speedily exterminate the newcomers, the presence of cats is not encouraged there. A possible explanation of the disappearances is that the four missing young birds scattered in search new feeding grounds late in the Autumn, the usual time for such families to divide, but the surrounding country, which is built up in many directions, with well cultivated farm land elsewhere about the park, offers little temptation to grouse, when they already have the security of the woodland of the park to feed in. The nine who are left, however, seem disposed to stay, and as there is an abundance of food for them and few hardships that game birds must five through in wild country, they have every chance to thrive and grow in number if they only stick to the protection of the park boundaries.

The birds are seen most frequently about the golf links, where they venture into the open in search of food. They have been observed, too, quite often near the lake. They have been free from molestation, and in the months of their residence there have grown accustomed to the presence of men to such an extent that they seek cover only when approached closely. Sportsmen who have seen them are still wondering how they got into Van Cortlandt Park, and how far they came to find a refuge there, for there are no grouse in a wild state within miles of that neighborhood.

Staten Island's New Gun Club.

Keeping pace with the advancement of the interest in trap shooting, the gunners of Richmond Borough have organised the Staten Island Gun Club. Headquarters have been secured at Silver Lake, Staten Island, and a programme of holiday and weekly cup and sweepstakes events arranged. The following are the newly chosen officers of the organization: President—George Bechtel; Vice President—Dr. J. A. Albrecht; Secretary and Treasurer—Albert A. Schneverling; Board of Trustees—Frederick Schoverling, Frank Pommer, John J. Schoen, and the above officers. The club will hold its holiday events to-day at Silver Lake, the principal event being a thirty-five-bird contest, in which all hands have entered.

QUARREL AMONG GOOD DRIVERS.

Two Associations Want to Control Brooklyn Speedway.

Differences between the Pleasure Drivers' Association of the Borough of Brooklyn and the Parkway Driving Club of the same borough have reached a point where the plans for the parade of the Brooklyn Speedway drivers are likely to be abandoned. The Pleasure Drivers' Association proposed the Speedway in Brooklyn, and by pressure brought to bear on Park Commissioner George V. Brower, and public meetings, so stirred up interest in the matter that the Speedway became a reality. The Parkway Driving Club seconded the efforts of the Pleasure Drivers' Association, but beyond that did nothing it is claimed.

Since the completion of the path, the politicians in the Parkway Club's ranks have, it is said, endeavored to have some men of their own choosing appointed by the Park Department to take charge of the Brooklyn drive and roadway. This is not to the liking of the Pleasure Drivers, and they propose to have introduced into the Legislature after the session convenes, a bill taking the appointment of the Superintendent of the Brooklyn Speedway out of the hands of the civil service, so that one of the association's members may be appointed, one who is a Pleasure Driver and who will conduct the speedway in the interest of other pleasure drivers. That the Parkway Club will oppose this seems certain. The Pleasure Drivers' Association is the larger of the two organizations, having nearly nine hundred members, and President William M. Clark of the association proposes to utilize this strength in carrying on the fight.

BROOKLYN DRIVERS' PLANS.

Road Racing and Matinee Contests for the Holiday.

Should the first day of the century dawn pleasant and clear, the Brooklyn lovers of the light-harness horse will have a busy holiday. Light road wagons will be used if the weather is clear, as anticipated, and if snow should fall, as many of the reinsmen fondly hope, sleighs will be out in force, and the annual races down the road for the whips and magnums of wine will be hotly contested. On the Brooklyn Speedway there will be a gala day from all appearances. All the noted road drivers will be out behind the fast steppers, and the Parkway Driving Club's pretty little course will be the headquarters of the spectators and drivers.

On almost every course of any pretensions on Long Island, there will be matinées. At Valley Stream, in particularly lively. There will be a match race between W. H. Gillen's sorrel gelding Charles W. and Thomas West's famous old brown horse Dutch Tom, a free-for-all and a 2:50 class in which Aggonetto, Lee Cuyler, Rudd, Merry Sappho, and other good ones will be seen, in what promises to be lively and very interesting sport. Smith's Irma Park track will be the scene of some spirited trials and matinée races at Valley Stream. A free-for-all and a running race have been carded, the prizes being many bushels of oats, always acceptable in a stable large or small.

HOLIDAY SPORTS AT FLUSHING.

New Fox Hunters, Golfers, and Athletes Will Enjoy Themselves.

Special to The New York Times.

FLUSHING, L. I., Dec. 31.—Such a sporting welcome as the new century will receive in the sporting line at this town to-morrow will surpass anything ever attempted heretofore. The Flushing Athletic Association will hold a big open handicap cross-country run, the main feature of which will be the presence of Maxwell E. Long, the amateur champion sprinter and winner of numerous international races at the Paris Exposition last year. There will be a big turnout of the noted runners of Flushing. Another important event will be the cross-country handicap run of the Mohawk Athletic Club of Flushing, in which Leo Lawler, the young sprinter who captured the big run of the Wahsatah Boat Club and finished second in the Star Athletic Club event, will compete.

At Oakland there will be handicaps over the golf links. Flushing club golfers will also be out in force for the New Year's day handicap. At the Bide-a-Wee Flushing players will have another contest with the clubs and ball over the full eighteen-holes course.

The chief event of the day will be the cross-country ride of the Flushing Driving Club. H. G. Murray, master of the hounds, has arranged this, and if the ground is not too hard the ride will be a drag hunt over the Flushing, Oakland, Bay Side, and Little Neck fields, if the scent will hold for the pack of American and English foxhounds there will be a paper chase on horseback, in which two members of the club will officiate as "hares" and scatter bits of "scent" along the trail. A luncheon at Sherry Acres, the country home of G. Howland Leavitt, with Miss Sarah Leavitt as hostess, will follow the run.

BOSTON'S SIX-DAY RACE.

Riders Led Records in Early Part of Contest in Spite of Many Accidents.

BOSTON, Dec. 31.—The six days' bicycle race in the Park Square Garden was started at 1:20 o'clock this afternoon, in the presence of 3,000 people, and from the signal to go provided excitement for the spectators. The pace was hot from the beginning, as it must have been for the riders to accomplish the result they did in setting a new record for the first 100 miles.

By agreement the competitors kept together for the first hour, and the score recorded for each was twenty-three miles six laps. This merely gave them a warming up.

With the beginning of the second hour Gougolts took the lead, with McEachern and Downy nearly together, next, and the other riders, well bunched, close behind.

Alex McLean of Chelsea and W. L. Baker of Sydney, N. S. W., were the only men of the nineteen entered who did not start. With the exception of Louis Gimm of Pittsburg, all the riders were in good condition. Gimm was badly used up by his fall on Saturday evening, and late in the afternoon was sent to the city hospital suffering from the reopening of a wound received some time ago while riding in San Francisco.

At 3 o'clock Gougolts led, with McEachern second. The first mishaps were to Waller and Dubois, who had punctured tires at 3½ hours, both leaving the track for repairs, Waller losing one lap and Dubois three laps before returning. The race continued without important changes in position until at 3:26 o'clock, when Waller, McEachern, Gougolts, Walthour, Stinson, Muller, and Gimm went down, through Kaeser's wheel slipping. The others piled up on the Germans, but he and Gimm only were hurt. Both were taken off, but later Kaeser returned with a sprained wrist in splints.

Gimm was sent to the City Hospital. Then McLean ran into a post and fractured his shoulder blade, returning to the track at 5 o'clock, after the fracture had been reduced and bandaged. Downey at 4:40 took a fall, bumped his head into unconsciousness, and cut his shin and elbow. Ryser was also sent into the emergency room from the effects of a fall.

Kaeser led at the one-hundred-mile point, the time being 4 hours 27 minutes 21⅘ seconds, a new record for the distance. The final sprint, before supper, at 6:30, gave the men a chance to spread themselves, and the crowd went wild with delight when Stinson went from the middle of the bunch to the front and passed Gougolts, the leader. He finished the afternoon in first place, in spite of the efforts of the bunch to catch him; the distance covered being just 113 miles. The positions of the riders at the close of the afternoon's racing were as follows:

Stinson, Gougolts, St. Leon, McEachern, Walthour, Kaeser, and Fischer, all 113 miles, and Downey, Pr. Jorcha, Ryser, Muller, Babcock, Lawrence, Waller, and Dubois, the last named being only 92 miles 4 laps.

The evening racing began at 7:34, and Turville and Waller were not among the starters, the former having a bad leg, while Waller complained of his eyes. Soon after the start Muller changed wheels, all the men except Dubois, Ryser, and Auscourtier gaining a lap on him. A lively sprint began near the close of the first hour, but the men did not change their positions.

Between 10 and 10:30 Walthour did a little sprinting, shaking the bunch up, but the company was too fast to win back any of the lost laps. At 10:30 it was announced that the lap lost by "Bobbie" Walthour on account of a punctured tire had been restored to him, and that he was up with the leaders. He was at the head of the column at the time, and was cheered loudly. Harry Elliot could not ride, as the presence of the motor-pacing machine on the track would be extremely dangerous to the riders.

It was also announced that Referee Kelsey after a rider may notify his trainers, and have four laps in which to change his wheel. All laps after four will be lost. In the absence of this rule, Walthour and Stinson were credited with lost laps.

The scores at the end of the tenth hour and the day's finish were as follows: Walthour, 210.3, Stinson, 210.3, Gougolts, 210.3, Kaeser, 210.3, McLean, 210.3, McEachern, 210.3, Downey, 210.3, Fischer, 210.3, Frederick, 210.3, Babcock, 209.6, Ryser, 209.6, Muller, 208.3, Auscourtier, 208.3, Dubois, 124.6.

YALE BEATEN BY FOND DU LAC.

Visitors Were Soundly Trounced by Wisconsin Basket Ball Players.

Special to The New York Times.

FOND DU LAC, Wis., Dec. 31.—The fastest game of basketball ever played in Fond Du Lac, if not in the United States, was put up here to-day between Yale and the Fond Du Lac Athletic Club teams to-night, resulting in a defeat of Yale by a score of 13 to 16. Called by police in Saturday night's game, as well as the defeat suffered a year ago, when the sons of Eli were beaten three straight games by a Fond Du Lac team, the visitors went in to play for all their worth from the start.

The first half ended 7 to 3 in favor of the home team, but the second half opened with the tables turned. Yale earning two field goals in quick succession. Then repeatedly few fouls were called, though each team scored five field goals. The star plays of the game were Perkins's, in Fond du Lac, throwing a goal over his head, and Burch's, also of the local team, throwing a goal from the centre of the floor. The team work of Yale was good. The line-up:

Yale.	Position.	Fond du Lac.
Rogers	R. F.	Burch
Lockwood	L. F.	Watson
Clark	C.	Perkins
Colton	R. G.	Perkins
Hyatt	L. G.	Rogers

Referees—Davis (Omaha)—Tom Anderson, Timekeepers—E. R. Whitcomb and Eugene Bartlett. Scorer—Smith.

AILSA BOUGHT BY H. S. REDMOND.

Purchase Will Add English Boat to Proposed Yawl Fleet.

Henry S. Redmond of the New York Yacht Club has completed the purchase of the fast and famous ninety-foot cutter Ailsa, in England, through the agency of Gardner & Cox, and in the early Spring the yacht will be sent across the Atlantic and delivered to her new owner at City Island. The Ailsa is a Fife built boat, and has played a prominent part in English yacht racing for a number of years, her greatest claims having been won in her races against the Prince of Wales's Britannia. Originally she was a cutter, but for that a jawl rig was substituted, under which she has proved even faster and better than as a cutter. Her length over all is 128 feet, water line, 88.5; draught, 16, and beam, 23.5 feet. The plans for further alteration have been made by H. C. Wintringham.

The purchase by Mr. Redmond of this boat is said to mean that racing by a class of ninety-foot yawls will form a large part of the sport of American yachtsmen in the coming season. It is stated authoritatively that Royal Phelps Carroll, also of the New York Yacht Club, has decided to alter his ninety-foot cutter Navahoe, a Herreshoff built craft, to yawl rig. The alteration of the former defender of the American Cup, the Vigilant, now owned by Commodore Percy Chubb, of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club, from cutter to yawl, has already begun. All these boats are of very nearly the same measurement, and even without further additions to the class they should make very interesting racing.

BASEBALL MEN CONFIDENT.

Hickey and His Associates Do Not Anticipate Trouble.

OMAHA, Neb., Dec. 31.—President Thomas J. Hickey does not anticipate any war in baseball circles during the coming season between the National and American Leagues. Neither does he believe that any obstacle will arise to interfere with the successful operation of the Western League along the lines which eventually shall be determined upon. Mr. Hickey to-day held a short consultation with President Keith and Manager Rourke of the Omaha Club, and Manager Beall, who has been awarded the Minneapolis franchise for the coming season.

After the conclusion of the conference President Hickey talked freely on baseball matters. "The National League," he said, "has turned over to us the territory which comprised a part of the American League last year—Kansas City, Minneapolis and St. Paul—and we intend to occupy it. Some obstacles have been thrown in the path of our league, but I am firmly of the belief that the only Western League next season will be the one that was organized in this city a year ago. It is true that Indianapolis and Louisville are negotiating for franchises in the Western League. Their admission would probably mean the dropping of Denver and Pueblo, as a circuit, with Pueblo on the west and Indianapolis on the east, would be too unwieldy. However, this proposition is one that the League must take up."

COTTON TRADE IN AMERICA.

Superintendent King's Annual Report Gives Statistics Covering a Century.

The annual report of Superintendent King of the Cotton Exchange, issued yesterday at the close of business, included the following:

"The movement of the cotton crop at the Port of New York for the calendar year is as follows: Stock Dec. 31, 1899, 120,119 bales; gross receipts, 921,861; exported to Great Britain, 278,596; to France, 87,769; to Continent, 308,455; to Japan, &c., 19,853; forwarded to mills, including sales at New York to same, 312,837; burned, 4,789, leaving stock Dec. 31, 1900, 82,272 bales. Transactions in spot cotton, including deliveries upon contract, were 807,588 bales. The lowest price for middling uplands was 7 9-16c, the highest 11c. The lowest price for contracts for future delivery was reached Jan. 30, when November and December delivery sold both at 6.86c. The highest price was made on Oct. 8, when October delivery sold at 10.60c. The marked advance in price during the past year is the result, on the one hand, of a decreased supply, and, on the other, of a steady increase in consumption.

"The close of the present century suggests a brief review of the cotton industry of this country, the remarkable growth of which from a crop of about 9,000 bales in the year 1790 to the more closely shown by a glance at the following figures: The total production in 1800-1807 was 120,000 bales; 1821-2, 336,000 bales; 1834-5, 1,150,000 bales; 1860-1, 2,450,000 bales; 1880-1, 6,950,000 bales; 1870-1, 4,350,000 bales; 1890-1, 8,650,000 bales; 1899-0, 11,274,000 bales; 1899-1900, 9,436,000 bales. The increase in production is still more remarkable if we consider that in 1800 the average weight per bale was about 225 pounds. By 1830 it had increased to 250 pounds, by 1860 to 305 pounds, from which period the weight has steadily increased, until the present average of about 500 pounds has been reached. Definite data cannot be given as to the acreage under cultivation prior to 1874-9, at which time, according to the Department of Agriculture at Washington, the area was 12,295,000 acres. This area has since been doubled.

"While the production of cotton has shown such wonderful increase, encouraging the belief that the limit has been reached, yet, when it is explained that the present area under cultivation in cotton is less than 40,000 square miles, or less than one-eighth of the land area of Texas, the possibilities of the enormous producing power of this country becomes at once manifest. While our producing power enables us to supply the world with the raw material, we view with equal interest and pride the rapid increase in our spinning industry. In 1850 the quantity of cotton consumed in this country was less than 1,000,000 bales; in 1870 it had increased to 1,000,000 bales, last year the takings of the mills amounted to 3,600,000 bales. These striking figures are very largely the result of the recent industrial enterprise of the South, whose wonderful activity in the erection of cotton mills has no parallel. In 1871 the Southern mills consumed 90,000 bales, in 1880 less than 500,000 bales. Last year this consumption was close to 1,400,000 bales; this year it may reach 1,800,000 bales. It is not optimistic to say that in the near future, with the continued development which the South will assuredly make, this country will consume the larger half of her own cotton production and supply the markets of the world with the goods thus manufactured. In addition to the brighter outlook of the foreign markets, the opening of the Oriental markets presents a new avenue of trade, of which our cotton-goods merchants will not be slow to take advantage.

"Briefly, the outlook for the cotton trade in this country is one of great promise. The world's consumption of cotton has grown to enormous proportions, requiring from the United States annually a crop of large dimensions in order to supply the demands of the consumer. That this consumption will steadily grow is beyond question. Fluctuations in demand there will be, but the increase, nevertheless, will be marked, and with it the continued reign of 'King Cotton' is assured."

QUAY'S SENATORIAL FIGHT

House Caucus Seems to Indicate His Election.

Opponents Say the Caucus Vote Was Padded—Declare He Will Be Defeated.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Dec. 31.—On the eve of the organization of the Legislature Harrisburg is to-night a seething turmoil of political excitement. The first official move of the Republican legislators-elect in the form of a caucus of members of the House resulted in what appears on the surface to be a Quay victory. This was the production of 92 votes for Marshall of Allegheny, the stalwart Republican candidate for Speaker, just the number necessary to elect him.

The stalwarts claim that they have several more votes under cover, and say they are perfectly satisfied with the situation, but, on the other hand, the anti-Quay, or "insurgent," Republicans insist that several of the votes produced at to-night's caucus were bogus and that the best Marshall can do is 87 votes, and that the insurgents, with the Democrats, will elect their candidate for Speaker to-morrow and organize the House on an anti-Quay basis. The stalwart Republicans will control the organization of the Senate, without doubt.

Almost every political leader in the State is here to-night, and probably at no time since the fight against Mr. Quay began, more than five years ago, has the feeling been so intense. To add to the excitement political clubs and brass bands from various cities and towns are filling the streets, and the display of red fire and other accessories is prodigious. Mr. Quay spent the day and night at his house, resting very quietly, as he is far from well. He received occasional reports from his lieutenants, but declined to say anything for publication.

Both branches of the Legislature will organize at noon to-morrow, and in the evening the eventful caucus of Republicans will be held to decide the Senatorial question. The Quayites claim they will produce at least the 127 necessary to elect their leader in joint convention on Jan. 16, while the anti-Quayites are equally strenuous in their declaration that Mr. Quay will never be the Senator.

A caucus of House Democrats was held to-night at which 90 of the 96 members were present. The absentees were accounted for. A resolution was unanimously adopted in favor of fusion with the anti-Quay Republicans. The Democrats will meet again at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning to prepare a slate of officers and employees of the House and to further confer with the anti-Quay Republicans on fusion.

Messrs. Tiffany, Hill, Arnold and Alexander, who were reported as being present and answering to their names at the House Republican caucus, stated after the gathering that they were not present and had given no person authority to answer for them. They said further that at the time of the caucus they were attending a conference of the anti-Quay Republicans at their headquarters at the Commonwealth Hotel. The anti-Quay leaders claim that Mr. Taylor of Bradford, who is alleged to have answered the roll call, was also not in attendance at the caucus.

A secret conference of the anti-Quay Republicans was held to-night, at which fifty-eight members were reported as present and pledging themselves to vote for fusion. Senator Martin of Philadelphia, anti-Quay leader, said to-night:

"The reason of the Quay people disclosure the fact that they are six short of the number of votes necessary to elect a Speaker of the House. The pretense that they had men present who were not only absent but actually taking part in the anti-Quay conference was a childish bluff. It worked in 1895, in the Chairmanship fight. This time the only result of padding the roll is to bring out the indignant denials of the men whose names are misused, and to hold the cheap Quay tricksters up to ridicule and humiliation. It also uncovers the desperation which drives them to such shallow tactics.

"Mr. Marshall will be defeated for Speaker to-morrow, and this will carry with it also the defeat of Mr. Quay."

CAZNEAU M'LEOD A SUICIDE.

Was Secretary and Treasurer of the Richmond Tobacco Trade.

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Dec. 31.—Mr. Cazneau McLeod, Secretary and Treasurer of the Richmond Tobacco Trade and private secretary to Gov. McKinney during his administration, committed suicide early this morning by firing a pistol ball into his brain. The act was committed in the bathroom while the family slept.

Mr. McLeod left no communication to his family, nor had he said anything to indicate that he contemplated self-destruction. He owned considerable property in Galveston, Texas, and it is thought the knowledge that this had been destroyed or greatly damaged bore heavily upon his mind.

He was fifty-four years old, a native of Georgia, and was married to a daughter of William Marshall, who was long the British Vice Consul here. He leaves a widow and four children. Mr. McLeod's father was Gen. McLeod, who was a prominent figure in the affairs of the Texas republic preceding the war with Mexico. Mr. McLeod's mother was a Miss Lamar, and she came of a great and distinguished family. Justice L. Q. C. Lamar was her near relative. Mr. McLeod was educated at the University of Virginia.

ALASKAN NATURALIZATIONS.

Commissioners Said to be Indicted for Issuing Illegal Papers.

Special to The New York Times.

CANTON, Ohio, Dec. 31.—N. J. Trodo of this city to-day received a letter from Eagle City, Alaska, which contained the statement that all the United States Commissioners on the Yukon River have been indicted on the charge of having issued illegal naturalization papers.

Mr. Trodo was Government Receiver of Public Money at Circle City, Alaska, but resigned his position last Winter in order to come home and form a gold mining company. He served on the first Grand Jury, Circle City, and was chosen delegate to the Republican National Convention, but sent his credentials to a Canton man to represent the territory.

Mr. Trodo's information in regard to the indictments is that the Commissioners issued illegal naturalization papers to foreigners, and that these foreigners in turn have taken up many of the best claims in the paying gold districts. From his personal knowledge Mr. Trodo says that foreigners succeeded in getting possession of a large amount of the best gold territory in the Yukon section. He says that if the indictments against the Commissioners are proved to be well founded, there will be a large amount of good gold territory revert to the United States.

PLAYED BAGPIPES HIGH IN AIR.

Stonemason on Top of a 282-Foot Chimney Celebrated Its Completion.

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 31.—John Anderson, a stone mason, standing on the top of the chimney attached to the Prudential Company's new building, in Bank Street, 282 feet above the sidewalk, played airs on a bagpipe shortly after 3 o'clock this afternoon.

The last touches of the chimney were put on this morning, and at noon an American flag was placed on top, marking its completion. Anderson set the first and last stones on the chimney. He got out his bagpipes this afternoon to celebrate the end of his job. He walked around the caping playing lively Scotch airs, which were plainly audible to those below, and thousands stopped on the street to witness the novel scene.

Taft temporary receiver of the assets of Bowlby, Klein & Becker and Bowlby & Becker, manufacturers of women's shirtwaists at 348 Broadway, on the application of Myers, Goldsmith & Bronner, for creditors who recently filed a petition in bankruptcy against them.

EDWARD MORLEY.—A meeting of creditors of Edward Morley, doing business as George A. Caster & Co., merchant tailors at 17 to 19 John Street, was held yesterday, before Referee in Bankruptcy F. K. Pendleton, at 44 Broadway. Ten claims, amounting to $12,500, were filed, and F. Palmer Page was elected trustee. The schedules showed liabilities of $16,000 and nominal assets of $111,250.

UNITED STATES PNEUMATIC HORSE COLLAR COMPANY.—Deputy Sheriff Roberts has received an attachment for $5,000 from Kings County against the United States Pneumatic Horse Collar Company of 49 Broadway in favor of Isaac E. Pinquet, and it was served on an officer of the company at 49 Broadway. Since the death of the President of the company, in April last, very little business has been done, and a stockholders' committee reported several months ago that the liabilities were $9,000 and assets $100,000. It was incorporated in March, 1899, with a capital stock of $1,000,000.

Out of Town.

PETITIONS IN BANKRUPTCY.

SOLOMON KASTEL.—Solomon Kastel, clerk, residing at 71 East Fourth Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities $2,661 and no assets.

MAX PETSOLD.—Max Petsold, formerly a dealer in flour at 25 Columbia Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities $3,617 and no assets.

ELMER E. BALL.—Elmer E. Ball, salesman of 914 East One Hundred and Eighty-third Street, Bronx, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities $6,125 and no assets except a life insurance policy of $1,000, pledged for a debt of $160. He was formerly in the stationery business at 2,027 Fifth Avenue.

SAMUEL SOSNOWSKY.—Samuel Sosnowsky, an auctioneer of 27 Montgomery Street, has filed a petition in bankruptcy, with total liabilities $60,189 and no assets. Of the liabilities $34,677 are individual debts to 80 creditors, mostly in this city, contracted from 1897 to 1900 while in the dry goods and liquor business, and $5,511 on account of the firm of S. Sosnowsky & Co. of Wilmington, N. C., in which he was a partner in 1898, to 23 creditors in New York City. Mr. Sosnowsky was in the liquor line in this city for seven years, and was previously in the dry goods line.

BANKRUPTCY PETITIONS IN 1900.

There were 1,377 petitions in bankruptcy filed in the Clerk's office of the United States District Court, this city, during the year 1900. Of these, 1,192 were voluntary and 185 involuntary by creditors. The greater portion of the voluntary petitions filed were by persons who failed years ago, and filed the petitions simply to wipe out their old debts. Some of the involuntary petitions were dismissed, but most of them were adjudicated.

Thirteen persons have filed second petitions. Having received their discharge on old matters, they went into business again, contracted new debts, but were unsuccessful. Some of these have received their second discharge, but most of the cases are still pending. It is not known that any one has yet tried bankruptcy for the third time. Discharges have been refused to a number of bankrupts for various reasons, such as concealment of assets, omitting assets from schedules, and continuing business in the name of the wife. One bankrupt died just as he was about to get his discharge; another failed in the army and let the proceedings go by default; and another was convicted a few days ago of grand larceny in the State Courts.

Discharges have been granted to 1,088 bankrupts during the year. Since the bankrupt act went into effect on Aug. 1, 1898, there have been 2,251 petitions filed and 2,342 discharges granted.

"It is a curious fact," said Robert Walker, one of the clerks in the Bankruptcy Court yesterday, "that petition No. 13 has never been discharged, but No. 1,313 has been discharged, and 13 persons have filed petitions for the second time. Petition No. 1 has never been discharged."

Discharge in Bankruptcy.

Judge Brown of the United States District Court has granted a discharge in bankruptcy to Ignatz Neuman, salesman, of 1,435 Madison Avenue, formerly of Newark, N. J., whose liabilities were $17,382.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—There was a sigh of relief on the Stock Exchange at 11 o'clock this morning, when no failures were announced. Americans were marked up from ⅛ to 4, and the rapidity with which all the offerings here were taken up for New York had a good effect in steadying other departments. There was even a better feeling in West Australians. Lake Views showed a recovery, but London and Globes were offered and further declined 2s. 6d. British Columbias were steady. Le Roi No. 2 was 1 higher.

On the Street Americans for a time boomed and then eased off, Erie preferred advancing 3 points.

The demand for money was strong, discounts were steady, and there was little doing.

Consols for money, 97⅝; consols for the account, 97 11-16; Atchison, 48⅝; Canadian, 94⅝; St. Paul, 153¾; Illinois Central, 136; Louisville, 104; Union Pacific preferred, 88¾; New York Central, 150; Erie, 36⅝; Pennsylvania, 77¾; Reading, 42⅞; Erie first preferred, 69⅝; Northern Pacific preferred, 90⅝; Grand Trunk, 7⅝; Anaconda, 10; Rand Mines, 38⅝.

Bar silver steady at 29 9-16d per ounce.

Money, 4 per cent. Rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 4@4 1-16 per cent.; three months' bills, 4@4⅛ per cent.

The amount of bullion withdrawn from the Bank of England on balance to-day was £60,000.

The Stock Exchange here and the Continental Bourses will be closed Tuesday, Jan. 1.

SMALL FAILURES IN LONDON.

LONDON, Dec. 31.—The fears of further failures in connection with the collapse of the London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited, were not realized to any great extent to-day. Only three failures were announced, those of Thomas S. Egan, G. F. Barber, and Fitzgerald & Co., all connected with the West Australian market. None of these failures was regarded as important.

The London and Globe Finance Corporation sent a circular to its shareholders this morning calling a meeting for Jan. 9 for the purpose of passing a resolution to wind up the company.

The circular says the capital of the company is locked up in securities on which, at present, it is impossible to realise, and the corporation therefore, by reason of its liabilities, is unable to carry on business.

In Continental Centres.

BERLIN, Dec. 31.—Internationals were firm on the Boerse to-day, particularly Chinese, on the Peking report that peace is imminent. Banks were considerably harder. Mines were strong on bear covering. Canadian Pacifics and Americans advanced sharply.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 41½ pfennigs for checks. Discount rates—Short bills, 7 per cent.; three months' bills, 4⅛ per cent.

PARIS, Dec. 31.—Prices opened firm on the Bourse to-day, especially for internationals, on the news from China of the Emperor's acceptance of the terms of the joint note of the powers. Later, there was a reaction owing to stiff contangos, although Parquet stocks were steady. At the close prices were firmer. Kafirs were easier.

Three per cent. rentes, 101f. 87½c. for the account. Exchange on London, 25f. 16c. for checks.

Spanish fours closed at 70.12½.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Dec. 31.—Boston had a brisk market in Sugar, Federal Steel, National Tube, Atchison, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, and Union Pacific. Mining shares generally were rather slow, although they held firm; Amalgamated rose, on the impetus given in New York; Baltic rose to 81½, and Wolverine advanced 1½, to 46½. There were heavy transactions in New England Gas and Coke 5s, $124,000 of them selling in the morning at 70¼@71½, the stock touching 15¼, later 14¼. Gossip hints at comparative peace in gas matters on Beacon Hill this session. Planters' Compress was up 1, at 23. Agricultural Chemical, American Woolen, and Massachusetts Electric continued in good request. United Fruit sold ex dividend, and lost 2, to 120. The mining stocks generally softened at the close.

At the Clearing House, money between the banks was quoted at 3 per cent., and New York funds, for the first time since Nov. 7, sold at a discount, being quoted at from par to 10c discount.

Call money is ranging from 4½ to 5 per cent., with some loans made as high as 6 per cent. Four to six months' money is quoted at 4@4½ per cent. on the highest grade of collateral, and at 4½@5 per cent. on mixed securities.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 31.—In the last ten minutes of to-day's market a number of the local favorites bloomed. Philadelphia Electric, which began to move Saturday, rose ⅝ to 6. Union Traction gained 2 to 37, a bid of 36¾ having been previously made for 1,000 shares. Electric Company of America got up to 10, and Marsden to 7⅛. The greatest movement was in Pennsylvania Railroad. On the first sale that stock rose 2½ per cent. to 27¼, responding to the spurt in London and New York.

The strength of Philadelphia Electric was based on the idea that ex-Senator Quay would control the Legislature and that that body would shortly authorize the municipality to enter into long-term contracts providing for the lighting of this city. Choctaw was strong, and United Gas developed decided strength at the end of the day.

The market closed strong at the following bid and asked prices:

BULLION AND MINING.

Silver bullion certificates were quoted on the Stock Exchange at 64½@65. There were no sales.

Bar silver was quoted in London at 29 9-16d per ounce, and in New York at 65c. Mexican silver dollars at 50c.

On the Consolidated Exchange 200 shares of Chrysolite sold at .19, 200 Crescent at .19, 1,000 Cripple Creek Consolidated at .12½, 300 Dunkin at 15, 500 Isabella at .70, seller 10; 500 Leadville at .07, 200 Little Chief at .16, 100 Small Hopes at .65, and 200 Standard at 3.70@3.75.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Trading in the outside market on the closing day of the year developed very little of importance, and though a few stocks were fairly active the sum total of the day's business was not very large. A few important changes in prices occurred, but the list as a whole did not vary much from last week's prices.

***

AMERICAN BRIDGE was by far the most active stock, and in this issue trading amounted to nearly 5,000 shares. The quotation for the stock, however, fluctuated but little, and at the close no net change appeared. Early in the day, on the execution of a large order, the common stock sold as high as 45⅞. The preferred stock was less actively dealt in, and after declining fractionally, recovered to 95, closing there unchanged.

***

SHEET STEEL preferred was another of the steel stocks that was prominent. This issue, on relatively small transactions, advanced to 78, and closed there with a net gain of two points. After the close the stock sold at 79¾.

***

CONSOLIDATED EQUIPMENT was traded in to the extent of a thousand shares or more, between 12¾ and 13¾. It closed with a slight net gain at 13¾ bid.

DISTILLING OF AMERICA preferred, after selling up about 1 per cent. at the opening, lost a half point net, closing at 29½ bid. In the common stock there were very few transactions, and this issue closed unchanged.

***

OTIS ELEVATOR developed much strength, though the transactions were not large, the price of the common as well as the preferred stock advanced sharply. The latter sold as high as 91½ and the common closed at 29½ bid, a net gain of 1¾ points. The advance of the last few days in these issues has not called out much stock.

***

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER once more advanced to 22, the highest price at which the stock has sold. It closed with a net gain of three-quarters of a point at 21¾ bid. The other copper stocks were quiet.

***

TRENTON POTTERIES preferred sold to the extent of 50 shares at 58 ex-dividend of 2 per cent. The stock has shown much strength recently as a result of the continuation of the dividends which were resumed last Spring. The dividend which came off yesterday is the fourth dividend of that amount declared this year.

***

TEXAS AND PACIFIC COAL stock advanced still further yesterday to 95. The last sale of the stock is reported to have been made around 78.

***

RUBBER GOODS preferred, on trading in about 1,000 shares, declined to 80, and at the close was offered down to 79½. On the other hand, the common advanced sharply at the close to 30⅝, a net gain of three-quarters of a point.

***

Closing quotations yesterday, compared with those of Saturday, were as follows:

WHEAT HIGHER IN CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, Dec. 31.—On an excitedly active market wheat soared upward to-day, May closing 2¼@2⅝c over Saturday.

There was heavy pressure from buyers at the start. May opened wild, ½@⅝c to 1@1⅛c higher, at 65½@65¾c. Despite heavy profit taking by longs during the first hour, the price held remarkably steady, May dropping only to 75¾c. The opening strength was based on an advance at Liverpool equal to 1½c here, on moderate Northwest receipts and a reiteration of the report that Argentina would have but 46,000,000 bushels, and that of an inferior grade, for export.

The sentiment in the pit was bullish to a degree which needed but little to set it aflame. The report of a visible decrease of 65,000 bushels served as the needed spark, and the demand became even more pressing than before. Shorts and those who had taken profits earlier added to the clamor from commission houses, and in steady leaps May ascended to 78c. Here offerings become weighty again, but prices held well and May closed strong, 2½@2⅝c higher, at 77¾c.

THE SHIP SUBSIDY BILL.

Senator Clay Does Not Think It Will Pass This Session.

ATLANTA, Ga., Dec. 31.—Senator A. S. Clay, who returns to Washington Wednesday, said to-day he did not think the Ship Subsidy bill would pass at this session of Congress.

"If the bill is ever brought to a vote," said the Senator, "it will go through, but a strong effort will be made to keep the matter off, and we hope to succeed. I do not think there will be an extra session."

FOR A BETTER WATER SUPPLY.

Commissioner Dalton Asks Board of Estimate for $2,250,000 — Ramapo Plan May Be Abandoned.

Commissioner Dalton of the Water Supply Department made a requisition on the Board of Estimate yesterday for issues of $2,250,000 for increasing the water supply of the city. Chief Engineer Birdsall said yesterday that the city should spend $10,000,000 every year until the city's water supply was ample for every emergency.

There was talk about the City Hall yesterday to the effect that the Ramapo contract scheme would be abandoned, and that the city officials would start to make contracts for large extensions.

When seen yesterday, Chief Engineer Birdsall said:

"I have never been pledged to the Ramapo plan. I think the city should secure the best supply of water at the lowest figure possible. There is no doubt that large sums of money will have to be spent, and I think the work should be done systematically. If the city appropriated about $10,000,000 each year for water extensions it would not be long before there would be no danger of a water famine. As it is, at the present time and during any dry season the city is in danger of suffering inconveniences through shortage."

Mr. Birdsall made a long report to Commissioner Dalton yesterday explaining that it was necessary for the city to spend at least $5,000,000 for water extensions during 1901.

Commissioner Dalton's letter to the Board of Estimate yesterday contained records to show the sources of New York's supply, and in what sections of the country large additional supplies could be obtained. He asked that bond issues be allowed for the following purposes:

For awards for lands and damages in the watersheds	$500,000
For 100,000 feet of fencing in the watersheds in Putnam and Westchester Counties	60,000
For cleaning up lands in same watersheds	10,000
For lands to add to the storage capacity of the reservoir on the Cross River branch of the Croton River	200,000
For building Cross River reservoir	980,000
For mains to connect the pumping station at Jerome Park with the present water main system	200,000
For wells, pumping station, &c., in Queens	100,000
For examination and surveys of new sources of supply	100,000

Commissioner Dalton said yesterday:

"I hope the Board of Estimate will promptly approve the bond issues. If there is no delay in the Municipal Assembly we will start work soon."

The question of the issue of the bonds was referred to Controller Coler for investigation.

The inheritance tax on the $5,000,000 trust fund left by William H. Vanderbilt to the late Cornelius Vanderbilt has been fixed at $64,210. This fund was distributed by the late Cornelius Vanderbilt to his five children, the present Cornelius Vanderbilt receiving $500,000 and the balance being divided equally between the other children.

BLAZED UP AFTER SIX YEARS.

Yarn Long Buried in Fire Ruins Ignites on Exposure to the Air.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Dec. 31.—The Kilbourne Knitting Works here were destroyed by fire Jan. 3, 1895, and to-day the old fire broke out anew. Workmen digging in the ruins turned up a quantity of yarn and stockings. The pile had not been exposed to the air for more than a minute when it began to smoke and soon burst into flame.

Those who witnessed the occurrence were greatly puzzled to account for the fire. Rutgers College scientists, who have been consulted, explain that when charcoal, wool, or any porous substance is exposed to great heat in an atmosphere that does not permit of combustion the oxygen contained in the pores is expelled. When the substance is again exposed to oxygen at a normal temperature the pores are filled with oxygen so rapidly that sufficient heat is generated to cause spontaneous ignition. It was this that caused the wool at the Kilbourne ruins to burn.

Thinks Mrs. Schickle Was Murdered.

Mrs. Johanna Schmidt of 306 East Thirteenth Street called at the Morgue yesterday and told the officials she believed that Mrs. Barbara Schickle, who died in Bellevue Hospital on Nov. 23, had been murdered. She had been beaten brutally on the Bowery, Mrs. Schmidt contended. The diagnosis of the Bellevue physicians and the autopsy performed by Coroner's Physician William gave nephritis as the cause of death.

TO BE ARRESTED FOR HOMICIDE.

Prisoner Now on the Island Must Answer to More Serious Charge.

When John Flanagan, known to the police as "The Dodger," twenty-three years old, who lived at 212 East Ninety-eighth Street, is released from the workhouse on Blackwell's Island he will be arrested by Detective Reid for having assaulted Vincenzio Machak of 253 William Street, Long Island City, in the saloon of Samuel Schwartz, at 1,880 Second Avenue, on the night of Dec. 22. Machak died on Sunday in St. John's Hospital, Long Island City. Before his death Machak told the Coroner of Queens that he had been assaulted by a man whom he did not know.

The police of East One Hundred and Fourth Street were notified, and Detective Reid was detailed to investigate the case. Yesterday he learned, he said, that Flanagan had assaulted Machak by knocking him down and kicking him. Flanagan was arrested the same night, charged with disorderly conduct, and the next day was sent to Blackwell's Island for ten days. When released he will be arrested for causing the injuries which resulted in Machak's death.

TWO ASPHYXIATED BY GAS.

Man and Woman Found Dead in a Hotel in Brooklyn.

A man, who was later identified as John J. Walker, twenty-three years old, a carpenter living at 17 McAuley Place, Jamaica, and a woman about twenty-five years old, were found dead yesterday morning in a room in the Vesta Hotel, Fulton Street and Vesta Avenue, Brooklyn. They had been asphyxiated by gas, which had escaped from a gas heater. They registered at the hotel on Sunday night as "Mr. Welch and wife, Newark, N. J."

Letters in the pockets of the man led to the identification of the body at the Morgue as that of Walker by his father, a carpenter and builder, with whom he lived. The identity of the woman had not been established by the police up to a late hour last night.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS.

The Wage Scale Negotiations on the New Jersey Central.

There have been a great many stories printed during the last few months about an imminent strike of the firemen and engineers on the Central Railroad of New Jersey. C. H. Warren, Vice President of that road, said yesterday that the basis for these stories were certain conferences which had been going on between a committee of officials and committees of the employes.

The matter under discussion, Mr. Warren explains, was a rearrangement of the scale of wages of firemen and engineers. The present scale was adopted about fifteen years ago, and is admittedly no longer fair to the employes, on account of the increased size of locomotives and other changes. The firemen and engineers were therefore asked to submit their ideas as to a new scale to a committee of officials, of which Division Superintendent W. W. Weats, Jr., was Chairman. The schedule prepared by the employes was not satisfactory to the road, and it was agreed that the road should submit its own schedule to the employes. This schedule was not satisfactory to the employes. They therefore prepared a second schedule, which was practically the same as the first, and the committee of officials declined to accept it. The latter on Dec. 28 offered another schedule to the employes which was not accepted. Thereupon the road made an offer to continue the old rates with certain advances for the large locomotives. This was declined by the employes. The road then made the following offen of arbitration:

The rates of pay offered to the engineers and firemen on this road in the schedule known as the Schedule of Dec. 28, 1900, are fair and just and equal to, and as a general thing, above the average rates of pay now being paid by neighboring lines and competitors, and as an earnest of our good intentions, we are willing to have you name the rate and we will name one, and the two thus chosen to name the third and inquire into this subject and determine whether or not such claim on our part is true, and, in addition, to further settle the matter we are willing for you to select any seven railroads of our immediate neighbors and competitors and are willing to pay an average of the rates now enjoyed by the men of the roads so selected, the arbitrators before mentioned to determine what the said average is.

The scale in effect to-day amounts to a minimum wage of from $3.25 to $3.75 per day. The terms offered by the road would mean a minimum wage of from $3.50 to $4.50 per day. The men demand wages which would run from $4 to $5 per day.

ERIE ROAD'S BIG MORTGAGE.

New Bonds Have Been Fully Underwritten—Central Trust Co. Trustee.

The Central Trust Company will be the trustee under the new collateral trust mortgage for $35,000,000 to be issued by the Erie Railroad to finance the purchase of the Pennsylvania Coal Company. It is understood that $30,000,000 will be issued at once, the remaining $5,000,000 to be reserved for improvements. The shares of the New York, Susquehanna and Western, owned by the Erie Railroad, will be included, it is stated, in the new mortgage.

The new bonds have been fully underwritten, and a large part of the issue will be disposed of by private sale before it will be offered to the public.

Detroit United Railway Company.

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 31.—Articles of association of the Detroit United Railway Company, capitalized at $12,500,000, were filed with the Secretary of State here to-day, together with a franchise fee of $6,000. The new company will take out the franchises and property of the Detroit Electric Street Railway, Detroit, Port Wayne and Belle Isle Railway, Detroit, Gladstone Street Railway, and Detroit Suburban Railway Company. The incorporators are R. T. Wilson, M. O. Wilson, James M. Edwards of New York, Jere C. Hutchins and Albert E. Peters, Detroit; Henry A. Everett and Ralph A. Harmon of Cleveland.

Unwilling to be Examined as Witness.

Newbury D. Lawton, through his counsel, applied to Justice Blanchard in the Supreme Court yesterday for an order vacating a previous order directing his examination as a witness before trial in an action brought by John H. Witbeck against the Chicago General Railway Company for the recovery of $121,072 for money loaned. The action proper is pending in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Ill., and Mr. Lawton resides in this State. He is one of the Directors of the defendant company. The defendant company denies that any money was loaned to it by Mr. Witbeck, and it is on this denial that Mr. Lawton wants the order for his examination here vacated. The Justice reserved his decision.

Brief Railroad Items.

W. A. Read, a member of the banking house of Vermilye & Co., financial agents for the Chicago Great Western Railway, has been elected a Director of that railroad.

H. B. Spencer, a son of President Spencer of the Southern Railway, has been appointed Assistant General Manager of the Louisville and St. Louis lines of the road.

Shipments from Chicago eastbound during the last week show a slight decrease in grain moved, of which 1,362,000 bushels were carried as against 1,320,000 for the previous week. There was also a slight decrease in provisions shipped while flour shipments increased by 42,424 barrels, the total shipped being 180,001 barrels.

RUBBER SHOE MEN MEET.

Representatives of Independent Firms Confer, but Refuse Statement for Publication.

Five men, said to represent the independent rubber boot and shoe manufacturers of the country, met in the Waldorf-Astoria last evening and were in conference several hours.

It was evident that the meeting did not assume the proportions expected. It was announced earlier in the day by a Director of the United States Rubber Company that at least fourteen independent firms were to be represented, and that the plan of forming a combination under the name of the Standard Rubber Shoe Company, to act with the United States Company, and also with the new crude rubber trust lately formed, had been looked on with much favor.

It was said last night after the meeting that there was no unanimity of opinion on the subject of consolidation, and that a working agreement with the trust did not receive the support that was expected. Those present positively refused to make any statement for publication. One of the representatives was asked to explain the meeting at this time, when rumors are rife that the United States Rubber Company is about to pass the dividend on its preferred stock, and he was asked if the merger of interests or the purchase of independent manufacturing plants by the trust would have anything to do with the matter of dividends. To all questions he, as well as his colleagues, refused an answer.

President Shepard of the United States Rubber Company was asked yesterday whether there was anything in the rumors in Wall Street that the dividend on the preferred stock was to be passed at the next Directors' meeting on Thursday.

"I am unable to answer your question at present," he said.

"Will you state whether or not the board will pass or reduce the dividend?" was asked.

"I will not answer that question now. The board meets this week, and I do not think it proper that I should anticipate any action that it might take."

GOV. ODELL INAUGURATED

Elaborate Ceremonial Marks the Occasion at Albany

Newburgers Much in Evidence—Col. Roosevelt Welcomes His Successor—The Governor's Inaugural.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—Gov. Odell took hold of the helm of State to-day amid the greatest inaugural ceremonial and display in the history of the State. The military end of the programme was the most noticeable feature, there being mere muskets and blue coats in evidence than have been seen in Albany in two decades. The new Governor took office at 12:30 P. M., and two hours later ex-Gov. Roosevelt left the city.

Amid the civic and military throng that escorted the new Governor from the Executive Mansion to the Capitol, the spectacle of the Executive's venerable father and his two brothers excited no end of comment. "It's a proud moment for old Mr. Odell. I can tell you," said one of the Newburg visitors. "There never before was a Governor of the State whose father rode to his inaugural with him. It's a great day for Newburg and the Odells."

"If the recently made Executive displays the same presence of mind in dealing with State emergencies that he manifested during the parade to-day he will be rated high for readiness and forethought. Just as the parade reached the Capitol the horse ridden by Major Anthime La Rose of the Tenth Battalion of Albany threw its rider to the pavement. Gov. Odell, whose carriage was near by, opened the door hurriedly, and was about to spring to the street and assist the fallen man, but Private Secretary Graham reached out a detaining hand and reminded the Governor of his dignity and the occasion. The Governor then reluctantly resumed his seat.

The Newburg visitors owned the city. They came as a separate military company, a fire engine company, and the "Governor's Guards," under the command of Capt. J. Dickey. They were conspicuous by their big Odell portrait badges, and they were everywhere. Altogether, 1,200 Guardsmen were in line, outside of the Newburg contingent, civic and military. Every train from the South via the West Shore brought hundreds.

Gov. Odell's inaugural address made a good impression. His earnest manner was favorably commented upon. At his public reception after the inaugural he shook thousands of hands, but neither smiled nor frowned, standing cold and impassive through it all.

The oath of office was administered by Secretary of State John T. McDonough on a new Bible, purchased for the occasion. This concluded the ceremony and the band played and the audience cheered.

The new Governor will begin work early to-morrow morning. He will not see the newspaper men at stated hours, as Col. Roosevelt did, and it is already announced that he will be much harder of access than other Governors for years back have been.

THE CEREMONIES BEGIN.

The ceremonies began at 10:45 o'clock, when the escort column was formed in twelve files front and moved along the route of march to the Executive Mansion.

At the Executive Mansion there had been activity from an early hour. Governor-elect Odell, attended by his secretary, James G. Graham, and his Military Secretary, Major Morrison K. Bird, awaited the coming of Adjt. Gen. Edward M. Hoffman and the other members of his military staff. They had assembled at the office of the Adjutant General at 10 o'clock A. M. and proceeded to the Executive Mansion, reaching there about 11 o'clock. Major Gen. Charles F. Roe and staff also assembled at the Capitol and went to the Executive Mansion to form part of the ex-Governor's escort. Governor Roosevelt, who has been stopping at the Hotel Ten Eyck since his return to this city, yesterday reached the Executive Chamber at 10 o'clock A. M. He was there joined by his secretary, William J. Youngs; his Military Secretary, Col. George Curtis Treadwell, and the other members of his military staff. As he had completed his term of office at midnight there was no official business for him to transact, and he spent the period preceding the arrival of the new Governor in conversation with his staff and with the large number of public men who called to wish him a happy new year.

The parade passed along the line of march under clear skies and a not too cold atmosphere. It was greeted cordially, and the Governor-elect had to bow his acknowledgments. Mr. Odell, Adjt. Gen. Hoffman, Mr. Graham, and Col. Bird rode in the first carriage.

Gov. Roosevelt and staff received Gov. Odell and staff in the public audience chamber of the executive suite. The new Governor was warmly greeted by Col. Roosevelt. They spent several minutes in conversation, until Secretary of State John T. McDonough announced that everything was in readiness for the inaugural ceremony. Then the line, headed by the two Governors and composed of the military staffs, Lieut. Gov. Woodruff, and the other State officers, was formed, and the executive party proceeded to the Assembly Chamber.

IN THE ASSEMBLY CHAMBER.

The inauguration ceremony was most impressive. The Assembly Chamber never presented a more beautiful appearance than it did to-day, and never contained a larger, more representative, or more enthusiastic audience. The ceremony took place on a platform erected over the Speaker's desk. The platform was draped in a profusion of flags and maroon plush, trimmed with gilt braid. In front of the platform, at the centre hung the coat of arms of the State in gold and colors, on a background of blue silk. On either side hung the Stars and Stripes, and brass eagles held each a cluster of seven American flags. Suspended from the balcony directly over the platform was a banner containing the coat-of-arms of the United States, and on either side were groups of flags and bunting.

The chamber was filled to overflowing. On the platform were seated Mrs. Odell, wife of the Governor; B. B. Odell, his father; Albert Odell, his son, and other members of the Governor's family, the wives of the State officers and members of their families, the heads of State departments and their wives, daughters, and their friends. Mr. Odell, Gov. Roosevelt, and the other members of the Executive party entered the chamber at the noon hour and were greeted with applause.

The Right Rev. William Croswell Doane opened the ceremony with prayer. There was an enthusiastic outburst when Gov. Roosevelt rose to extend formal greeting to his successor. In welcoming the new Governor he said:

"It becomes from this moment your high and solemn duty to stand at the executive head of the greatest State within our Union, a State which in point of size, population, wealth, and wide variety of interests and of industries, rises above many a world-famous kingdom or commonwealth. Great powers are given you on the one hand, and, on the other hand, your task is neither light nor easy. But you come to it with the special ability and special training which peculiarly fit you to perform it ably and well. In a sense (a Governor's term begins with his election, for as soon as elected he must begin to make ready for his exacting and engrossing duties.

"The earnest you have already given us of the way in which you regard these duties, and of the spirit in which you approach them, is such that we have the right to express, not merely the hope but the confident belief, that at the end of your term as Governor you will have won the right to stand with that list of public servants whose memory the great Empire State delights to hold in peculiar honor."

THE INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

Gov. Odell remained standing while Gov. Roosevelt addressed him, and at the conclusion of the latter's remarks he delivered his inaugural address as follows:

"With the assumption of responsibilities come doubt and uncertainty which even the applause and good wishes of our friends cannot entirely dissipate. Especially is this true of him into whose keeping is placed the administration of the affairs of our Commonwealth. New York, an empire in itself, with its vast population, its many and diverse interests, demands from its Chief Executive the greatest conservatism, wisdom as to its needs, and that its business affairs shall be transacted with economy and good judgment.

"Under our form of government, when the will of the majority has been expressed, we should forget our partisanship in our desire to uphold and strengthen the hands of those whom for the time being we have clothed with authority and upon whom the responsibility for the proper enforcement of our laws is placed.

"The success of our State Administration depends as much upon its component parts as upon the aggregate, and it is a right which the Executive can demand and every loyal citizen should accord, that in every municipality, in every township and hamlet, the same economical conditions shall prevail as are expected in the administration of our State affairs.

"The burdens of taxation should be so adjusted as to fall lightly upon those who can ill afford to bear them, and be borne more generously by those who have received from the State protection and rights which have given to their vast business interests the success they deserve. Combination in restraint of individual rights should be curbed, and a welcome extended to all whose energy and genius will add to the lustre and fame of the Empire State, and aid us in upholding our business and commercial supremacy. The care of our wards should be as generous as their necessities may require, never extravagant and never niggardly.

"To the Governor is intrusted the execution, and to the Legislature the lawmaking power of the Commonwealth. The duties are separate and distinct, and can never be combined without a serious impairment in the efficiency of both. It shall be my object, therefore, to keep strictly within the letter and spirit of the law, and to give effect to such acts of the Legislature as may seem to me to be in the direction of public good, withholding approval only when such measures fall below this standard.

"In thus aiding in the consummation of all worthy projects I shall be guided solely by the desire to give to the mandates of our Constitution their full effect and to the wishes of our people their full purport.

"If in the performance of these duties I shall in a measure be as successful as have so many of my predecessors; if, upon the threshold of a new century, with all of its possibilities, a positive and affirmative action of the incoming administration can aid in solving those great questions which so much interest us, I shall feel as much pride in the contemplation of such results as you do, Sir, as you look back upon the success which has attended your administration."

BRILLIANT NEW YEAR RECEPTION.

Gov. Odell's first official act was to sign the commissions of his Secretary and the members of his military staff: Secretary, James G. Graham of Newburg; Adjutant General, Edward M. Hoffman of Elmira; Military Secretary, Major Harrison K. Bird of New York City, and the aides. The Governor held the usual noonday reception in the chamber.

Later the Governor and Mrs. Odell received the public from 4 to 6 o'clock, in the Executive Mansion. It proved to be one of the most brilliant and largely attended New Year receptions ever held there. The spacious corridors were banked with fragrant flowers intermingled with palms and rare plants from the mansion's conservatories. The smaller reception rooms, where open fire-places burn brightly, were also gay with flowers.

The receiving line, with Major Harrison K. Bird, the military secretary to the Governor, at its head, stood near the corridor. Gov. and Mrs. Odell were assisted by the wives of the State officers—Mrs. Timothy L. Woodruff, wife of the Lieutenant Governor; Mrs. John T. McDonough, wife of the Secretary of State; Mrs. John C. Davies, wife of the Attorney General; Mrs. John P. Jaeckel, wife of the State Treasurer; Mrs. Edward A. Bond, wife of the State Engineer, and Mrs. Spencer L. Dawes, who is a cousin of Mrs. Odell's.

The stately corridors and reception rooms were filled with groups of military men with jingling swords, handsome uniforms, and gold lace that added much to the brilliancy of the affair.

GOV. ODELL'S APPOINTMENTS.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—Gov. Odell has redesignated Justices George L. Ingram, Edward Patterson, and Morgan J. O'Brien of the First District as Associate Justices of the Appellate Division for the First Department. He has also designated Frank C. Laughlin of the Eighth Judicial District as associate Justice for the same department from May 1, to succeed William Rumsey, whose designation for that department will then expire.

Gov. Odell has signed the commission of James G. Graham as his secretary, and has also appointed Archibald McLaughlin of Rosendale as County Treasurer of the County of Ulster, to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of George Deyo.

STATE OFFICERS SWORN IN.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—The several State officers and their deputies took their oaths of office to-day before Secretary of State John T. McDonough. The first officer to be sworn in, with the exception of the Secretary of State, who took his oath of office last week, was Erastus C. Knight of Buffalo, the new Controller. Controller Knight reached this city from Buffalo yesterday afternoon with Mrs. Knight and their four children.

This morning he announced the appointment of Theodore P. Gilman of New York City as first deputy and Willis E. Merriman of this city as second deputy. Both are, in reality, reappointments, although Mr. Gilman had been Controller of the State since the death of Controller William J. Morgan. Mr. Gilman and Mr. Merriman took their oath of office after Controller Knight.

Lieut. Gov. Woodruff, State Engineer and Surveyor Bond, State Treasurer Jaeckel, and Attorney General Davies were sworn in later in the day.

Col. Roosevelt Leaves Albany.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—Col. Roosevelt breakfasted this morning with the Right Rev. William Croswell Doane, Episcopal Bishop of Albany. He had luncheon with Gen. and Mrs. Robert Shaw Oliver, and left for New York City on the 2:35 o'clock Central-Hudson train. At New York City he will be joined by Congressman Littauer, who will be his guest for some days at Oyster Bay.

COMPLIMENTS COL. ROOSEVELT.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—Chief Justice Alton B. Parker of the Court of Appeals paid ex-Gov. Roosevelt a strong compliment at the dinner given in the retiring Governor's honor at the Fort Orange Club last evening.

He stated that he desired to bear testimony to the fact that in his experience no Governor had done more to keep the standard of the bench at the highest possible point. Gov. Roosevelt, he said, had honored him several times by consulting him on proposed judicial appointments. Through the efforts of the Governor the standard of the bench has been made higher than ever before.

IMPRISONED IN OVERTURNED CAR

Panic Follows a Collision on Eighth Avenue.

Bystanders Pull the Frightened Passengers Through the Windows—A Woman and Two Men Hurt.

An overturned car, with every window in it smashed, and filled with panic-stricken people who were unable to get out through the doors and finally escaped from it through the windows, was the result of a collision last night between a Twenty-eighth Street cross-town car and an Eighth Avenue trolley car.

Although almost everybody in the Eighth Avenue car, the one overturned, was either bruised or cut in some way, only three of the passengers were so badly injured that they required the services of an ambulance surgeon. The others, after recovering from the fright in which the upsetting of the car had thrown them, scattered among the neighboring drug stores, where their wounds were dressed.

The twenty-odd passengers in the cross-town car were thrown to the floor in heaps, but none of them was injured. Philip Clark of 306 West Fifty-eighth Street, the motorman of the crosstown car, was locked up in the West Thirtieth Street Police Station immediately after the accident.

Eighth Avenue car No. 1,801 was going south at 10:30 o'clock. The motorman stopped on the north side of Twenty-eighth Street, and then started on again. A moment later the crosstown car, going east at a good rate of speed, struck it between the two trucks with a crash that made everybody in the vicinity jump. The Eighth Avenue car was turned over on its side, all the windows were smashed, and the thirty passengers were thrown on one side.

The force of the blow had so wrenched the car that the rear door was twisted out of shape and could not be opened. The motorman had fastened the latch on the front door so that nobody could get out that way, and the passengers found that they were locked in. In a few moments everybody in the car knew about this, and there was a scene of the wildest confusion. Some bystanders, however, kicked away the window sashes and began to lift out the passengers.

The first to come out was Mrs. Margaret Needham of 770 West Side Avenue, Jersey City. She was badly bruised about the face and body and carried a two-year-old baby in her arms. She paid no attention to her own injuries, however, until she learned that the baby was unhurt. The other passengers who were attended by an ambulance surgeon were Felix Bradbury of 210 East Eighty-eighth Street and Joseph H. Brown of 124 Lewis Street. They were bruised and cut about the face and hands.

Detective Sergeant Devery, who was a passenger on an up-town car, jumped off and succeeded in rescuing a woman and her ten-year-old son from the wrecked car by pulling them through a window. The woman disappeared in a cab before her name could be learned.

Mrs. Needham in describing the accident said that the motorman on the Twenty-eighth Street car tried to shut off the compressed air on his car, but for some reason it seemed that he could not, and he then cried to the motorman on the Eighth Avenue line to give him the right of way, which he endeavored to do, but he did not have sufficient time to avert the collision.

Philip Clark, the motorman who was arrested, says that before crossing Eighth Avenue he signaled to the other car that he was going to cross in front of it, and that his signal was disregarded.

At midnight the car lines were still blocked.

T. J. BRADLEY AT BELLEVUE.

Congresaman, Victim of Alcoholism, Found Unconscious on the Street.

Thomas J. Bradley, Democratic Congressman for the Ninth District, was found lying unconscious at the corner of the Bowery and Broome Street yesterday afternoon.

Policeman Dennis J. Lyons of the Eldridge Street Station recognized the Congressman, and immediately rang for an ambulance. Dr. Wineberg of the Gouverneur Hospital responded, and after an examination, he pronounced Mr. Bradley to be suffering from acute alcoholism. The Congressman was then taken to Bellevue Hospital, where his case was diagnosed as alcoholism, and he was placed in the alcoholic ward.

Charities Commissioner John W. Keller, lying on a sickbed in his apartment in the New Amsterdam Hotel, was much shocked when he heard of Congressman Bradley's predicament.

"'Tommy' Bradley was a decent fellow," he said, "kindly and likable, and a bright and clever product of the east side. Just his love of whisky and of strong drink has carried him down to this. It is a bad thing. He lost his place in Congress and everything else through it."

Mr. Bradley is still a very young man, having been born in 1870, and at the outset of his political career gave promise of a brilliant future. He was educated at the public schools and graduated from the College of the City of New York with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1877. He taught in the public schools in the city until 1891, at the same time attending the University Law School, from which institution he was graduated as a Bachelor of Laws in 1891.

His political career began in 1891, when he was appointed a Deputy Assistant District Attorney, which position he held till July, 1895, when he resigned to attend to his private law practice. During his tenure of office there was some scandal about pigeon-holed indictments. The affair at the time created a great deal of scandal.

He was elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress and re-elected to the Fifty-sixth Congress, receiving 11,694 votes, to 6,447 for John Steibling, Republican, and 2,396 for Lucien Saniel, Socialist Labor. His house is at 30 Lewis Street, this city. He was not renominated at the last election. Ex-Judge Goldfogle will succeed him as Representative of the Ninth District.

Many New Orleans Groceries Closed.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 1.—To-day, by the operation of a new law, nearly 1,000 greengrocers, butchers, and poultry sellers in New Orleans are forced to close their places of business permanently. The law in question prohibits the establishment of a private market within 3,200 feet of a public market, and was enacted in the interest of the public market lessees, in order to increase the revenue of the city. It has been tested and upheld in the courts. The public markets now have a monopoly, and food prices in New Orleans will go up 10 or 15 per cent.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Jan. 1.—H. I. He arrived at the store at 6 o'clock and opened the safe in the office; then, standing near it, shot himself. He is not yet dead, but the physicians regard his death as only a question of a few hours. Mr. Cohen came to Jacksonville from New York, where he has relatives. He is one of the prominent members of the Phoenix Club.

DEVELOPMENTS IN SUGAR WAR.

It Is Reported Differences Between Arbuckle and Havemeyer Interests Are Nearing Adjustment.

TOLEDO, Ohio, Jan. 1.—Very substantial reports are current that the coffee and sugar war, which has waged so long and bitterly between the Arbuckle and Havemeyer interests, is nearing an adjustment satisfactory to all parties. For four years the Woolson Spice Company has not made an advance in the price of roasted coffee. It is now understood that to-morrow, following an understanding with, and with the assent of the Arbuckles, the Woolson people will order an advance of one-half cent per pound on their roasted product.

Word also comes through private sources that H. Mowell & Co. of New York, one of the largest concerns of its kind in the country, will to-morrow advance granulated sugar five points, bringing it up to that now quoted by the American Sugar Refining Company, or, in other words, the Havemeyer interests.

James Secor of the Woolson Spice Company, was asked whether the report of an advance was true or not. He very courteously declined to say yes or no to the inquiry. A similar experience resulted from an attempt to interview Frederick Brigham, Secretary of the Woolson Spice Company. Other individuals, including attorneys, who have been either directly or indirectly identified with the recent somewhat sensational litigation in the courts here, were interrogated, but none of them would give either assent or denial.

FRANK JAMES WANTS OFFICE.

Former Outlaw Is in the Race for Doorkeeper of the Missouri Legislature.

Special to The New York Times.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 1.—This morning, at Jefferson City, Frank James, exoutlaw and bandit, was at work early pushing his candidacy for Doorkeeper of the Missouri Legislature. At the same time there was quiet work against him going on. It was not malicious, but the argument was that the Democratic Party of Missouri would be criticised if it should elect him; for the Doorkeeper is selected by caucus, with much the same solemnity as United States Senator. W. D. Hamilton, Representative from Davies, who prosecuted James sixteen years ago, was asked his views on the candidacy of James.

"I prosecuted Frank James as a matter of duty," he said, "because I was Prosecuting Attorney of the county at the time. I would not persecute him or present a straw in his way in any reasonable ambition. I think he is to be commended for the life he has led in the last sixteen years, and he has had difficulties the rest of us have not had. But for the Democratic members of the Legislature to elect him to an important position might embarrass the party hereafter, and it would have been better for him to have kept out of the race. Personally, I cannot vote for him, because I think it would not be the proper thing for me to do."

Nevertheless James is the strongest candidate in the race to-day. Speaking of the conditions at noon to-day, James said:

"My chances are splendid. My friends are not the kind of men who could be driven away from me by fear of comment. I don't see how they can beat me in the caucus. This talk has not alarmed me in the least. It's all done to hurt me, of course."

PROSPERITY IN NEW ORLEANS.

High-Water Mark Reached in Foreign Trade and Bank Clearings.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 1.—In commercial, industrial, and financial circles in New Orleans the nineteenth century went out in a blaze of prosperity. In imports, in exports, in customs duties, in postal receipts, and in bank clearings the year 1900 recorded the high-water mark for the Crescent City. On the last day of the dying century twelve large steamship, the aggregate value of whose cargoes reached the enormous total of $2,668,705, cleared for foreign ports. Of these, one vessel alone—the Mechanician of the Harrison Line—sailed with a cargo valued at $1,000,000.

The exports for 1900 touched the record total of $142,211,562. This is an increase of $45,645,584 over the exports of 1899. The total in imports for 1900 amounted to $20,124,508, an increase of $6,040,274. In customs duties the total for 1900 was $7,546,210, an increase of $2,860,453 over the total for 1899.

The receipts at the Post Office in New Orleans for 1900 amounted to $493,070, an increase of $38,186 over the total for 1899.

The bank clearings reached the total of $556,790,701, an increase of $98,571,483 over 1899.

ROCKEFELLER GIVES $90,000.

Offered to Duplicate Any Amount Raised by Rochester Seminary.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 1.—A short time ago John D. Rockefeller of the Standard Oil Company offered to duplicate the amount which the officers of the Rochester Theological Seminary could raise by Jan. 1, 1901. The Seminary officials have succeeded in raising $90,000, so Mr. Rockefeller will send a check for a similar amount, making a New Year's gift of $180,000 for the Seminary.

The Rev. Dr. A. H. Strong, President of the seminary, and the Rev. Charles H. Moss, pastor of Park Avenue Baptist Church, this city, visited New York, Cincinnati, and several other cities, and solicited contributions for the seminary. Ten men of Cincinnati contributed $100 each.

The Rev. Mr. Moss was formerly pastor of Mount Auburn Baptist Church, in that city. A son of President Strong married one of Mr. Rockefeller's daughters, and this is the cause of Mr. Rockefeller's gift to the seminary.

Accounting Asked of ex-Senator Marsh.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Jan. 1.—Ex-Senator Frederick G. Marsh, who is in a New York sanitarium undergoing treatment for his broken mental and physical condition, is to be asked to give an accounting of the estate of William Terry of Westfield. The estate was disposed of July 18 last, but since that time some of the heirs, it is alleged, have never realized anything from it. One of them is Mrs. Phoebe M. Martin of Westfield. Yesterday she appeared before Justice Harbinson to institute proceedings for the recovery of her share of the estate. She claims that she has been unable to get a settlement and cannot find ex-Senator Marsh or learn his address.

ARREST IN CUDAHY CASE

Police Apprehend Pat Crowe's Brother at Council Bluffs.

Thought to Capture Pat Crowe, a Report of Whose Arrest in South Dakota They Discredit.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 1.—The first arrest in the Cudahy kidnapping case has been made. J. J. Crowe, brother of "Pat" Crowe, whom the police believe to be a principal in the abduction, was taken into custody in Council Bluffs this afternoon by Omaha detectives and brought to this city. The warrant charges Crowe with the abduction of young Edward Cudahy on Dec. 15. Crowe consented to accompany the officers across the river without the formality of requisition papers.

Early this afternoon a posse of detectives with search warrants and complaints charging abduction, ransacked the premises adjacent to J. J. Crowe's saloon, in the hope of discovering Pat Crowe in his place of concealment. They had the necessary papers for the arrest of both Pat and his brother.

Early in the day the Police Department had been given information that either Pat Crowe was making his hiding place in his brother's saloon, or the brother knew more than he would divulge about the kidnapping and the letter that has been recently written to Mr. Cudahy threatening the death of his son if the reward for the arrest of the kidnappers were not withdrawn.

A diligent search disclosed no trace of Pat Crowe, but the officers came upon the brother asleep in a rear room. They hastily awakened him and took away two huge bulldog pistols which he carried in his pockets. The man was first taken to the Council Bluffs station, and then conducted across the river for an examination by Chief Donohue.

When the information that Pat Crowe might be found in the saloon was given to Chief Donahue he detailed five detectives to make the arrests. The detectives separated before reaching Crowe's place, and concealing their faces in the high collars of their overcoats, strolled one at a time over the sidewalk in front of the saloon. The building was quickly surrounded. When the detectives opened the doors of the saloon and the adjoining rooms, the inmates were taken by surprise, but there was no show of resistance. A woman of the household attempted to run to the room where Crowe lay asleep, but the officers blocked the way and entered first.

Crowe awoke and rubbed his eyes, as if he were dazed. "What do you want?" he demanded.

"We're looking for you and Pat," was the response. "We want Pat most, but if we can't find him, we want to ask you a few questions."

"I'll do anything I can for you, gentlemen," Crowe replied, "but I'll tell you right now, I can't do or tell much."

Crowe was closely questioned by the police to-night, but denied any knowledge of his brother's whereabouts or that he had anything to do with the kidnapping. The police expect, however, to secure some valuable information about "Pat" Crowe and his recent doings.

A dispatch from Chadron, Neb., says: "Pat Crowe, the supposed abductor of young Edward Cudahy, has been captured near the State line between Nebraska and South Dakota.

"Three detectives following Crowe's trail came upon him on the Pine Ridge Reservation, near Oelrichs, S. D., and captured him after a wild chase. Crowe was driving a team and buckboard. He whipped the horses and tried to outrun the horsemen, who soon brought him to a halt with their six-shooters.

"John Delfeider, a cattleman, has just reached town with the news, and says the posse had stopped at a ranch about thirty miles out for luncheon, and to feed their horses."

The local police discredit this report.

Gen. John C. Cowing, E. A. Cudahy's lawyer, does not believe that the last letter of the kidnappers to Mr. Cudahy should be taken seriously. He looks upon the threats of the abductors to again strike at the peace of the Cudahy home unless the $25,000 reward is withdrawn as a "bluff," and says that it would surprise him but little if the reward be increased to $100,000. Speaking of the matter, Gen. Cowing says:

"Mr. Cudahy does not withdraw his offer of $25,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of the kidnappers. He meant what he said when he made the offer, and he means it now. He will pay the amount in addition to whatever the city or any other individual will give for the apprehension and conviction of the criminals. He will give the city the control of the payment of it, to be used with what they desire to pay as a reward. I regard as a big bluff the last letter of the kidnappers threatening the murder of the boy if the reward was not withdrawn by Mr. Cudahy. To submit would be to invite all kinds of impositions.

"The interest that is felt in the case by people all over the country is shown by the telegram from Gen. Anson Mills, who offers to pay $500 toward making up a big reward. It would not surprise me at all to see a reward of $100,000 made up to incite people to extra exertion to bring about the conviction of the parties who kidnapped this boy."

MONEY FOR A SCHOOL.

New York Woman May Leave Large Sum to Virginia Institution.

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 1.—A wealthy New York woman has, it is understood, indicated her purpose of bequeathing to Sweet Briar Female Institute, in this State, a very large amount. How much, is not now known, but it is supposed to be equal to that provided by the originator of the plan for establishing this institution. The latter was the late Mrs. W. F. Williams, who a few weeks ago left $400,000 for the purpose of establishing at Sweet Briar, the Williams family homestead, in Amherst, an institution for the education of young women.

The nephews of the donor have recently instituted a suit to break the will. The case has not yet come to trial. Mrs. Williams was the wife of a New York clergyman who settled in this State just after the close of the war. He died, leaving a widow, but no children. The New York woman who is expected to add largely to this bequest was an intimate friend of Mrs. Williams. Her representative was in this city a few days ago looking into the matter with a view of carrying out the wishes of the principal.

Sweet Briar, which is to be the site of the new college, is located in one of the most picturesque and beautiful sections of Virginia.

PUNISHMENT FOR KIDNAPPING.

Bill to Be Introduced at Albany Increasing Penalty in This State.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—Assemblyman Apgar of Westchester will introduce to-morrow in the Assembly his kidnapping bill of last year, which amends the Penal Code by making the crime of kidnapping punishable by imprisonment for life. The maximum sentence at present is imprisonment for seventeen years.

Mr. Apgar introduced the bill last year, and although it passed the Assembly with, out a dissenting vote, it was not permitted to get out of the Senate's Codes Committee.

Snow in Central Germany.

BERLIN, Jan. 1.—Snow is falling heavily over Central Germany, severely interrupting railway traffic.

The Remarkable Fine Quality now imported into this market of G. H. Mumm's Extra Dry is the talk of the town. 100,321 cases imported in eleven months last year, or 72,169 cases more than any other brand, evidences the high appreciation in which this wine is held.—Adv.

LEGISLATURE'S OFFICERS.

Republicans and Democrats Make Selections in Caucus.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—Garrett J. Benson, a bitter enemy of State Committeeman William Barnes, Jr., of Albany, was defeated for the Senate Sergeant at Arms nomination in the Republican Senate caucus tonight by C. R. Hotaling. Benson was Sergeant at Arms of the Senate in 1897 and 1898, but was defeated for re-election through Lieut. Gov. Woodruff booming the nomination of Henry Jacquillard of Kings.

For some months past Benson has been working actively to secure the prize for the sessions of 1901 and 1902, but was defeated to-night by a vote of 17 to 16. It is understood that the Republican organization held entirely aloof from the fight and that the Senators settled it among themselves.

Four caucuses were held. The officers of the Assembly to serve for 1901, whose names will be presented by the Republicans and balloted upon at to-morrow's session, which will convene at 11 o'clock, are as follows:

Speaker—S. Fred Nixon of Chautauqua.
Clerk—Col. Archie E. Baxter of Chemung.
Sergeant at Arms—Frank W. Johnson of Erie.
Principal Doorkeeper—Henry W. Pollock of New York.
First Assistant Doorkeeper—William H. Hines of Albany.
Second Assistant Doorkeeper—Frederick A. Atkins of Livingston.
Stenographer—Henry C. Lammert of Kings.

The caucus of the Republican Senators continued until long past 11 o'clock, the distribution of patronage being the subject under discussion. It was finally referred to a committee composed of Senators Wilcox, Higgins, and Krum. Senator Raines presided and Senator White was Secretary.

In addition to the choice of Hotaling, the selections were:

Clerk—James W. Whipple, Salamanca; Stenographer—A. B. Sackett, Canandaigua; Postmaster—Charles H. Wheeler, Chautauqua; Assistant Postmaster—P. M. Hogodorn, Schoharie; Janitor—Major R. Polk, New York; Assistant Janitors—A. D. Taylor, Rochester; George MacKenzie, New York. General Committee Clerks—Harry Reimer, John L. Dohig, E. F. Flood, A. S. Lloyd, F. L. Clock, F. N. Glover, W. S. Hopkins, C. E. Thompson, F. R. Blatchford; Assistant Doorkeepers—R. C. Decker, H. K. Smith, Charles H. Cromwell, W. A. Ramage, William Norton, Joseph C. Miller, William Wright.

George W. Plunkitt presided at the caucus of Democratic Senators, and V. J. Dowling was Secretary. The following selections were made:

President pro tem., Senator Thomas F. Grady, New York, who will thus become leader of the minority; Clerk, John H. Douglas Brooklyn; Sergeant at Arms, Robert S. Woodburn, Buffalo; principal Doorkeeper, Daniel Fitzpatrick, New York; stenographer, Richard Brophy, New York; Postmaster, Charles A. Murphy, Brooklyn. Caucus Committee—Senators Donnelly, Ramsperger, Wagner, Cullen, Hennessy.

The forty-five Democrats of the Assembly in their caucus selected Daniel D. Frisbie of Schoharie to be the minority leader. Corporation Counsel John Whalen had arrived during the day with orders for each of the Tammany men to follow for the next three months.

The Wigwam followers had begun to be anxious as to how they should vote on the question of minority leader. Whalen made it clear that Daniel D. Frisbie was the man for the place. To a friend Whalen stated that in all the thirty-six Democratic representatives in New York and Kings County there was not one who could be safely intrusted with the minority leadership.

The other selections, as the minority's nominations, to be presented to the Assembly to-morrow are:

Clerk—Frank Goethefer of Erie; Sergeant at Arms—William H. Leonard of New York; Assistant Sergeant at Arms—Patrick Paule of New York; Principal Doorkeeper—Thomas A. Barry of New York; Assistant Doorkeeper—D. Pelak of New York; Second Assistant Doorkeeper—John Kent; Stenographer—C. H. Redfern.

In accepting the nomination for Speaker, Assemblyman Frisbie said in part:

"Our policy must not be allowed to degenerate into one of mere opposition to the plans and legislation of the majority. We should assume an affirmative attitude toward all legislation calculated to increase the prosperity of the farmers, workingmen, manufacturers, business men—in fact, all classes of our population.

"We should not be content to follow; we should lead in the introduction and advocacy of measures that will advance the interests of our Commonwealth. The fact that we constitute a minority numbering slightly less than one-third of the total membership of the Assembly should not deprive us of our activity, zeal, and energy in behalf of Democratic principles and their practical application.

"At this juncture in the history of the party it may be possible for the Democratic members of the Legislature of the Empire State by earnest support of home rule, by insistence upon economy in expenditures of the public funds, and by a patriotic and progressive attitude on all questions to point the way to Democratic victory in the future."

CARDINAL'S NEPHEW KILLED.

James Gibbons Shot by a Highwayman in the Streets of New Orleans.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 1.—The first known crime of any consequence in the new century was the murder of James Gibbons, nephew of Cardinal Gibbons. Young Gibbons was shot by a highwayman shortly after midnight, and died at the Charity Hospital to-night.

Gibbons was walking in Clairborne Street, near Canal Street, when he was attacked by two men, who ordered him to hold up his hands. He thought the affair was a joke, as it was in a prominent part of the city and many people were passing. He refused to obey the order, and, quick as a flash, one of the highwaymen fired, the ball entering the groin and lodging in the intestines. Gibbons fell to the ground, crying "I'm shot!" They bent over him quickly to secure what valuables he had, but help came and they ran away.

A crowd soon formed and chased the men, but eventually lost track of them. Young Gibbons was a medical student at the Charity Hospital.

BANK'S PROFITS $739,832.

The First National of Chicago Makes Statement of Year's Business.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—The First National Bank made a net profit of $739,832 for the year 1900. Statements were mailed to stockholders last evening showing the results of the twelve months' operation.

A year ago, when a similar statement was given out, it showed the bank's net profit, "after providing for all bad and doubtful debts."

The present account itemizes the earnings, "all bad and doubtful debts provided for." It is inferred from this that all the debts of this character have been written off. The bank's capital was $3,000,000 until just before the Union National was taken over on Sept. 1, when it was increased to $3,000,000.

Nebraska Lawmakers In Session.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 1.—The Nebraska Legislature convened at noon to-day for its twenty-seventh session. Permanent organization was effected in both houses according to the programme outlined by last night's Republican caucus. William G. Seefs of Burt County, the caucus nominee, was made Speaker of the House by unanimous vote, on motion of the Fusion minority, after they had given a complimentary vote to D. W. Hamilton, Populist, of Butler County. There was no opposition to Senator C. F. Steele for President Pro Tem. of the Senate. The House apointed a Committee on Privileges and Elections to take up contest cases as early as possible.

town, County Limerick, May 19, 1793, which would make her 107 years old.

Mrs. McCarthy remembers clearly her early life. She is one of very few, if any, others in this country who have lived under the Irish Parliament. She remembers the famine of 1822 in Ireland, the death of William IV., and the ascension of Queen Victoria, and claims to recollect the disturbance at the hanging of Father Goigley, on May 22, 1798, when she was five years old. She came to America in 1855.

NEW YEAR HOTEL SPREADS.

Old Custom Fast Dying Out—Artistic Display at the Holland House.

Among the customs of New Year's Day that each season are being relegated to the past must now be counted the time-honored practice of the leading hotels of the city of making a special New Year's spread in the café. It is understood that the Raines law, prohibiting free lunches, was the primary cause.

At the Waldorf-Astoria there has been no special spread for a long time. It is said that many of the patrons of the hotel objected to it, and yesterday the special tables that formerly were covered with snowy white cloths laden with all kinds of tempting dainties were conspicuous by their absence in most of the fashionable hostelries. The Vanland House and the Plaza, however, were exceptions. At the former there was, as usual, a most elaborate spread. The dishes exhibited were veritable culinary chefs d'ouvre. Among them was a graceful Viking ship, fashioned in white mutton fat and bearing on its upper deck a superb salmon, glistening in various jelly devices. Another artistic piece was a vase, also shaped out of fat, and the body of which was formed of lobsters, the red against the white being very effective. Two English pheasants and other dishes completed the display. At the Plaza two monster turkeys were conspicuous figures on a well-laid table.

GIFTS TO OFFICIALS OF QUEENS.

Diamond-Studded Badge for Joseph De Bragga, the New Sheriff.

With a diamond-studded badge, presented by his friends, pinned on his coat Joseph De Bragga, the new Sheriff of Queens, received his friends yesterday in the Court House in Long Island City. The presentation of the badge was made by William Cas Baker, the retiring Sheriff.

Following the presentation to the Sheriff Frederick W. Hallett, on behalf of the William J. Bennett Association of Astoria, presented a gold badge of office to Joseph C. Bennett, the new Under Sheriff.

At Jamaica James Ingram, the County Clerk, who succeeded John H. Sutphin, was presented with a desk chair by his friends, and with a cut glass desk set by the members of the Ravenswood Boat Club, of which he is a member.

Mr. Sutphin, the retiring County Clerk, had held that position continuously for three years. He was elected County Clerk in the Fall of 1870, and took charge of the office on Jan. 1, 1871. He was re-elected nine times consecutively, each time by an increased majority. Although Republican candidates for other offices were sometimes successful, Mr. Sutphin never failed to receive a handsome majority. One of the largest he ever received was in a year when he was the only elected Democratic candidate to be successful at the polls.

New Year's Day in Peking.

PEKING, Jan. 1.—The advent of the new year and century was celebrated in Peking on an elaborate scale. The discharge of numerous guns at midnight created a scare, and many troops were sent to discover whether the city had been attacked or whether it was a Boxer rising. Gen. Chaffee gave a reception in the morning, and Mr. Conger received in the afternoon.

MANY RETIREMENTS THIS YEAR.

Four Brigadier Generals and Three Rear Admirals on the List.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—The new year will be marked by many retirements in the army and navy for statutory reasons, mainly on account of age.

The retirements in the army include three heads of staff departments, viz., Judge Advocate General Lieber, Gen. Wilson, Chief of Engineers, and Gen. Buffington, Chief of Ordnance, each of whom holds the rank of Brigadier General.

One Brigadier General of the line, Gen. H. C. Merriam, commanding the Department of the Colorado, and six Colonels of the line will retire during the year.

In the navy two Rear Admirals of the line, Kautz and Schley, and one chief of bureau, Rear Admiral Hichborn, will be transferred from the active to the retired list during the present year.

TWO FIRES IN TWO HOURS.

Christmas Tree Decorations Cause a Panic Among Nurses in a Sanitarium.

Two fires within two hours badly damaged the sanitarium and massage institution conducted by Mrs. Frances McCullagh, at 9 East Twenty-seventh Street, last night, and scared into hysterics a number of Mrs. McCullagh's friends who were guests at a New Year's dinner and entertainment. Many of those who ran out into the street at the first alarm were trained nurses' uniforms.

Shortly after 9 o'clock the first alarm was sent in. This blaze was a slight one on the second floor of the four-story building. It was extinguished before the arrival of the firemen, who trooped through the house with their hose to make sure that there were no lingering sparks. The fire was caused by a lighted match carelessly tossed into a mattress.

The second alarm was sent in at 10:45. This fire, which did about $1,000 worth of damage, was caused by the overturning of the dining table, around which a number of diners were gathered. On the table was a Christmas tree filled with inflammable material. With the accidental overturning, the tree became ignited, and before the flames could be controlled they had spread through the first floor. The guests and their friends ran out into the street in much excitement. The women were hysterical, and one or two fainted.

KISSING ON BROADWAY.

"A Time-Honored New Year's Custom," Says Fickenaur When Arreated.

Unescorted women passing the Hoffman House for half an hour last night, about 10 o'clock, were rather unceremoniously seized and heartily embraced by a well-dressed man, who gave his name as George W. Fickenaur when arrested by Policeman Betts of the Tenderloin Station.

Fickenaur stationed himself in front of the hotel, and as a good-looking young woman would pass he would reach out his right arm, secure a "half Nelson" on the young person's neck and implant a kiss on her lips. An appreciative crowd of spectators watched the sport for some time, and none of the bystanders offered to interfere despite the indignant protests of some of the kissed.

Policeman Betts's proximity caused the kisser to move to Twenty-sixth Street, where he repeated his performances. Policeman Betts also moved up and caught Mr. Fickenaur in the act of smacking an auburn-haired young lady in a red gold cape. At the station house Fickenaur said he lived at 126 West Twenty-ninth Street. No one of that name could be found at that address.

"All girls like to be kissed on New Year's Night. It's a time-honored custom," said the kisser in explanation of his indiscriminate embraces.

ONE MARINE DEFEATS A GANG.

Rescues an Elderly Passer-by Whom They Were Attacking.

Joseph Lynch, sixty-four years old, was set upon and badly beaten by Eighth Avenue hoodlums at Fourteenth Street last night, and but for the interference of a Sergeant of Marines would have received even worse treatment. As it was he received a severe scalp wound and many bruises.

Lynch said that a gang of half a dozen young fellows accosted him, demanding money. He refused to give them any, and was knocked down and brutally kicked. His head struck the curbstone, and was badly cut. While the men were still assaulting him, a Sergeant of Marines in full uniform ran up, and, single-handed, dispersed them. He then took Lynch to the West Thirtieth Street Police Station, accompanied by two gentlemen in evening dress, who had witnessed the assault. The marine refused his name.

Boy Drowned While Skating.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 1.—Thomas Donnelly, eleven years old, who lived with his parents at 108 Paterson Street, Harrison, went skating to-day with several companions. The ice gave way and he was drowned. The body was recovered.

DINED WITH WIFE, THEN TOOK POISON

Tragic End of a Philadelphia Editor in His Hotel Room.

Mrs. J. T. Williams Had Just Arrived to Spend New Year's with Her Husband —Death May Be Due to Accident.

John T. Williams of 2501 North Broad Street, Philadelphia, editor of The Jeweler, a weekly trade paper, who had a New York office at 170 Broadway, sent word to his wife several days ago to come here and spend New Year's with him. After she had arrived last night, he killed himself while sitting with her in their room at the St. George Hotel, 49 East Twelfth Street. She reached the hotel shortly after dusk. Together they ate dinner that he had ordered served upstairs. Less than a quarter of an hour after the dessert was finished he lay dead.

Cyanide of potassium was the poison taken by the old man. In a bottle on his washstand was a quantity of the chemical sufficient, according to the doctor who examined it, to have killed an elephant. The name of the poison was written in ink on the bottle's label, and the evident age of the writing showed that the contents were not recent purchase. Originally the bottle had contained quinine pills, judging from the label, the name of the poison having been inscribed above the printed letters. The name of a Philadelphia pharmacy was attached.

Mr. Williams, who was seventy years old, came to the St. George for the first time on Nov. 30. From the day of his arrival he drank freely, and always appeared to be in good humor. On Christmas Eve he went to Philadelphia to spend the holiday with his family. He returned to the hotel last Friday, in as good humor as ever, but drinking a little heavier. The day before yesterday he told some one that he was going to have Mrs. Williams come to New York for New Year's, and arrangements were made with the proprietor whereby he was to get a better room than he had been occupying. When he came in with his wife last night it was found that through some mistake the new room was not ready, so the couple said that they would content themselves with the old quarters until to-day.

Mrs. Williams seemed to be of about the same age as her husband. Of what happened after they went to the room she told this story:

"We enjoyed dinner very much. My husband seemed to be in a good humor. Once during the meal he got up and walked across the room, after which I thought I heard a jingle of glasses. I did not look around, thinking that he was just taking a drink on the sly, for I had not let him drink much since I came in. When we finished eating I sat in a chair near the window, he in one in the middle of the room. Then he said to me:

"'Is it raining?'

"I told him it was not. After a silence of a minute or two he asked the question again, and then, when I had given the same reply, he asked it for a third time. This time he insisted that I should look out of the window and see how the weather was. I did so. As I raised the sash I heard him get up and walk to the washstand. I did not look around, thinking again that he was getting a drink. I heard a rattle like that of a glass or bottle. When I closed the window we both sat down once more. Then he arose and lay across the foot of the bed. Soon he asked me to put something over his feet, saying they were cold. After that he began to say he was cold all over. I saw that something was wrong, so I rang the bell for assistance."

When the clerk in the office heard the bell he sent up stairs at once. The boy ran back and told him that Mr. Williams was dying. The proprietor was called. When he got to the room Mr. Williams was gasping for breath. He was quiet and did not seem to suffer at all. A physician—Dr. Tiezle—was summoned, but the old man was dead when he arrived. The Coroner's office was notified, and Mrs. Williams sent a telegram to her son, G. B. Williams, in Philadelphia, who replied that he would start at once for this city to arrange for his father's funeral. The body will be taken to Philadelphia this morning.

As no motive for suicide was brought forward, it was surmised that Mr. Williams had taken the poison by mistake, thinking it to be something else. Such could have been the case, said Mr. Churchill, the proprietor of the hotel, for the old man was in a very nervous state from much drinking, and he was known to be in such bad health that he was continually taking medicines of various kinds.

The widow said Williams was born in Alabama. Up to twenty-five years ago he was a jeweler, but since that time he has been publishing and editing trade papers for the jewelry trade.

SPEECH BY GEN. HARRISON.

He Declares that the Constitution Ought Not to Be Spoken of as "Misshapen."

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 1.—At the Columbia Club banquet last night ex-President Harrison was the last speaker. He responded to the sentiment "Hail, Columbia." The report of his speech was based on advance copies furnished to the press, but he included the following paragraphs, which were not in the advance copies:

"It has been recently said that our fathers organized a 'misshapen' nation, if these limitations and reservations apply to all lands that become a part of our public domain and to all peoples whose allegiance we accept. Now, whatever professors of aesthetics may tell us about beauty in the abstract, we know that in nature and mechanics and in formative statecraft such a principle has chiefly to do with an intended use. That which perfectly accomplishes the designed use is not misshapen.

"And so, before we condemn our Constitution as misshapen, if it carries its general limitations and its reservations of personal rights to all lands over which its sway extends and to all people who owe allegiance to the government it organizes, we must assume that the men of 1776 and of 1787 contemplated the governing of lands and peoples with that absolutism against which, with so much cost and care, they had defended themselves.

"That is to beg the question. But it is not my purpose to press upon you my views upon this great Constitutional question. Though many of you may hold another view, I do not doubt that the republican liberty to differ on a Constitutional question survives in the Columbia Club."

Grande Maison de Blanc,

ESTABLISHED IN PARIS 1861.

CHIEF DEVERY'S STATUS UNDER PROPOSED BILL

May Lose Pension If Legislated Out of Office.

SAYS HE "WOULD NOT STARVE"

Speculating on the Appointment of the Commissioner Under the Single-Headed Law.

The status of Chief William S. Devery was discussed yesterday, in relation to the single-headed police bill to be introduced at the first session of the Legislature. The outline of the bill was published in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday. Some of the persons interested wanted more details to enable them to have a full idea of the scope of the measure and how it applied outside of the Police Commissioners and the Chief.

Chief Devery does not appear to be entitled to a pension. He became a policeman in June, 1878, but while his exact age could not be determined yesterday, no one would admit that he is fifty-five years old. To secure a pension he would have to be of that age and to have served twenty years. Chief Devery said but a few days ago that he was not looking for a pension; that he would go out without one if he carried certain points on which he had set his heart, and that out of the department under such auspices he would be happy and would not starve.

In the latter part of his declaration he referred to the very comfortable fortune he had laid aside in a very short time.

Frank Moss, once a Police Commissioner, said that there were technical and legal obstacles to Devery's retirement, but that these, in his opinion, could be removed without difficulty. The temporary stay which Chief Devery had obtained to prevent the Police Board trying him, which was told of in THE TIMES yesterday, could be vacated, he said, and the board either dismiss the charges or order a trial.

"As to the attitude of the board toward Devery," Mr. Moss continued, "some persons have been amused at the gallery play that's been going on for sometime, and they do not take too seriously the statement that the relations between the Chief and President York are so envenomed as they were allowed—by silence on both sides—to appear to be. Very funny, too, the idea of Hess, Sexton, and York 'freezing out' Abell in the matter of patronage. As if the patronage of Hess and Abell was not made over to the appointing organization before they took their oaths of office.

"As to Devery and the new bill, I think it poor politics to interfere with him. Let him alone, on two grounds. Give him plenty of rope and— Besides, the new District Attorney would be a good check on him. And, further, I am opposed to State interference in local matters."

Ex-Police Commissioner Andrew D. Parker said: "It is my understanding that under the present law there is no such vested right to a pension, as the Legislature is precluded from taking away, so that any police official may be deprived of such pension. As to Chief Devery, the charges against him must be disposed of before any application for pension can be considered."

Commissioner Jacob Hess said that in his opinion the obstacles to an application for a pension by Chief Devery could easily be removed.

At the Democratic Club and other political rendezvous last night there was speculation as to the appointee of the Mayor under a single-headed Police Commission law. Commissioners Sexton and York, ex-Police Commissioner James J. Martin, and Lewis Nixon, Chairman of the Committee of Five, were all mentioned as possible selections.

Chief Devery was at Police Headquarters yesterday. He refused to talk on any subject that concerned him.

For a New Prize-Fighting Bill.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—Assemblyman Charles F. Brooke of Erie, who it is said, will introduce a bill amending the Penal Code so as to permit prize fighting in the State, said to-night that he had not framed any bill as yet, as he desired first to ascertain the sentiments of the members on the subject. If he found a strong opposition to such a bill he would abandon his plan. Speaking about prize fighting, Mr. Brooke said he was convinced that the general public was in favor of it, providing the contests were scientifically conducted and absolutely on the level.

Bills to Be Introduced.

ALBANY, Jan. 1.—Assemblyman John A. Weekes, Jr., of New York says that if there is a demand for it he will reintroduce a bill prohibiting trucking on Fifth Avenue, New York City, between Twenty-third and Fifty-ninth Streets. A similar measure died in committee last year for lack of proper support from those who petitioned for it.

Assemblyman John F. Swift of Broome will introduce a good-roads bill early in the session, which will make it a misdemeanor and fixing a penalty for any one to rake stones off the highways and allow them to remain at the sides of the roads. The measure is favored by bicyclists.

The great prosperity which in this country marks the close of the nineteenth century, has one of its illustrations in the statements of the life insurance companies of the results of the business for 1900.

The statement of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, elsewhere given, shows an increase in every item over the very prosperous year 1899. With assets amounting to more than $300,000,000, an annual income of over $58,000,000, a surplus over all liabilities of $63,000,000, a new business transacted during the year of $205,000,000, and a grand total of $1,100,000,000 of insurance on its books, the Equitable enters upon the twentieth century.

ALLEGED BURGLAR ESCAPES.

Walks Out of Jail in Place of Prisoner Whose Time Is Up.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Jan. 1.—August De Weill, who is alleged to have been the prisoner who, on Saturday night, concocted the plan to escape from the jail by starting a fire, and who failed then because Jailer Johnson, seeing the fire could do no harm, refused to enter the cage, escaped this morning. He was caught later, and is now in a dark cell.

De Weill is under indictment upon two charges of burglary. His conviction is believed to be certain, and it is expected that he will receive a long sentence in Sing Sing. He has, therefore, been anxious to get away from the jail. It is now said that it was he who laid out the plan for the jail delivery on Saturday night. The plan failed because the jailer refused to fall into the trap and be stunned while putting out the fire. The only result of the fire plan was a lot of half-suffocated prisoners and a smoke-smelling prison.

This morning's plan was an exceedingly bold one. Its boldness made it a success. It was aided by the fact that there had just been a change in the office of Sheriff, and there was considerable confusion. The fact is that the locks on the cell doors on the cage do not restrain the prisoners and they can unlock them at will.

Sheriff Molloy gave way this morning to Mr. Miller, and the latter took charge before the prisoners in the jail whose ten or thirty day sentences expired to-day were to be released. There were six such. They were called into the office and lined up. Among those who should have been in line was Frank Kelly. He did not emerge when called, but De Weill responded for him and took his place in the line. Former Jailer Johnson was present and looked over the line, but somehow failed to notice the substitution. The formalities over, the six were turned out.

Within a few minutes the mistake was discovered. The first intimation is said to have come from a "trusty," who discovered that Kelly was still in the jail and that De Weill was absent. A hasty comparison of notes showed that De Weill was one of the six released. Sheriff Miller acted quickly. He called into service every man he could and sent them after De Weill. The hastily impressed men scattered in all directions. They impressed vehicles of all kinds. Ferris Montgomery and John Foster, who had a grocery wagon, obtained trace of De Weill within a short time and were soon hot upon the trail. Two miles from White Plains they sighted him hurrying along as rapidly as possible. They drove at a gallop to overtake him, and he took warning and tried to elude them. He finally hid in the cellar of James Brady's house. He was found and brought back to the jail. He was at liberty less than an hour. Sheriff Miller directed that he be kept in a dark cell.

Sheriff Miller said to-night that he was going to have a rigid investigation made. He proposes to ascertain if there was any collusion on the part of any one else besides Kelly, who, he believes, was certainly in the plot. Kelly will be detained and charged with aiding in the escape of a prisoner. The Sheriff will also demand that proper locks be placed upon the cell doors.

CHASED CLOTHING THIEF.

Man on Being Questioned Dropped His Bundle and Escaped.

YONKERS, N. Y., Jan. 1.—Patrolman Thomas May chased a clothing-house thief a long way to-night, but the man escaped in the darkness. May saw the man at the Putnam station. He had a large bundle and this aroused suspicion. May accosted him, and the man tried to joke the matter off by saying the bundle contained the twentieth century's luck. May asked him what he meant, and the man laughed and made a remark about the policeman not appreciating a joke. May insisted upon knowing what the bundle contained.

The man then said it was some clean laundry he was taking to his sister in New York. May thought the bundle rather large and said so. The man then said he had started for New York in the morning but had stopped to take a few drinks with the boys. May saw at once this was untrue, as the man had not been drinking. May remarked that he did not smell of liquor. To this the man responded by dropping the bundle and exclaiming:

"If you can't smell anything else, perhaps you can that." He dealt the officer a blow which stunned him and started down Prospect Avenue on a run. May followed but the man had half a block start.

The bundle was found to contain three high-priced ulsters. They had been taken from the clothing store of Thomas Brothers. Entrance was effected by boring holes with a brace and bit through the outer rear cellar door. The man then ascended a flight of steps and bored a set of holes about the lock until he was able to push it and the wood to which it was fastened out of the trap door. The store is situated on a brightly lighted street, and although hundreds passed every few minutes during the time the robbery must have occurred, the man went through the stock pretty thoroughly, as shown by the disarrangement of the heaps of clothing on the tables.

GEN. MACARTHUR RECEIVES.

Americans and Filipinos Mingle at His New Year's Reception.

MANILA, Jan. 1.—Gen. MacArthur held his first New Year's reception to-day. It was the first social function at which the Americans and Filipinos have mingled in a social way. For three hours a stream of vehicles wound through the grounds of the Governor General's residence and discharged the callers—official and civilian—most of them natives, though there was a sprinkling of foreigners. Admiral Remey received the callers by the side of Gen. MacArthur, and the wives of several Generals assisted.

Archbishop Chapelle, the Apostolic Delegate to the Philippines, and other church dignitaries were received first. The members of the Philippine Commission and the Judges appeared in black frock coats, and their attire formed a decided contrast to the white and gold uniforms of the officers of the army and navy. The Filipino women wore elaborate native costumes.

BELLEVUE NURSES' INVESTIGATION TO-DAY

Medical Board and Training School Meetings Will Be Held.

Commissioner Keller Wants to Learn the Truth of the Accusations of Negligence and Extortion.

Important developments in the Bellevue scandals are expected this afternoon when the Medical Board holds its regular monthly meeting, and the Trustees of the Mills Training School for Nurses will hold a special meeting to consider the cases of the pupil nurses recently suspended by Commissioner of Charities John W. Keller.

Members of both boards refused yesterday in any way to foreshadow the action that will be taken, but gossip about the hospital had it that there was a difference of opinion in the Medical Board as to the treatment to be accorded to Commissioner Keller's letter of last week calling attention to complaints which had been made. Some, it was said, consider that he has exceeded his authority in putting many of the questions in the letter, while others are anxious to co-operate to make the investigation complete.

Commissioner Keller, who has been confined to his room at the New Amsterdam Hotel by a threatened attack of pneumonia for several days, was not so well yesterday, and all callers were turned away until late in the afternoon, when he denied that there were at present any specific charges of either cruelty, neglect, or extortion against any individual now in his hands, saying he had removed or suspended all those accused.

"General charges have been made that the doctors and internes are negligent and careless," he said, "and that they have at times received money. Now, I want the Medical Board to tell me the extent of this, and what is its practice to make these doctors live up to the rules. I want the Medical Board to tell me to what extent the educational interest is so favored, of its own expert opinion. They are thirty-two of the most reputable physicians and surgeons in New York, and I don't think they should be offended at any of my questions. I shall not appear before them, even if I am able, and my doctor holds out little hope that I can go out to-morrow.

"It is absolutely vital to the interests of the training school that there should be good service in Bellevue from its male nurses, because if the school cannot furnish good nurses then the school is dead."

Commissioner Keller and Superintendent O'Rourke admitted the fact alleged by the Rev. P. Butler Thompkins, a colored clergyman, in the case of Mrs. Brazilia Hodsden of 346 West Fifty-ninth Street, in a letter printed in THE NEW YORK TIMES yesterday. It was charged that, though a respectable member of his flock, she had been allowed to lie two days in the alcoholic ward before being examined. She has since been declared insane, and is now in the insane pavilion.

The tuberculosis pavilion, erected during Mayor Strong's administration, and temporarily used as an alcoholic ward, was opened yesterday for consumptives. It can accommodate 200 patients. Three graduate nurses are in charge of the ward under the supervision of the house staff.

HIS NEW YEAR HALLUCINATION.

Sheehan Imagined Himself to be a Wild Indian and Went on the Warpath.

According to the friends of David Sheehan of 850 First Avenue, the dying of the year always has a peculiarly depressing effect upon him. If there is anything, they assert, that will rob him of his usual good spirits and fill him with rue and woe and general gloom, it is the dying struggles of a year. As an antidote for this annual affliction of incipient melancholia he has been in the habit of resorting to drink, beginning usually about twelve hours preceding the death scene and leaving off generally after the new year is well advanced.

This year the demise of an entire century bore in upon him with such crushing force that he was forced to apply his antidote in amplified doses. He circulated freely among his friends in the liquor business and in each place he accepted the usual New Year's present of a flask and furthermore sampled about every brand of intoxicating beverage that came his way.

Early yesterday morning he started home feeling greatly comforted and cheered that the new century had dawned so auspiciously. In the vicinity of First Avenue and Forty-sixth Street he was walking laboriously along under the weight of his New Year flasks, when he suddenly became aware that he was a wild Indian, and that he had gone on the warpath. He began whooping and performing a sort of war dance on the sidewalk. Then, thinking that the noisy passers by were United States troops and defenseless settlers, he began assaulting them with his flasks. He tried to scalp Gerson Moses, sixty-four years old, of 235 East Thirty-fourth Street, with a bottle of prime old rye, but only succeeded in inflicting a slight scalp wound. Moses is a night watchman, but Sheehan said afterward that he thought he was Gen. Miles. The savage Sheehan then made his way cautiously, as he thought, down the banks of the Little Big Horn River, but which was in reality First Avenue, leaving a trail of blood and profanity in his wake.

At Forty-fourth Street he tried to stab a man who he supposed was a defenseless settler with a bottle of "Old Tom" gin. Still unsated, Sheehan, after stopping at Forty-third Street to execute a medicine dance, found himself being surrounded by an armed force consisting of Policeman Kettler of the East Fifty-first Street Station, who had got wind of the fact that Sheehan had broken out of the reservation and was on the rampage. Sheehan, as is the habit of the red man, avoided giving battle in the open by running into a supposedly dense forest, but which, as a matter of fact, was a saloon. There Kettler closed in on him, and, after a sanguinary battle, during which Sheehan attempted to fire three shots at the officer from a bottle of brandy, and also endeavored to scalp him with a pint flask of ready mixed cocktails, the renegade was subdued and captured.

Sheehan was arraigned in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday morning and held in $300 bail for trial on a charge of assault.

INDEPENDENCE FOR CANADA.

League Formed to Bring About Dissolution of the Colonial Relations with Great Britain.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Jan. 1.—For some time past there has been some discussion about the doings of an alleged "independence" club in Montreal, but the managers of the new movement did not appear to judge the time opportune for appealing to the public. A good deal of interest was added to the movement by the fact that during the Paris Exposition a large number of young men appeared in Paris wearing "Independence of Canada" buttons, and an attempt was made to connect J. I. Tarte and J. X. Perrault, the Canadian Commissioners, with the movement because a number of Independence buttons were among the spoils recovered from men who had burglarized Mr. Perrault's house.

Mr. Perrault explained, however, that these buttons were about fifteen years old, and he had changed his views since. Now the Canadian Independence League has issued its platform and constitution, but has declined to publish its list of officers and members. The constitution consists of eighteen clauses, of which the first eight are:

1. Dissolution of the Colonial relation and declaration of independence.
2. New federation to be known as United States of Canada.
3. Provinces to become States with sovereign power.
4. Federal authority to have only such powers as shall be specially delegated to it by sovereign States.
5. No power shall be delegated to the Federal authority except with the assent of the majority of delegates of each of the sovereign States convened in a national assembly.
6. Creation of a State militia under command of a Federal officer.
7. Universal suffrage.
8. The great highways and services (railways, canals, telegraphs, &c.,) to be public property.

Others deal with changes in laws along Socialist lines.

WOMAN DIES OF BURNS.

Was Subject to Hysteria, and Cries Did Not Alarm Neighbors.

Mrs. Ethel Neville, forty years old, was burned to death in her apartments, at 430 Pulaski Street, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon. She was alone at the time, her daughter Ethel, fifteen years old, having gone to the home of a friend to assist in receiving calls. Mrs. Neville's screams were heard by the janitor, Louis Menger, but no heed was at first taken of them, as the woman was subject to fits of hysteria, and it was thought that she had been taken with one of the spells. Menger and his daughter finally went to the Nevilles' apartments, and were horrified to see the woman seated in a chair in the kitchen a mass of flames. Seizing some blankets, Menger wrapped them about the woman and succeeded in putting out the blaze.

A call was sent to St. Mary's Hospital, but the woman died before an ambulance arrived, having been horribly burned all over the body. It is supposed that her clothing took fire from the kitchen stove. Her husband is employed as ticket agent at the Grand Street ferry house, on the Brooklyn side.

ROBBED BY FIVE MEN.

Police Have the Suspects, One of Whom Broke His Leg Trying to Escape.

Stephen Hoffman, while returning to his home, at 141 North Ninth Street, Williamsburg, early yesterday morning, was set upon by five men at Berry and North Sixth Streets. After beating him into insensibility, they robbed him of his watch and chain and $10 in money. The robbery was witnessed by a woman, who informed a policeman. A call was sent to the Eastern District Hospital, and when Dr. Shields responded he found that Hoffman's skull was fractured. He was taken to the institution, where his condition is said to be serious.

The police of the Bedford Avenue Station later arrested Thomas McGloin, nineteen years old, of 90 North Fifth Street; Joseph Crane, eighteen years old, of 442 Manhattan Avenue; William Stookey, twenty-one years old, of 115 North Fifth Street; John Reardon, nineteen years old, of 90 North Seventh Street, and Abraham McGarry, twenty years old, of 112 North Fifth Street. The prisoners were found at Stookey's home. At the appearance of the police the men made an effort to escape.

McGloin jumped from a second-story window to the street. His left leg was broken in two places, and he was removed to the hospital, where it was said that the leg probably will have to be amputated. While the attendants at the hospital were preparing him for bed Hoffman's watch dropped out of his trousers pocket.

VERNON M. DAVIS TAKES CHARGE.

He Succeeds Mr. Gerry as the Head of the Children's Society.

Former Assistant District Attorney Vernon M. Davis yesterday morning formally assumed his duties as President of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, succeeding Commodore Elbridge T. Gerry, who for twenty-five years has been head of the institution, but whose resignation was announced Nov. 8.

Although he has retired as the President of the society, Commodore Gerry still retains an active interest in the institution. Mr. Davis will continue his law practice, and, in addition, look after the executive affairs of the society.

RARE EGYPTIAN PAPYRI.

Will Be Distributed Among American Universities.

Columbia University is to receive in a few days an assortment of sixteen rare Egyptian papyri discovered in recent excavations. The Rev. William Copley Winslow, Vice President and Honorary Secretary of the Connecticut branch of the Egyptian Exploration Fund, reports that the papyri are in London along with four others for Vassar College and three for Hamilton College, and will be forwarded shortly to the respective institutions.

Antiquities collected under the Egyptian Exploration Fund are distributed among American institutions pro rata according to the subscriptions from their various localities. It is understood that an allotment of papyri has also been made to the Peabody Museum of Yale University and to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. These are all numbered and described, sometimes in fac simile in the volumes issued by the managers of the exploration fund.

Found Dead in a Chair.

Mrs. Agatha Bielsel, a widow, sixty-eight years old, was found dead in a chair at her home, 1,138 Willoughby Avenue, Brooklyn, yesterday, by a friend who had called to see her. Mrs. Bielsel lived alone. Death was due to heart disease.

FELL DOWN AIRSHAFT.

Mrs. Merritt of 927 Park Avenue Is Instantly Killed.

Mrs. Louisa Merritt, whose husband, Richard A. Merritt, is a florist, of 927 Park Avenue, yesterday afternoon fell from the roof of the house in which she lived through the airshaft to the pavement, a distance of sixty feet, and was instantly killed. Almost every bone in her body was broken. The Merritt family lived on the first floor of the apartment house, which is in a first-class neighborhood. Mrs. Merritt had been ailing for some time, and only ten days ago returned from the Presbyterian Hospital, where she had been undergoing treatment as a private patient.

Just before the accident happened she asked Mrs. Sampson, a married sister, who is staying with the family, to take the children into the front room, as she wanted to dress preparatory to going out. She finally did go out, and it is supposed that she went to the roof to get the fresh air. A few minutes later the janitor of the building brought word that Mrs. Merritt had been found lying at the foot of the airshaft. An ambulance was called, but the surgeon could only pronounce the woman dead and state that death was instantaneous.

The husband, who was sent for, said that his wife had probably fallen over the coping of the shaft, which was quite low. He said there was no reason why she should wish to end her life. Their family life, he said, was happy, the woman always being very fond of her home, husband, and children. Although ill, she was improving, and had every reason to hope for speedy recovery.

SERVANT GIRL ASPHYXIATED.

Jennie Rogers Found Dead in Bed by Her Employer.

Jennie Rogers, a servant in the employ of Dr. A. L. F. Bodine of 411 West One Hundred and Forty-fifth Street, was found dead in her bed by her employer yesterday morning, death having resulted from illuminating gas. When the girl did not arise as usual to prepare breakfast Dr. Bodine went to her room, which he found closed and locked. He looked over the transom and saw the girl lying on the bed.

Detecting the odor of gas he broke open the door, and found that the girl was dead. Despite the fact that the window and transom of the girl's room were closed, her employer does not think that she committed suicide. He says there was no reason for the girl killing herself, and that she had never given the slightest evidence of despondency.

NEW POSTS FOR RAILROAD MEN.

Important Changes on the Erie and the St. Paul Roads.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—Important changes were effected yesterday in the official staff in this city of the Erie and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Roads.

H. W. Forward, who has been Division Freight Agent of the Erie system here for the past eight or ten years, was appointed Assistant General Freight Agent, with offices at Chicago.

Thomas Beard, who has been agent for the Erie Dispatch in this city, has been appointed Foreign Freight Agent for the same company, with headquarters in New York, succeeding C. P. Lamprey, who goes to Cleveland, with the title of General Manager of the Erie Dispatch; Mr. Lamprey succeeds George E. McKay.

W. E. Eden was appointed agent of the Erie Dispatch in Chicago to succeed Mr. Beard.

The office to which Mr. Forward has been appointed is a created one, this road having had no Assistant General Freight Agent at this point. The office of General Freight Agent was formerly maintained in this city.

On the Milwaukee and St. Paul system a new Controller is in office to-day. The fresh incumbent is H. G. Haughan, succeeding E. G. Sewell, who leaves the service of the company by reason of old age. Mr. Haughan has been Land Commissioner for the road, and he will be succeeded in that office by C. A. Padley, who has been Mr. Haughan's assistant.

VINELAND BANKERS ALARMED.

Kit of Burglars' Tools Found Near the Institution—Vaults Now Guarded.

VINELAND, N. J., Jan. 1.—There was a strong guard on the Tradesmen's Bank of this place last night, and to-night the guard was doubled, and all those on guard were heavily armed. This resulted from the discovery of a kit of burglar's tools in the vicinity of the bank. It is believed by the authorities and the officials of the bank that there was a plan on foot to force an entrance into the bank last night or to-night and loot it. The tools found are alleged to have been secreted near the bank. The finding of them is something of a mystery. There are several stories afloat. One is, they were found under a stoop, and another that they were hidden in a haystack not far from the bank. The kit is said to have been complete and to have contained tools powerful enough to force the vault of the safe within a comparatively short time.

There is an unusual amount of cash in the bank at present. A short time ago the Maxrem bequest of $100,000 was paid into the bank in cash. This bequest is to the New Jersey Training School for the Feeble Minded. This money is supposed to be still in the bank. Then yesterday the sum of $80,000 was brought to the bank from Philadelphia. This sum was needed for the purpose of meeting a check to be issued by the city to Keighley & Sons for the new water plant. Owing to the public nature of the transaction the transfer of the money to the local bank from its Philadelphia correspondent was known.

President Philip H. Baker of the bank says he is almost certain that the kit of tools found was intended for use on the bank, as there was no other vault in Vineland sufficiently strong to demand such an elaborate outfit. The first supposition when the tools were found was that the bank had been already looted and the tools hidden afterward, but as soon as it was found the vaults were untouched the guards were placed.

To-night, not only are armed men patrolling the outside of the bank, but others are sitting at every point where it would be possible to attack the bank, and all are ready for any burglars should they appear.

BOSSCHIETER MURDER CASE.

Trial of the Four Accused Men to Begin in a Fortnight.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 1.—The birth of the New Year was momentous for the four men in the County Jail at Paterson, N. J., charged with the murder of Jennie Bosschieter. Two weeks from to-day one or all four of the accused men will be called to the bar to stand trial.

Whether they will be tried together or separately remains to be decided. The matter has been argued before Judge Dixon on the application of counsel for George J. Kerr, who desires that his client be tried apart from his associates. The decision may be given any day, but may not be announced until the four are arraigned for trial. If Judge Dixon grants the motion Kerr may be called first to face a jury. Rumor has it he will ask for mercy and that the State will allow him to plead to a minor crime on condition that he adds his story of the occurrences of Oct. 18 to the other evidence. Kerr's friends confidently expect him to suffer less than his companions, because they claim he was less guilty.

The expectation is that the case when called will reach the jury within eight or ten trial days. The evidence of Scolcroft, the hackman, will probably take a day.

Each of the accused men has a separate counsel or two, and special counsel from outside of this city are expected to be on hand. Mr. Emly, the prosecuting attorney, will have associated with him only his regular assistants. He contends that the case is so clear and the law so specific that there is no need for special counsel for the State.

Just what line the defense proposes to take is not known, but it is understood that much will be made of the supposed inability of the State to bring forward a witness who actually saw the knockout drops poured into the girl's drinks in the saloon.

Steamer Damages a Pilot Boat.

The Morgan Line steamer El Monte, Capt. Parker, which sailed for New Orleans yesterday morning, struck the pilot boat Edward E. Barrett shortly after she cleared Sandy Hook. The bowsprit of the pilot boat was carried away, and her cutwater damaged. The El Monte was apparently uninjured. The Barrett was towed to Stapleton, S. I., by the pilot boat New York.

Boy Scalded to Death.

Thomas Brennan, four years old, was scalded to death yesterday at the home of his parents, 196 Grove Street, Brooklyn. The child pulled a teapot from the stove, and the boiling liquid caused injuries from which he died.

WOMEN SMALLPOX PATIENTS AT LARGE

Two Had Escaped from a Carmine Street House.

Stayed in a Furnished Room House and Visited Saloons Before They Were Found.

Florence Lederer and Nellie Riley, smallpox patients, escaped Monday night from the house in which they had been living, and were at large in the city until late last night. They had been living at 85 Carmine Street. The Health Department had located the two, and as one of the physicians was going up the stairway to the women's apartments they went out of a rear window and down a fire escape, and from there into the street.

The department discovered that the women had the disease through the cases of John and Edward Dugan, six and two years of age, respectively, who were removed on Monday morning from 413 Hudson Street to North Brother Island. The doctors found that the Dugan family had recently removed from 85 Carmine Street, and there learned that Mrs. Lederer and Miss Riley were down with the disease.

Under instructions from Dr. Blauvelt the landlady at 85 Carmine Street sent word that the Riley woman had returned to the house, which was then guarded by the police until the woman was taken to the hospital.

Dr. Blauvelt later met Mrs. Lederer's husband, who told the physician that he had just taken his wife home.

Dr. Blauvelt and a policeman followed her into the house, and she was also taken to the hospital.

Mrs. Lederer told Dr. Blauvelt that she and the Riley woman had remained all night in a furnished room house, the address of which Dr. Blauvelt refuses to make public, and had spent yesterday in the back rooms of saloons, giving the physician a list of the places, which he refuses to announce.

Dr. Blauvelt, accompanied by a vaccinator and a fumigator, last night visited all the places mentioned by the women, and vaccinated all persons who it is thought came into contact with the women. The rooms were all fumigated.

Dr. Frederick H. Dillingham, Assistant Sanitary Superintendent, said: "This illustrates the importance of being vaccinated. It is quite possible that these women have gone from place to place, seeking lodgings, and it is impossible to tell how many persons may have suffered the danger of infection from them. Besides the actual places they may have visited, it is probable that they may have ridden in street cars. To-morrow and Friday we will have physicians at every public and parochial school in Manhattan to vaccinate the children. The physicians are not authorized to vaccinate any child without the assurance that the parents are willing."

At the Charles Street Station last night the Sergeant said: "The Health Department physicians seemed to think that it was our duty to first take care of the cases. We disputed that, believing that the physicians should have looked after the women. Meanwhile the women got away."

No other cases were reported by the Health Department up to late last night.

KILLED WITH A LUNCH KNIFE.

Arthur J. Callon Slays His Friend After a Quarrel.

Stabbed in the heart by one of his best friends after a petty quarrel, Arthur J. Callon of 71 Barrow Street died on the sidewalk in front of 80 Bedford Street at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. The friend—James Higgins of 360 Bleecker Street—after seeing what he had done completely collapsed, and now lies in an agony of grief and remorse in a cell in the Charles Street Police Station. Callon was twenty-one years old, a delivery clerk in the employ of the White Star Line, and lived with his widowed mother and two sisters. Higgins is twenty-two years old, a messenger employed in the New York Stock Exchange, and is the sole support of his widowed mother and two sisters.

The details of the tragedy have, to a certain extent, been suppressed by the police. It is said that Callon attended midnight mass with his mother and sisters at St. Joseph's Church, in Sixth Avenue, and after escorting them home went to the saloon of Albert Hurdtflur, at 80 Bedford Street. There he is believed to have met his friend, Higgins, and another friend named Robert Tynan of 92 Morton Street. There the young men drank to the new century until about 3 o'clock, when Tynan became sick and went out on the sidewalk. Higgins wanted to take Tynan home, but Callon objected. The two had some angry words, which ended by Callon knocking Higgins down.

Higgins regained his feet, and ran into the saloon followed by Callon, and as his pursuer caught up with him, Higgins grabbed a knife from the free-lunch counter and struck at Callon. The knife penetrated Callon's breast. He staggered to the street, and fell on the sidewalk. Several persons rushed to his assistance and an ambulance was called, but it was too late. Callon died long before its arrival.

When he realized what he had done, Higgins collapsed. He reeled out of the saloon and into the arms of Policeman Gaynor, who had been summoned. Gossip has it in the vicinity of the tragedy that Higgins and Callon were rivals for the love of the daughter of a wealthy truckman living in the neighborhood; that Callon found the more favor in her eyes, and led Higgins to remark once that he would "get square" with his rival. Many mutual friends of the young men declare, however, that the two were bosom friends all their life long, and that the killing was not premeditated.

When arraigned in the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday Higgins denied that there had been any quarrel on account of a girl. He said he was attacked by Callon, and defended himself with the first weapon that came to his hand, which happened to be a carving knife. Higgins was held for examination on Friday.

SEA TURTLES FROM FLORIDA.

Known at the Aquarium as Twins on Account of Their Resemblance.

The latest addition to the Aquarium was received a few days ago from Cedar Keys, Fla. The addition is in the shape of two fine-shaped sea turtles, which, owing to their similarity in size, color, habits, and other qualities, have been dubbed twins by the authorities in charge of New York's Aquarium. According to those persons who in Summer lounge on the benches that line the walks in Battery Park, and in Winter spend all the time that the regulations controlling the Aquarium allow in promenading in the circular pavilion, the new acquisitions are wonders, and destined to become at a no distant date still more wonderful in divers ways.

They have been placed in the same pool with another famous turtle known to habitués of the Aquarium as "Liaguno Emanuel," his presenter having been the skipper of a well-known Pacific schooner of that name. The Pacific turtle has accepted the company of his Atlantic kinsmen in a very chilly manner, and, judging by his actions, it will be some time yet before he will allow them to touch shells with himself. "He has been here a long time now," said a habitué, "and having been by himself so long, I doubt if he will soon become reconciled to his new acquaintances.

"Turtles have a lot more sense than people think, anyway. Liaguno, for instance, knows everybody connected with this place, and a lot of other people who, like myself, love to watch the fish and study their habits. Liaguno is the most intelligent turtle in America, and being of a proud temperament, you will be pretty apt to win your bet if you wager that he won't at any early date consent to associate with the new arrivals." Mr. Walter T. Smith of this city is the giver of the twins.

TESTED THE GAS JET.

Then Later John Emm Was Found Unconscious in His Room.

New Year conviviality came near costing Joseph Emm, a German laborer, of 203 East One Hundred and Fourth Street, his life. He made merry among his friends during New Year's eve and at a late hour returned to his home at peace with all the world. Upon going to bet he turned off the gas in his room.

There appeared to him, however, to be still a sort of glow at the spot where the light had been, and to make sure that the gas was really turned off he got up with great deliberation and unity of purpose and turned it on again. He was found unconscious yesterday morning. He was removed to the Harlem Hospital and it is believed that his life can be saved.

SIR JOHN TENNIEL LEAVES PUNCH.

Famous Caricaturist Will Retire After Half a Century of Service.

A dispatch from London announces that Sir John Tenniel, the famous caricaturist, is about to retire from the staff of Punch.

Tenniel's work has been the distinguishing feature of that publication since 1862. In that year Tenniel began regularly to supply the full-page cartoon dealing with the most important event of each week, and it is seldom that through illness or other cause his place has been taken temporarily by another man. Many of his cartoons have had an important influence in swaying public sentiment. The subject was always decided upon at the famous weekly meeting of the staff of Punch round the "mahogany tree."

Punch discovered Tenniel in 1850, when the artist was thirty years old. He had never attempted any comic work. He had exhibited a few cartoons and pictures, but had never studied in an art school. "Do they suppose there is anything funny about me?" he asked when a post on the comic paper—then nine years old—was offered to him. But the publishers of Punch had seen the possibilities in the young artist's clean-cut, delicate work, and he was soon to widely know as a cartoonist that he gave up his dream of becoming a great painter.

Perhaps the picture with the single word, "Mad," for caption, printed after Gladstone introduced his Home Rule bill, had the most influence of any of his cartoons.

It is probable that Edward Linley Sambourne, who has been a regular contributor to Punch almost as long as Sir John Tenniel, will be the latter's successor as the producer of the weekly cartoon.

Motor Vehicle Causes Runaway.

While Mounted Policeman Hinea was passing in front of McGown's Pass Tavern in Central Park yesterday afternoon, his horse became frightened at a motor vehicle and ran into a victoria, driven by Nicholas Swartwout of 106 East Eighty-ninth Street, causing the horse attached to the carriage to run away. Jesse Weinberg and his wife of 1,281 Madison Avenue also occupied seats in the victoria. The policeman quickly got his horse under control and stopped the runaway. The carriage was slightly damaged, and the policeman had his leg bruised.

The Wanamaker Store The Wanamaker Store The Wanamaker Store

ANNUAL SALE OF WHITE

The WHITE SALE Opens the Door for the Twentieth Century

WHITE, clean and fresh as the new-born century itself is the storeful of merchandise that will greet those who come here to-day. This Annual White Sale is one of the most notable evolutions of the Nineteenth Century merchandising; organized and exploited by the Wanamaker Store and copied in certain details by stores everywhere to-day.

But the spirit and impetus, the vigor and forcefulness of the Wanamaker movement is unknown elsewhere. The whole store organization is back of it; vast manufacturing interests are brought into working sympathy with it.

It is the Nineteenth Century dower to the Twentieth—it shall grow and develop. It is the germinal power which reaches out to more vigorous and potential effort in procuring the more economical manufacture and distribution of merchandise of universal demand.

And herein is the Wanamaker idea different from all others. While the other policy cheapens the quality to reduce the price, the Wanamaker organization seeks and makes possible the more economical production of goods of a quality that constantly grows higher and better, with prices the same, or lower.

But the tremendous and masterful forces that cause this splendid array of merchandise at the remarkable prices are less interesting and convincing than the goods themselves. To-day they are arranged to tell their own story. Better, broader, handsomer than ever before. As many of the details as we can, we tell on this page. The full and complete story can only be told by the store itself, to-day.

LINENS in the White Sale

AMBITIOUS manufacturers in Ireland and Scotland have been the most notable contributors to this gathering of Linens. The Wanamaker Stores being the largest distributors of their product they enter into this movement with as much enthusiasm as our own people, and send pure and beautiful linens at prices far below those they could afford in the regular way. Unusual offerings have come this year—two noteworthy groups of Dinner Cloths and Napkins are worthy of especial mention. GRAVE SITUATION IN CAPE COLONY

Boer Invaders Now Said to Number Five Thousand.

MORE TROOPERS CAPTURED

Fourteen Men of Nesbitt's Horse Taken Prisoners—Extensive Looting by Boers.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The Cape Town correspondent of The Daily Mail, who dwells upon the gravity of the position in Cape Colony, says:

"The Boer invaders now number 5,000. The western invasion gives the most concern. It has split into two divisions, which are marching like the prongs of a fork, one by way of Sutherland toward Malmesbury and the other toward Beaufort West.

"The enemy are now ranging over immense tracts of territory, necessitating the employment of an army corps to deal with them. Lord Kitchener has poured troops into the disturbed areas; but the fugitive tactics of the Boers have to a large extent neutralized his precautions.

"It was felt that the only means of excluding the invaders from the rich districts in the western part of the colony was to call out the farmers. To-day's telegrams promise a splendid response from the eastern portion, but the western is doubtful, not 30 per cent. of the population being regarded as loyal. Hence the Boer concentration in that direction.

"Letters are arriving here detailing damage and robbery by the invaders, and beseeching military assistance. Any action on the part of the colony will not abate the urgent need of large reinforcements."

"The aspect of affairs is scarcely less gloomy," says the Cape Town correspondent of The Times, "than at the beginning of 1900. The invading Boers are numerically fewer, but they have penetrated further south, and their presence in such centres of hostile Dutch feeling as Graaf Reinet constitutes an element of danger which did not exist last January.

"The proclamation calling for volunteers comes very late. The invaders have been enabled to obtain fresh horses. All the horses in the colony ought to have been commandeered or bought at the first sign of invasion."

The correspondent complains of the inertia and reticence of the authorities.

COLESBERG, Cape Colony, Dec. 31.—Two hundred and fifty Boers captured fourteen men of Nesbitt's Horse fifty miles southeast of Colesberg.

The enemy, since increased to 800, has appeared near Weltevreden and is driving off stock.

CAPE TOWN, Jan. 1.—A special meeting of the Cabinet was held to-day at which, it is understood, a decision was reached to make a further extension of martial law.

A telegram from Carnarvon reports that the Boers are looting every farm along their route for supplies.

CAPTURED FROM DE WET.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Gen. Kitchener has telegraphed to the War Office, under date of Pretoria, Dec. 31, as follows:

"Gen. Knox, who has been following up De Wet, reports that he has captured some horses, five wagons with supplies, and 6,000 rounds of ammunition. He has released and allowed to go to their farms seventy-six Boer prisoners who were taken at De Wet's laager, and who were being forced to fight.

"Gen. French recently captured twelve prisoners and a large quantity of carts and cattle. Among the prisoners was a dispatch rider bearing a letter from Beyers for Smuts."

Johannes Smuts was formerly private secretary to Sir John Gordon Sprigg, Governor of Cape Colony. He served on the staff of V Division in Natal in 1899-1900.

KRUEGER WANTS WAR STOPPED.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—"Mr. Krüger is again importuning Queen Wilhelmina," says the correspondent of The Daily Mail at The Hague, "to write personal letters to Emperor Nicholas, President Loubet, and Emperor William with a view of stopping the war. It is reported that the Queen is not unwilling, but that the Netherlands Ministry is divided."

Krueger Cannot Come Here Yet.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 1.—Replying to an address from the American Boer Committee, Mr. Krüger expressed a desire to visit the United States, but said he must postpone the visit, on account of the affection of the eyes from which he is suffering.

THE FLOODS IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—The floods continue in the country. The water in the lower part of Bath is fourteen feet deep, and the tops of cottages are just appearing above the waste. Boats have been kept busy rescuing the inhabitants of the place from the water. Four deaths from drowning are reported.

Thousands have been rendered idle through the closing of inundated works. In some districts trains were held up all night long, out of the reach of assistance.

Duke of York a Rear Admiral.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—The Duke of York has been gazetted a Rear Admiral. The promotion from the rank of Captain to that of Rear Admiral, as a preliminary to the Duke's visit to Australia and Canada, gives universal satisfaction, and the fact that he thus passes over the heads of sixty-six senior Captains will not in the slightest degree detract from his universal popularity in the navy. Since the Duke of Edinburgh succeeded to the Duchy of Saxe-Coburg the British Navy has lacked the distinction of a princely flag officer.

Dies from Exposure in Ireland.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—P. Collins, who arrived at Fermoy, Ireland, from America on Dec. 27, has been found dead on the mountain side almost within sight of his father's home. It appears that the traveler was unable to secure a conveyance from Fermoy to the home of his father; started to walk there, but was overtaken by a storm, and died from exposure. He had £426 in his pocket when found.

Imports from Germany Increase.

BERLIN, Jan. 1.—The German papers note with satisfaction that Germany's exports to the United States in the year just ended show an increase over those for 1899. United States Consul General Mason's figures for the year reached 5,677,355 marks, or an increase of 43,470 marks over those of the previous year.

Mme. Patti Sells Her Castle.

LONDON, Jan. 1.—Mme. Adelina Patti's beautiful estate and castle, Craig-y-Nos, upon which the prima donna has expended upward of £130,000 during the twenty years of her residence there, is about to change ownership. It is understood that Sir George Newnes, the London publisher, is the purchaser of the estate.

Argentina's Cereal Crop Good.

BUENOS AYRES, Jan. 1.—The Minister of Agriculture, Dr. Martin Garcia Merou, in his annual report estimates that there will be 1,700,000 tons of wheat available for export this season. He says that the corn crop is good.

KETTELER'S SLAYER EXECUTED.

PEKING, Dec. 31.—Su-Hai, the man who killed Baron von Ketteler, the German Minister to China, in June last, was beheaded this afternoon in the presence of a large number of spectators.

The execution took place on the scene of the crime.

French Snub British at Peking.

PEKING, Jan. 1.—One incident of the New Year celebration here has caused considerable comment. A review of the British troops was held in honor of Queen Victoria and of Australian Federation, and all the foreign commanders were invited to send representatives. The French were conspicuous by their absence, not a single Frenchman being present at the review.

IGNATIUS DONNELLY DEAD.

Famous Politician and Author Taken Ill Suddenly in Minneapolis—His Long Career.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Jan. 1.—Ignatius Donnelly, who had been prominent for many years in politics and literature, died here to-night. He was taken ill suddenly at the home of his father-in-law, Barton Hanson, this evening, and in spite of the efforts of his physician, failed to rally.

Ignatius Donnelly, lawyer, Congressman, reformer and literary man, was born in Philadelphia on Nov. 3, 1831. He was educated at the Central High School there and admitted to the bar in 1852.

He went to Minnesota in 1856 and soon became prominent in politics. He was first elected to Congress in 1862. During the war he was Lieutenant Governor and for a short time Governor of the State. In 1864 he was re-elected to Congress. In politics he was a Republican, but in 1871 he left the ranks of that party.

Mr. Donnelly was well known through his literary work to a great number of people who had never heard of him as a politician. His first work "Atlantis" was published in New York in 1882 and attracted considerable attention. In it he attempted to demonstrate that there once existed in the Atlantic Ocean, opposite the Straits of Gibraltar a large island known to the ancients as Atlantis. This work was followed in 1883 by "Ragnarok," in which he tried to show that the deposits of clay and gravel on the earth were the result of a collision with a comet; but it w his book, "The Great Cryptogram," in which he attempted to prove that Shakespeare's plays had been written by Bacon, that made him well known in America and Europe.

He was also the publisher of a newspaper entitled The Anti-Monopolist, which was issued in St. Paul. It advocated the greenback policy, and was all that its name implied in its attitude toward monopolies. While in Congress Mr. Donnelly materially contributed to the creation of the National Bureau of Education, and he was the first man who ever agitated in Congress the question of the planting of trees by the Government.

For several years he was President of the Farmers' Alliance of Minnesota, and was President of the Anti-Monopoly Convention that nominated Peter Cooper for President. In 1868 he was nominated at the convention of the People's Party held in Cincinnati for Vice President. During the latter part of his life he conducted a large farm near his residence.

He was nominated for the Vice-Presidency in May, 1900, by the "middle of the road" division of the People's party at the convention held at Sioux Falls, when Wharton Barker was nominated for President.

AUSTRALIA FEDERATED.

Lord Hopetoun Inaugurated at Sydney as First Governor General of the New Commonwealth.

SYDNEY, N. S. W., Jan. 1.—The Earl of Hopetoun was to-day sworn in as the first Governor General of the Federated Australian colonies, amidst scenes of pageantry such as never before had been attempted in the antipodes. Scores of thousands of people participated in the demonstration, and general joy marked the occasion. The rejoicing of the Commonwealth was intensified by a message which Queen Victoria sent through the Colonial Secretary, the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, and which was read by the Earl of Hopetoun, as follows:

"The Queen commands me to express through you to the people of Australia her Majesty's heartfelt interest in the inauguration of the Commonwealth, and her earnest wish that, under Divine Providence, it may insure increased prosperity and well being to her loyal and beloved subjects in Australia."

The weather for such an occasion was not of the best, but it did not deter immense crowds from thronging the streets from an early hour. A procession formed of Ministers, officials, Judges, clergy, members of the House of Commons, trades unions and all kinds of societies, allegorical cars, colonial, Indian and imperial troops and bluejackets, moved at 10 o'clock down the troop-lined route toward Government House. As the centre of the procession halted at Government House, Lord Hopetoun emerged from the grounds in the State carriage. He drove past the remainder of the procession and took up a position at the rear.

Shortly after noon the procession entered the park, into which thousands of the public followed, swelling the multitude that had already assembled.

The Governor's arrival at the pavilion erected for the occasion was announced by artillery salutes and the pealing of cathedral and other bells. The various Chief Justices and Cabinet officers were awaiting him, and as soon as the Earl of Hopetoun took up his position a choir of 1,000 voices sang "O God, Our Help in Ages Past." After his commission had been read Lord Hopetoun took the oath of office. Rousing cheers re-echoing among the hills accompanied this act. The signature and swearing in of the first Federal Ministers followed.

Lord Hopetoun briefly congratulated the members of the Cabinet, and then read the Queen's message, which evoked prolonged cheering. This was followed by a second message, as follows:

"Her Majesty's Government send cordial greeting to the Commonwealth of Australia. They welcome her to her place among the nations united under her Majesty's sovereignty, and confidently anticipate for the new federation a future of everincreasing prosperity and influence. They recognize in the long-desired consummation of the hopes of patriotic Australians a further step in the direction of permanent unity of the British Empire, and they are satisfied that the wider powers and responsibilities henceforth secured to Australia will give a fresh opportunity for a display of that generous loyalty and devotion to the throne of the empire which has characterized the action in the past of its several States."

Ten thousand pupils of the public schools then sang the hymn "Australia Fair," and the proceedings were concluded by the choir singing a Te Deum, the "Hallelujah" chorus, and "God Save the Queen."

The city was brilliantly illuminated this evening with unique and appropriate designs. The State banquet in the Town Hall was a brilliant affair, being attended by 1,000 guests. Some disappointment was caused by the absence of Lord Hopetoun, who was much fatigued by the exertions of the day, although he has not suffered further ill effects.

Melbourne, Brisbane, and the other capitals have all been celebrating on a smaller scale and swearing in the local Governors.

The new Commonwealth Ministry will, it is expected, form on protective tariff lines.

LAD KILLS HIS PLAYMATE.

Long Island Boys Find a Revolver and a Tragedy Follows.

NORTHPORT, L. I., Jan. 1.—Peter Martenson, ten years old, accidentally shot and killed Joseph Mirtleson to-day. Mirtleson was of the same age as the boy who shot him. The Martenson lad was badly injured himself by the bullet which killed his playmate. The boys were playing about the home of the Martenson lad, and came upon a revolver.

After they had been playing with the weapon some time, a cartridge it contained went off. The Martenson boy is said to have been trying to raise the hammer, but his strength was not equal to the effort, and when part way up the hammer slipped from his fingers and came down upon the cartridge. The lad had the weapon grasped in his left hand, with his palm over the muzzle.

Th Mirtleson boy was standing directly in front of his companion, watching the operation of raising the hammer. When the explosion took place the bullet tore through the left hand of Martenson and then passed into the Mirtleson boy's chest and penetrated his left lung. He bled to death in a short time. The Martenson boy's hand is badly shattered, and it may have to be amputated at the wrist.

Widow of Murdered Man Very Ill.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Jan. 1.—Mrs. Frank Richardson, widow of the wealthy merchant of Savannah who was murdered on Christmas Eve, is in a precarious condition to-night, and may die at any moment. She is suffering from nervous prostration caused by the tragedy, and she has been dangerously ill since the evidence given at the inquest yesterday by the servant, Bessie Phillips. The relatives of the dead man discredit the evidence of this girl, which was of a sensational character, reflecting upon the widow.

INTERVIEW WITH EARL LI

He Says the Emperor Is Willing to Banish the Boxer Leaders—Wants Legation Guards Limited.

PEKING, Dec. 31.—A representative of The Associated Press to-day had a personal interview with Li-Hung-Chang, who shows plainly physical evidence of his recent illness, but whose mind has not been affected by his sickness and is as vigorous as ever.

In the course of his conversation with the correspondent, Earl Li said he would prefer to meet the Ministers and Commissioners at his house, if such an arrangement were possible, on account of the condition of his health, but he would not, under the circumstances, make suggestions.

He said also that Emperor Kwang-Su was desirous of complying in all particulars with the demands of the powers. On the other hand, the Emperor thought the powers should order a cessation of the frequent irritating expeditions, which he looked upon as unnecessary and as doing a deal of harm. It would be quite possible now, he said, to maintain complete order in the province, with the assistance of a small number of Chinese troops, and he hoped that the powers would agree to keep as at present the troops now stationed at Peking and Tien-Tsin and along the railway.

The Emperor, Li-Hung-Chang asserts, is willing to punish all those named by the powers by banishment to the furthest parts of the Chinese dominions, on the northwestern frontier; and their return, he declares, will be prohibited under penalty of decapitation. His Majesty is anxious also to have the number of legation guards limited, and that other boundaries be specified, and he hopes the foreign armies will be recalled as early as possible in the Spring.

China will endeavor, says Earl Li, by every means in her power to prove that she intends compliance with the demands contained in the note, and to show her desire to make the country safe and habitable for foreigners. He believes the powers will not insist upon the total destruction of the forts.

A meeting of the foreign Ministers will be held as soon as Sir Ernest Mason Satow, the British Minister, who is suffering from chills and fever, shall have recovered sufficiently to be present, and when a date and place for meeting the Chinese Commissioners shall have been agreed upon.

CZAR THANKS HIS TROOPS.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 1.—At Livadia the Czar yesterday reviewed the Russian troops that have returned from China. His Majesty passed in front of the detachments and then ordered a march past. As each company passed the Czar thanked the troops for their services. Dinner was served to the soldiers in their barracks, where the Czar passed about from one table to another addressing remarks to individual soldiers. Subsequently, holding aloft a glass of brandy, his Majesty addressed the troops as follows:

"Brothers: I rejoice to see you assembled here, gallant heroes that you are, returning from so far a country after such an arduous campaign. I drink to your health and prosperity, and that of the whole of that glorious Iron Rifle Brigade of the Thirteenth Rifle Regiment, and to that of the Battery of the Fourth Artillery Division."

As the troops left the dining room the Czar again addressed them. "Once more," he said, "I thank you, brothers, for your heroic services. May you return safe and sound to your families."

The officers of the detachments subsequently lunched at the palace, and there the Czar toasted them in these words:

"I welcome you again, and thank you for the part you have taken in the expedition just concluded; and I drink to the health of the Thirteenth Rifle Regiment and the whole of the Fourth Rifle Brigade, together with the Fourth Artillery and Rifle Division, as well as the representativea of the fleet."

Later the Czar appeared at the breakwater at Yalta and boarded a steamer on which the detachments were drawn up. After inspection of the troops' quarters, the Czar with his own hand presented to the non-commissioned officers the insignia of a military order.

Killed by a Pittsburg Street Car.

PITTSBURG, Jan. 1.—J. P. Saln, for the past seven years editor of The Volksblatt, this city, was almost instantly killed to-night by being thrown by a street car. He was forty-six years old, and has been connected with German newspapers in this city for many years. Mr. Saln was boarding a car near his home to go to his office, and in some way was thrown backward, breaking his back in the fall.

WAR OF ABSTRACT COMPANIES.

Chicago Institution Passes Its Semi-Annual Dividend.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—The Board of Directors of the Security Title and Trust Company has decided to pass the semi-annual dividend due in January, and stockholders will be notified to that effect. This follows similar action by the Chicago Title and Trust Company last week.

President Rickcords of the Security Company, in speaking of the matter to-day, said that the prolonged war between the abstract companies made it advisable not to pay the dividend. "We have made some money," he said, "but the condition of the business is such that it was determined best to add it to our reserve." In July the company reduced its dividend rate from a 6 to a 4 per cent. basis.

MOTORMEN MUST BE PROTECTED.

Order Issued that All Boston Street Cars Be Vestibuled.

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—The Railroad Commissioners this afternoon issued an order compelling the Boston Elevated Railway Company to equip all street cars in Boston with vestibules. The order provides that the road shall have cars vestibuled on two lines of the system by Dec. 1 next, but the company is given four years in which to equip all its cars in that manner.

The order is the outcome of an act of the Legislature of last year, which provides that all street railways in the State should protect their motormen in this manner. The act, however, left the question of vestibules on street cars in Boston to the Railroad Commissioners. The board therefore gave a number of hearings in the matter, at which the company was represented by counsel and a vigorous defense was offered

FELL ON TO ELEVATED TRACK.

Approaching Train Signaled Just in Time to Save a Life.

Michael Callahan, a laborer, fifty-three years old, living at the corner of High Street and Hudson Avenue, Brooklyn, had a narrow escape from death at the Chatham Square elevated station last night. Callahan boarded a Second Avenue train up-town with a friend. Both got off at Chatham Square to transfer to a Third Avenue train, bound for City Hall.

Callahan staggered from the train to the platform, and fell on the track. His fall stunned him. His friend ran and called the station agent, who seized a red lantern and rushed up the track to stop a coming train. The warning was just in time, as the engineer succeeded in stopping his engine within a few feet of Callahan's prostrate body.

Dr. Nelson of the Hudson Street Hospital was summoned and dressed a scalp wound and several contusions that Callahan received when he fell to the track. The man's friend then took him home.

Addicks and Anti-Addicks Republicans Divide Offices.

DOVER, Del., Jan. 1.—The Delaware Legislature organized to-day at 1 o'clock after the Addicks and anti-Addicks Republicans held a conference that lasted all morning over a division of the officers of the Senate and House of Representatives. Both factions, jointly, control 20 of the 52 members of the Assembly, and they had decided to consider a proposition that would enable them to divide the places.

The anti-Addicks members were given first choice, and chose Henry A. Ellison of Mount Pleasant for President of the Senate. The Addicks factions then chose James V. McCommons of Wyoming for Speaker of the House. The other appointments were then made, each faction choosing alternately.

GOV. ODELL.

Can Gov. ODELL put his finger on any spot in the official career of his predecessor and say "There THOMAS C. PLATT was helpful to GOV. ROOSEVELT?" Does it seem to him that Mr. ROOSEVELT gained anything by trying to keep on good terms with PLATT? Is it not a fact that he injured his public reputation and lost the confidence of some who had trusted him by his too frequent consultations with PLATT and his occasional willingness to serve him? Is it not notorious that, in spite of his considerate treatment of the boss, he was at the last denied a second term as Governor, which he wanted, and forced to take the nomination for Vice President, which he did not want?

It ought to be as plain as noonday to Gov. ODELL that he has nothing to gain from PLATT, except by keeping him as far away as possible; nothing to fear from him except his friendship, association, and counsel. His political safety, his reputation, depend upon keeping that man at arm's length.

All the politicians will tell Gov. ODELL that this advice is preposterous and impossible. Mr. ROOSEVELT thought so. He went no further in his advances toward PLATT than many another good man would have done in his place. He was in politics, had gone far, and wanted to go further. It was a perfectly sound maxim of policy that he should be on terms with the chief of the organization. If the chief had not been wholly evil and contaminating he would have profited by his counsel and influence. But PLATT is wholly evil and contaminating. He not only hurt the Governor and changed his political career by hostile interference, he even stooped to make the Governor's secretary the instrument of one of his sordid and vile jobs. He will hurt and disgrace Gov. ODELL if he is permitted to be influential in the new administration.

The office of Governor of New York has been held by men so great that history has made their names illustrious. Mr. ODELL will not take it amiss if we say that some of them have surpassed him in natural capacity and experience in large public affairs. Yet by taking infinite pains he can make his administration distinguished so that history will make room for his name. But he must keep away from PLATT. That is fundamental. We know that he has been pretty near PLATT in the past. Probably he thinks he owes the boss much. He owes the people more, and himself something. Ingratitude is sometimes a shining political virtue.

There are stories that the new Governor will cut loose from PLATT and be in all things his own master. Stories go for nothing. We should be glad to know that these stories are true, but they can be proved true only by Gov. ODELL himself. The people of New York watch with sympathy and hopefulness for the early unfolding of his policy.

HOW LONG?

Can the Administration give any encouragement to the hope that the war in the Philippines will be ended during the present year? It began early in February, 1899. It has lasted almost two years. We have won many victories, we have killed a good many Tagals, and they have killed or captured a good many of our troops. We have not conquered them, we have not restored peace and order to the Island of Luzon, nor inspired the natives with respect for our authority. We cannot hide the truth by calling it a guerrilla warfare, or by saying that hostility is now manifested only by roving bands of unorganized cutthroats. Surface appearances lend support to these extenuating phrases, but rebellion has not been crushed and the conditions of war exist. We have not captured or killed AGUINALDO, who is the inspiring cause of the trouble.

The American people are plainly tired of this Philippine war. They cannot follow with understanding or satisfaction the petty and ineffective campaigning of our troops. They cannot understand why decisive operations are not planned and carried out. They find it hard to exclude from their minds the suspicion that somewhere incompetence is deferring the restoration of order and putting off the day when the civilizing work of building up can begin. They are aware that the nature of the country and the disposition of the Tagal make our work difficult. The perplexities of the British in South Africa furnish an illustration of how hard it is to take all the fight out of an imperfectly civilized enemy who has the run of his own country. But the Filipinos are inferior to the Boers in courage, capacity, and equipment. The Nation is surprised and disappointed that Gen. MACARTHUR has not sooner finished the work passed on to him from the hands of Gen. OTIS.

Every step and every measure taken against the rebel forces of AGUINALDO has been necessary and justified. The fear is that they have not been wisely taken or with a sufficiently stern resolution. We need hardly say that we have not a spark of sympathy with the reckless anti-imperialistic enemies of the Administration. Their blue-light policy and their utterances have tended to encourage resistance to our authority and to prolong the war. When AGUINALDO'S forces attacked our troops it became our duty to fight them to the point of extermination, if they would not haul down their rebel flag short of extermination. But why does it take us such an unconscionably long time to teach them reason and obedience?

The Administration must be aware that the case of its enemies is not weakened nor the confidence of its friends augmented by the daily reading about all this cost and killing. To kill rebellion by inches and trust to patience and slow time to bring back peace and contentment is not a humane or a wise policy. It cannot be the lack of money. Is it the lack of troops, supplies, transportation, ammunition, artillery? Is it the lack of a competent commander? The public simply does not know where the trouble lies. It does know that there is trouble somewhere. Where is it? How long is this Philippine war going to last?

SENATOR CLARK, MONTANA.

Senator CLARK of Montana has found a defender in the Chairman of the Democratic State Committee of his State, Mr. WALTER COOPER, whose letter we print this morning.

Although we are quite willing to give the friend of the Senator a hearing in reply to comments of our own, we are bound to say that he does not make out a strong case. Mr. CLARK was declared by the unanimous report of a Senate committee to have no title to the seat he held in the Senate because of "briberies and corrupt practices by his agents" and violations of the laws of Montana for the protection of purity of elections. The members of the committee differed as to some of the testimony on which this conclusion was reached. They did not differ at all as to the conclusion itself. Mr. COOPER says that there was "nothing in the report that raised the presumption that Mr. CLARK was himself ever concerned in any act of bribery, or that he ever knew of any such thing." This is a curiously erroneous statement as to the contents of the report. The very finding of the committee raises a distinct presumption, to call it by no more emphatic term, that Mr. CLARK knew of the "briberies, attempted briberies, and corrupt practices" of his agents. Unless the average mind of Montana is more simple and trustful than any type found east of the Rocky Mountains, it presumes that acts done by the agents of a man for his advantage and under his general direction are known to him.

It may, indeed, be conceivable that the $139,000 which Mr. CLARK testified he had expended in the politics of Montana previous to his "election" to the Senate was scattered blindly by him through the channels offered without any reference to the effect on his own fortunes. And it may be that all the testimony that convinced the Senate committee that he was not entitled to his seat was procured by his political enemies. But the people of Montana must be very careless of their own reputation if they imagine that the revelations before that committee can safely be ignored. They were disgraceful in the last degree. If Mr. CLARK has since been "vindicated" by the voters of Montana it is bad for the State. The verdict of vindication of such a man is necessarily the verdict of condemnation of the people who seek thus to vindicate him.

We cannot regard Mr. CLARK as an innocent or respectable or decent representative of American citizenship. He appears to us, in the light of his public career and on the evidence of the committee of the body in which he sought a seat, a bad and dangerous man. We should deeply regret it if the Senate should find itself legally unable to shut him out. His fellow-citizens of Montana must take such view of him as they choose. His presence in the Senate of the United States would be a shameful thing for the whole Nation.

THE "ARMISTICE" IN CHINA.

It was scarcely necessary for the State Department to emphasize the absurdity of the report from Peking that an "armistice" had been proclaimed on behalf of the Powers, in view of such disposition as China had shown to meet their views. An armistice, as the etymology of the word itself implies, is a standstill of arms, a mutual suspension of hostilities in the course of war. But there has been no state of public war in China. The invasion of the country was by a Sheriff's posse, so to say. There had been a riot, a disturbance of public order which the local Government had shown itself unable or unwilling to suppress, and which was directed especially against the representatives of foreign nations. It was the same case provided for in our Constitution, in which the President of the United States is authorized to protect the people of a State "against domestic violence." To this protection the Government of China was unequal, and the Powers dispatched troops of their own to protect or rescue their representatives.

Never in the history of the world can there have been a cause in which force was more righteously invoked. The German Ambassador had been murdered, and, as was strongly suspected, the murder was committed by connivance with the Chinese authorities. But the invasion was nevertheless not an act of war against China. Our own naval commander at Tien-Tsin showed a perception of the situation beyond that of any of his colleagues of other services in protesting against a bombardment of the Chinese forts at the mouth of the Pei-Ho because that would be an act of war, and we were not at war with China. We have maintained, thanks to the clearness and the firmness of all the departments concerned at Washington, the same superiority ever since. The expedition of rescue, the "posse" to repress domestic violence, was in time. If it was strong enough to frighten the Chinese Government out of Peking, that was an incident in its necessary work, and did not, any more than the preceding incidents, constitute a state of war. When the "Commander in Chief of the allied forces in China" actually appeared on the scene the fighting necessary to accomplish the rescue had all been done. Our own Government promptly withdrew its forces from his command, and undoubtedly builded better than it knew. Whatever suspicions it may have had of the uses to which American troops might be put under such a commander, its wildest dreams could not have approached the reality.

Gen. CHAFFEE'S letter, at once famous and obscure, which was returned by Field Marshal the Count VON WALDERSEE, "on account of its tone," is rumored to have dwelt offensively on the fact that the troops concerned in the "punitive expeditions" had not been concerned in such fighting as was necessary to deliver the beleaguered foreigners. To pretend that the cessation of the punitive expeditions is an armistice is to dignify them altogether beyond their deserts. They were not in the least acts of war. They were simply acts of robbery, arson, rape, and murder, perpetrated by various persons of various nationalities, who disgraced the uniforms they respectively wore, and they were perpetrated with the connivance and under the sanction of the "Commander in Chief of the allied forces in China." They had no military or political significance whatever. They were simply so many cases of brutal behavior which were rendered the more cynically brutal in that they professed to be perpetrated in the interest of Christianity; that is to say, of a higher and nobler social order than that of the Chinese, under which it was found possible for a Government to connive at or at least not effectively to punish the murder of a foreign Ambassador. But the Chinese atrocities have faded into nothingness in comparison with the atrocities of the "punitive expeditions," in the wholesale shedding of innocent blood, the wholesale slaughter of unresisting Chinamen, and outrage upon helpless Chinese women, which constitute the entire military record in China of the Commander in Chief of the allied forces. To call an agreement to refrain from these crimes an armistice is like describing as an armistice an agreement on the part of the City Government of New York to make disorderly houses pull down their shutters, and gambling houses to carry on their business more quietly, and saloons to limit entrance on Sundays to the back doors, until the existing excitement blew over. That is to say, it is not an agreement to suspend hostilities, but simply to refrain from crime.

Christendom, the Western World, modern civilization, by whatever name we call the thing we all belong to, has far more deeply injured itself in China by its own procedures than it was injured, or could possibly have been injured, by the procedures of the Chinese. Very curiously, it is only the Americans and the Japanese who have kept their skirts entirely clean of the filth of these punitive expeditions. All the better for them. All the worse for the others, among whom we have particular sorrow in recognizing Great Britain. What would intelligent and appreciative Britons not give for the innocence of the United States. And this, our innocence, we cannot be too strongly exhorted, has come about, not by a popular demand, but by the fact that the Government, meaning, we suppose, particularly the State Department, has had premonitions and perceptions in advance of those of the public. At any rate, when we hear that "the Powers," by way of a concession, have agreed to forego, till further notice, murder and arson and robbery and rape as means of constraint upon China, we may all be thankful that we, as a Nation, have no part in that "most filthy bargain."

FRANCE AND THE ASSOCIATIONS.

An evidently inspired article which appeared in the columns of Le Matin of Paris, Dec. 16, contained the following passage: "These matters [the Amnesty bill] once cleared up, the Prime Minister will demand in January the consideration of the Associations bill, which he has much at heart, for he regards it as the surest and most efective bill of Republican action." At Toulouse on Oct. 28 last M. WALDECK-ROUSSEAU made a speech in which he described this bill, saying that it was the only thing which could insure the permanency of republican institutions. On the other hand, in anticipation of an alleged anti-Catholic law, the Pope was last week quoted in an interview as describing the bill as "the negation of all the laws of liberty," while all the machinery of a powerful and spectacular mother church has been set in motion in France to prevent its passage.

As in the remarkable contest which is bound to ensue some confusion may arise over the terms "Pope" and "Curia," "Associations" and "Catholics," a few words of explanation may not now be amiss. It is well, in the first place, to bear in mind that the Pope does not give interviews for publication, and that the growth of the associations in France has of late years quite as much disturbed the tranquillity of LEO XIII. as it has that of the most ardent French reformer. When the Pope has issued an encyclical letter on the subject of the associations, one may learn what his Holiness personally thinks of the matter, and not before. It is no exaggeration to say that not a single Anglophobic statement, recently published as the Pope's, in the Osservatore Romano, the advertised organ of the Vatican, was ever uttered or inspired by his Holiness. And the difference between these alleged Papal statements and the encyclical letters is the difference between the Roman Curia and the Pope. Again, against Catholics the French Government has nothing. It does not go to extremes as did GAMBETTA, or, at the present day, as do men like YVES GUYOT and URBAIN GOHIER, but it would strike at all associations or societies which may become the centre of treasonable propaganda, and which at the present time are maintained contrary to the laws of France. The revelations of the Dreyfus affair made it clear that under the privileges granted religious orders a condition of society had been propagated which not only made the cause célèbre possible, but which also furthered the purposes of the Royalists under the cloak of the Church and the "military spirit." There should be no difficulty in comprehending the true situation when it is said that many of the supporters of the Associations bill are ardent Catholics, both lay and clerical, in spite of what may emanate from the Vatican as alleged interviews with Pope LEO XIII.

There are two articles in the bill which the enemies of the French Government interpret as being directed against Catholics. These are Articles 2 and 13. They read as follows:

> Every association [of persons, not necessarily holding property in common] founded for a cause or in view of an object that is illicit, contrary to the laws, to the constitution, to public order, to morality, or entailing renunciation of natural individual rights, [droits qui ne sont pas dans le commun,] is null and of no effect.
> There may not be formed, without previous authorization being given by a formal decree of the Government, any associations [i. e., of persons, not necessarily of goods as well] between French subjects and foreigners, any associations between Frenchmen and Frenchmen, of which the headquarters and Directorate are located abroad or intrusted to foreigners.

Article 2 explains itself. In this country it is included in some form or other in most municipal police regulations. Article 13 also appears quite harmless to the average citizen of any creed whatsoever, although some might imagine that foreign stock companies will be looked after more sharply by a paternal government. But by the actual provision of this article the Latin orders of Jesuits, Dominicans, Carmelites, Capucins, et al., which are cosmopolitan societies, are brought under the eye of the Government. And this is particularly distasteful to the Roman Curia. At this distance, and in America, it is hard to understand such legislation, which to liberal eyes appears somewhat ridiculous. Nevertheless, it is abundantly evident that the French Republic has been seriously menaced by the associations. It is a question, however, whether the proposed measures will be an effective remedy. GAMBETTA did not succeed with a like policy.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Monday night's exercises at the City Hall gave fitting recognition to a moment which, though its distinction from other moments was an entirely artificial convention, nevertheless possessed no small amount of real significance, and therefore well deserved the attention it received, there and elsewhere. Appreciating this fact, a throng of 100,000 people, more or less, assembled in the damp and chilly park to hear the singing and to catch a word or two of the speeches. The celebration was one in which municipal officials could participate with dignity and propriety—in which, indeed, it was their obvious duty so to participate. The public did its part, the singers did theirs, and the City Government had a considerable representation. In the natural course of things, the central figure of the proceedings would have been—the Mayor. His office not only gives him the privilege of personalizing the municipality on such occasions, but it imposes upon him an obligation to do so that is not less strong than honorable. The present Mayor of New York, however, does not value any privileges or recognize any obligations not to his individual profit or liking. He goes through his routine functions morosely, he acknowledges no claims for courtesy, and the civic ceremonies which are the expression of civic manners interest him not at all and receive the countenance of his presence only on the rarest occasions. The kindest of his critics try to admire the stolidity with which he endures attack and condemnation, but even they credit him with no higher impassibility than that which is the common attribute of pachyderms and mollusks. It must be admitted that his long and frequent lapses into deafness and dumbness are on the whole the most satisfactory, or least offensive and least humiliating, periods of his existence. Perhaps that is why nobody complained of his failure to take part in the city's welcome to the twentieth century. He was not missed, he never is missed, he never will be missed, anywhere. But then, he is the man whom New York, with some knowledge of his peculiarities and with full knowledge of its ignorance of his suitability for the office, voluntarily chose to be its Mayor. If the city does not like him, it should blame itself; if it does like him, it can afford to ignore the comments of those with different tastes. We have had Mayors in the past who would have had something to say to their fellow-citizens at the dawn of a new century.

—A long and able review which The New York Medical Journal makes of the nineteenth century's achievements in medicine and surgery closes with an enthusiastic eulogy of the ceaseless effort of the doctors to stamp out disease. "What other body of men than the medical profession," it asks, "has ever bent its energies to the task of annihilating its own means of existence? Without disease there is no need of doctors. * * * If sanitation had been thrust upon us from without, and we had simply acquiesced—had bowed to the inevitable, so to speak—we could take no particular credit to ourselves, for mere artisans, even the much-abused plumbers, have done that much; but the medical profession has itself been the prime mover in every effort to blot out disease from the face of the earth, and, resting their pretensions on that glorious fact, physicians may confidently trust to the coming historian for that exaltation which shall more than take the place of material reward." Now, isn't that just a little bit nonsensical? It is as far from our desire as from our intention—and nothing could be more remote—to detract in the slightest degree from the honor due to preventive medicine, but really we fail to see any special development of altruism in its practitioners. The extinction of disease is in a way their aim and hope, but it is not their expectation, and the success anticipated by even the most optimistic of them does not threaten the income of any man alive. Preventive medicine is at present, and long promises to be, as profitable as any other—perhaps is more profitable than any other—and the doctors who devote themselves in whole or part to it are reducing the earning capacity, not of themselves, or of their children, or of their grandchildren, but of descendants much too far away to be the object of any except the most academic sort of sympathy.

—New proof that the municipal authorities of Omaha and Mr. CUDAHY are acting at cross-purposes in their efforts to capture the kidnappers is to be found in the fact that no sooner does the City Council announce the intention of paying out of the public funds the reward which the criminals threatened Mr. CUDAHY for offering than Mr. CUDAHY states that he is not at all frightened by the anonymous menaces and that his reward still stands. The intention of the City Council was presumably good, and its delicacy of consideration was certainly remarkable, but there is much reason for questioning the wisdom of supplying so great an incentive for police activity as the two great rewards provide. With such remuneration in prospect, it becomes rather surer that somebody will be caught and convicted than that the right persons will be punished. Detectives, like other people, should do their whole duty for their regular salaries. Without going so far as to say that the taking of rewards should be permitted only to amateur and private detectives, it can still be safely asserted that the system is one easily open to abuse, and the zeal it inspires does not always result in the distribution of exact justice. Recent happenings in Kentucky were not calculated to increase public confidence in the tendency of enormous rewards to accomplish desirable results.

—An article by Gen. JOSEPH WHEELER, published by The London Mail, protests vehemently against the charge, too often made both in the United States and England, that the American troops in the Philippines are teaching lessons of drunkenness and savagery to the natives. Speaking of the men who served under himself, the General says: "They occupied many cities and towns, and their conduct toward the citizens was as kind and just as that of the soldiers of Governors Island to the people of New York City. We occupied or went through a great many cities, and the soldiers under my command had a great many dealings with the natives. I always took pains to ascertain before leaving a city whether or not my men had paid for everything that they had obtained. Complaints were very infrequent. I generally found they were caused by an honest misunderstanding." The following passage is interesting, as hinting at the General's expectation regarding the Philippines: "In 1848, when Gen. KEARNY appeared before Santa Fé, a delegation of citizens came out to meet him, and he informed them that he came, not as a foe, but as a friend. He assured them that if they submitted to the United States authorities they should have the same position in the United States that they held in the Mexican Republic. Gov. ARMIJO then left the city, and Gen. KEARNY'S army was admitted into the plaza without the firing of a gun. He there made a treaty, as the representative of the United States Government, giving the same pledges as he had previously given before entering the city. That was in the year 1848, and New Mexico has not yet been admitted to the sisterhood of States, but I suppose that nobody doubts that she ultimately will be admitted."

IN DEFENSE OF SENATOR CLARK.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A great many of my friends and myself, all citizens of the State of Montana, have read and discussed the editorial contained in the issue of your paper of the 13th inst., entitled "Mr. Clark's Vindication."

In view of the fact that your paper has a reputation for fairness, and that the editorial referred to is, therefore, clearly based upon lack of information, or upon misinformation, of the condition of affairs in Montana, I beg the liberty of sending you this communication, stating to you what a majority of Montana people believe to be the facts.

For many years the political and business enemies of Mr. Clark have, in all political matters, flooded the State with money, which has been used to accomplish the defeat of Mr. Clark and his friends, and to promote any business interests that Mr. Clark's enemies might hold in sympathy. As, for example, it was sworn to in the City of Washington by Mr. Marcus Daly that several hundred thousand dollars had been spent by himself and his friends to secure the removal of the State capital from Helena to Anaconda.

I do not wish to be understood by this communication that the expenditure of money in politics for corrupt purposes is ever to be countenanced. Such acts are as much condemned in Montana as elsewhere.

The circumstances surrounding the election of Mr. Clark to the United States Senate have been grievously misrepresented, and I feel confident that you will take pleasure in correcting the statement, by which you have unintentionally done Mr. Clark and the people of our State great injustice.

The State of Montana is populated by enterprising, educated and advanced people, who have come from the older States, and who yield to no persons, and to no community, in their devotion to honesty and honor. They are celebrated throughout the Union for their business integrity and personal honesty, and they regard Mr. Clark as an exemplar of those qualities.

My acquaintance with Mr. Clark for many years justifies me in the assertion that he is one of the few men who have become prosperous by the actual creation of wealth, being a producer and not a promoter or speculator; and I may say that substantially every dollar of his fortune has been an addition to the wealth of the country, and in its accumulation all associated with him have in some way become participants.

It is true, as you have said, that the report of the Committee on Privileges and Elections, excluding Mr. Clark, was offered before the Senate; but there was nothing in the report that raised the presumption that Mr. Clark was himself ever concerned in any act of bribery, or that he ever knew of any such thing.

The evidence that was admitted before the Senate against the interests of Mr. Clark in the investigation would not have been entertained in any court of justice. This is demonstrated by referring to the report of Senators Pettus and Harris, who are both eminent lawyers. They say, among other things, the following:

> "The report is merely the writing of the Chairman, with the aid of one other member, and never was submitted to any meeting of the committee, and, therefore, cannot be considered as the words of the committee.
>
> "We believed that in this important inquiry the committee was bound by and ought to act on the ordinary rules of evidence. And in this connection we merely followed another member of the committee, who is one of our great lawyers, and who is fresh from a long service as a nisi prius Judge under Federal authority. That great lawyer, in gentle but forceful language, admonished us of the great danger of disregarding the common rules of evidence established by great Judges through the centuries and known to all lawyers. But it was said the committee was not a court, and had a right to receive 'hearsay' evidence in order to get on the track of better evidence. And we did receive it constantly, and in great volumes.
>
> "And there is another feature of that report which should be noticed. Statements are made as facts which are based only on the testimony of a witness of doubtful credit, and that testimony plainly contradicted."

The testimony was made up of gossip of his enemies, and of statements of other people made among themselves, all without the presence of Mr. Clark, except in some instances, in which the witnesses who testified to direct conversations with Mr. Clark were proved to be of bad character, and their statements were discredited.

Many of my fellow-citizens, including myself, consider it fair that you should conclude that the best judges of the truth or falsity of the charges that have been made against him are his fellow-citizens and neighbors.

Mr. Clark returned to Montana last June, and every question involved in the discussion before the United States Senate, and to which you have referred, has been submitted to the people of this State in various political campaigns from the month of June down to the present time, and Mr. Clark has been vindicated as to his position in this matter by the people of his own State, by two State Conventions, by the Democratic National Convention, and by the people at a general election.

A paper of the importance of yours has the power to do much for the injury or benefit of any individual, and it is my belief that you would not knowingly do injustice to so reputable a gentleman and citizen of my State.

I beg space in your columns for the publication of this communication.

WALTER COOPER,
Chairman Democratic State Committee.

DR. CUYLER'S REPLY TO "A WORKINGMAN."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE TIMES of Dec. 30 appears an article entitled "A Workingman's Views," which deserves a reply because its writer labors under a serious misconception. He charges me with having made an "unjust and almost virulent assault" upon Mr. Robert Fulton Cutting in these columns several weeks ago! So far from it, I said that I had "a very hearty admiration" for Mr. Cutting. The one objection that I made to his course was that as President of the Citizens' Union he was advocating a policy that might divert the Union from its one great purpose, and that is to deliver Greater New York from the iniquitous tyranny of Tammany Hall. Mr. Cutting is a very large-hearted philanthropist, and I do not doubt that he earnestly aims at "the betterment of the social condition of his less fortunate fellows." Excellent as are Mr. Cutting's views, they are not and will not be the issue next Fall. To divide the counsels of the Union did not seem to be wise, and I frankly, and perhaps rather bluntly, said so.

"A Workingman" complains that in my speech last October before the election, I said so much about "money, money, money." Yes, I did make an earnest protest against robbing every day laborer and every seamstress and every employe of their honest wages by passing off on them a dishonest fifty-cent dollar. And in pleading for a sound currency I felt that I was rendering as genuine a benefit to the laboring classes as Mr. Cutting or any other philanthropist could advocate. I discussed many other public questions in my speech; but I admit that I made "honest money" very prominent; for dishonest money is wholesale villainy.

I am sorry that "A Workingman" seems to be under such a misconception of my position for the last forty years in Brooklyn. He is the first man that ever charged me with want of sympathy for the working classes! If on some Sunday he will go down from Herkimer Street to Pacific Street, (near Bond,) he will see a commodious building called "Cuyler Chapel," which was built by the young people of Lafayette Avenue Church, of which I was the pastor. That building is filled on Sunday by working people and over seven hundred of their children; through the week there are sewing classes and a savings bank as well as kindergarten and prayer meetings. Last Friday evening I addressed a great crowd of plain working people and their children there, and told them that of no other of my "namesakes" was I so proud as of that. My only reason, Mr. Editor, for troubling you with this note is that your correspondent, "A Workingman," had gone quite out of his way to strike a personal blow at a stranger, and has struck the wrong man. If he will drop his anonymous mask and call upon me, I will be right glad to see him.

THE OLD FAMILIAR FACES.

J. J. Montague in Portland Oregonian.

Oh! those old familiar faces, how they linger in the mind,
How the recollection of them 'round our mem'ry is entwined.
There's that man in Keene, New Hampshire, who was going to die for sure
Till he swallowed sixteen bottles of Dead Shot Consumption Cure;
Down in Linden, Alabama, lives that well-known blacksmith's wife,
Who, by means of Filler's Pellets, found the pathway back to life.
Both their faces linger with us, and refuse to go away,
For in many advertisements we can see them every day.

Up in Tuttle, Colorado, dwells a famous miner who Lost two legs in one explosion. Jones's Life Saver pulled him through.
And in Manly Junction, Iowa, two section hands reside,
Who, by using Johnson's Tonic, keep this side the Great Divide.
In the town of Burton, Texas, is a man who the M. D.'s
Said would die in twenty minutes. Ransom's Oil cured his disease.
We can see them all before us, though they live so far away,
For their portraits all are printed in the papers every day.

And the babies! Ah! the babies, sitting on their mothers' knees,
While the man who takes the picture smiles and says, "Look pleasant, please!"
How their pudgy little features are engraved upon our hearts,
Though the little ones that own them live in very distant parts.
What a wilderness of babies we have lately come to know,
Who've been saved by foods and mushes, clear from Maine to Mexico.
We have never heard their wailing nor their prattle and their play,
But we know them, for we've seen them in the papers every day.

NEW YEAR'S DAY AT THE WHITE HOUSE

Mrs. McKinley Receives Greetings with the President.

Over 5,000 Persons Attend the Annual Reception at the Executive Mansion.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—In the long line of New Year's receptions at the White House which each year inaugurate the social season at the National Capital none, perhaps, was more brilliant than the one which to-day ushered in the twentieth century. And perhaps no feature of it was so universally gratifying to the distinguished throng which came to extend the greetings of the New Year to the Chief Executive of the Republic as the fact that the mistress of the White House was able to participate, and with the President receive the felicitations and well wishes of all.

The grounds of the mansion presented a stirring scene as the carriages began to arrive, and the long line of army and navy officers in full uniform formed to the left of the massive porte cochère. Within, under the glamour of myriads of electric lights all was brilliancy. The Marine Band, stationed near the stairway, played National airs and lively marches throughout the ceremony.

The members of the Cabinet and their wives, together with the ladies of the receiving party, were the first to arrive. They ascended to the private apartments of the President, where they exchanged greetings with President and Mrs. McKinley. The ladies of the receiving party entered the Red and Blue Parlors, and took their places behind the line.

Promptly at 11 o'clock the bugles sounded the approach of the Presidential party, and, led by Col. Bingham, the Master of Ceremonies, and Major McCauley of the Marine Corps, the President and Mrs. McKinley descended the main staircase, followed by the members of the Cabinet and their wives. As the party passed along to the receiving room the President bowed repeatedly to the crowds assembled in the corridors. Mrs. McKinley also bestowed greetings upon many in the throng, and when three sweet-faced children near the front chirped a "Happy New Year" to the first lady of the land she took a handful of buds from her bouquet of white roses and tossed them to the children. The party passed into the Blue Parlor.

In addition to the ladies of the Cabinet the following ladies were invited to occupy places behind the line, and nearly all of them were present:

Miss Kitzmiller,

Mrs. McKinley wore a gown of her favorite color, pale blue. The material was heavily embossed satin and panne velvet, and was trimmed with pearl and turquois bands and a profusion of point lace. She wore a diamond necklace, a diamond brooch, and another gleaming ornament in her hair.

After the receiving party had taken their places the long line of guests began to move. First in the line came the Ambassadors and Ministers from foreign Courts, accompanied by their full staffs. At their head was Lord Pauncefote, British Ambassador and Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, in the full uniform of his diplomatic rank. With him were Lady Pauncefote and the Hon. Miss Pauncefote and the Ambassadorial staff. Following them came Baron Fava, the Italian Ambassador; Dr. von Holleben, the German Ambassador; M. Cambon, the French Ambassador; Count Cassini, the Russian Ambassador, and Señor Don Azpiroz, the Mexican Ambassador, each accompanied by his staff and ladies. The Chinese Minister, in his rich Oriental silks, accompanied by Mme. Wu, in an elaborately embroidered gown, attracted much attention.

After the Ambassadors and Ministers came the Chief Justice and Associate Justices of the United States Supreme Court, the Judges of the Court of Appeals, Senators and Representatives in Congress, former Cabinet officers and Ministers of the United States.

The Blue Room was the centre of attraction, for here the Presidential party received. The curtains were drawn, and the shaded electric globes threw a soft light on the delicate blue of the room and brilliant assemblage. From the Blue Room the line passed through the Green Room, and then into the spacious East Room. Here the windows, mantels, and walls were massed with tall palms and flowering plants.

At 11:40 o'clock the officers of the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, brave in gold lace, appeared. According to custom, the army had precedence over the navy, and its contingent was headed by Lieut. Gen. Miles and Adjt. Gen. Corbin, each in full uniform. The naval section was headed by Admiral Dewey and his staff and the Marine Corps by Brig. Gen. Hayward. The colors of the various arms of the army service, the yellow, red, and white of the cavalry, artillery, and infantry, respectively; the deep blue of the navy, and the light blue of the Marine Corps, with the plume-graced chapeaus and helmets now sifted through the assemblage, and gave it additional color and life.

The members of the Diplomatic Corps soon departed from the residence of Secretary Hay, who entertained them at breakfast. At noon appeared the Regents and Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, the Commissioner of Fisheries, the Civil Service Commissioners, the members of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, the Commissioner of Labor, the Assistant Secretaries of the various departments, the Treasurer of the United States, Commissioner of Pensions, Commissioner of Patents, Director of the Census, Controller of the Currency, and the heads of bureaus. They were followed by the Associated Veterans of the Mexican War, now but half a dozen in number; the Grand Army of the Republic, the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, the Union Veterans, and the members of the Oldest Inhabitants' Association of the District of Columbia. At 12:30 the general public was admitted, and for an hour a continuous stream of people passed through the parlors extending their greetings to the President.

About 5,000 people had been received up to 1:30 o'clock, the hour set for closing the reception; but, as the crowd still stretched four abreast

VARIOUS DRAMATIC TOPICS

An Impression of Miss Rehan's Acting in Paul Kester's Modern Antique.

Willard in "The Professor's Love Story"—More About Miss Anglin's Acting at the Empire and Her Splendid Scene.

The play by Paul Kester, (who may still be relied on to make his mark as a dramatist some day,) in which Ada Rehan is now acting at the Knickerbocker Theatre, to the positive and unbounded delight of her audiences, (she has drawn three large ones thus far,) is an antique combination of the frivol of farce, the intrigue of comedy, and the superficial device and "suspense" of melodrama. It would not be worth while to point out how ancient and puerile are many of the expedients on which Mr. Kester relies in his second and third acts. They suffice, especially with the youngsters. But it is the fun of the thing that makes it go, not its vague shadow of the axe and the block, not its artificial and insincere representation of the persecution of warm young hearts by cold old heads.

A youth who was leaving the house after the matinée yesterday expressed the satisfaction youth takes in such a play in the current Americanese of the beginning of the twentieth century: "If Nell Gwynne had as much fun in Charles the Second's day as she has in the play, she was 'it.'"

The really vital episodes are in Act I., where Nelly, selling oranges in the street, accosts the King, whom she does not recognize, and tells him some truths about himself; in Act II., when, seated at her toilet table, like a veritable dame of fashion, she banters with the King and entertains the tattered players she knew in her days of poverty; in Act III., when she dons the wig and gown of Lord Jeffreys and administers justice with a free and open hand, and then, being discovered, orders her chair and proceeds gayly to her night's work in the playhouse. By the way, were theatrical performances given by candle light in Nelly's day? But that is a trifling detail.

The skill with which these episodes are led up to, and mingled with a tale of young lovers persecuted and befooled by villainy, is the skill that comes from without, from the assiduous study of stagecraft, not from any observation of men and manners in real life, not from any acquired or intuitive knowledge of the workings of the human heart. "Sweet Nell of Old Drury," even in its title, (for there was no "Drury Lane Theatre" in her epoch,) is a piece made on the stage for the stage. Anecdote and jest of the reign of the madcap King are cleverly employed in it, and if its development never approaches the natural, it is still smart and effective.

As for Miss Rehan, she returns to us in a buoyant mood and in full command of her powers of expression. She acts Nelly with unflagging spirits, with superb vitality, with ample grace, with adequate humor, and with all the artillery of presence, the purely theatric dexterity, all the simulation of pathos and passion the part demands. Its demands on the actress are large, too. She dominates the scene in every episode. She has much to say and much to do. Mimicry, song, dance, raillery, coquetry, swiftness and grace of motion, declamatory power, quick, richly varied and graphic play of features are required of her. It is really an uncommon example of good comedy acting, and no wonder it pleases the public. Miss Rehan will make a great deal of money at the Knickerbocker.

Mr. Willard was seen at the Garden Theatre yesterday afternoon in Barrie's charming comedy called "The Professor's Love Story," a play that is exactly the opposite of "Sweet Nell of Old Drury" in every respect, as its author studies human nature at first hand and continues to defy the traditions and the conventions when he tries to represent it for the stage. Barrie, though foremost in his time as a writer of fiction, is not an experienced or even an expert dramatist, but there is many an expert dramatist who would have given a large share of the royalties of his most successful play to have thought first of the scenes of the triangular courtship of Henders, Pete, and Effie Proctor in this comedy.

As for Professor Goodwillie, seeking cure for a malady he does not comprehend, he is a delightful fellow, and all his traits seem as fresh and entertaining now as they did when the piece was new. Mr. Willard has no comic rôle in his repertory which he acts with rarer skill, and his portrayal, which is now mellowed and perfected into the semblance of a little masterwork, is one to see and to remember. Miss Maud Hoffman acts with skill and grace as the cause of the good scholar's malady.

Mrs. Dane has so successfully worked on the sympathies of James Risby, the young diplomat, and conquered the conscience of the detective, Fendick, and built up, by elaborate lying, so perfect a case, as it seems to be, for herself, so completely winning the confidence of the great lawyer, Sir Daniel Carteret, that she believes she has triumphed at last over all her enemies. She does not know that only half the battle in her behalf has been fought when she offers up her thanks for her marvelous preservation. Love is the motive which impels her to fight her accusers. She loves Lionel and believes she has a right to the love he has proffered to her. She has made one misstep in her life and fancies she may hide that forever by falsehood and audacity.

But Sir Daniel intends to punish her slanderers and establish the fair character of his adopted son's betrothed in the courts. He fancies he has already secured enough evidence to prove she is not Felicia Hindmarsh, the unfortunate heroine of a deplorable and tragic scandal; he needs evidence to prove conclusively that Mrs. Dane is really the woman she says she is—Lucy Allen.

When he begins his inquiries to secure that evidence Mrs. Dane's pitiful little house of cards totters, her castle in the air fades. The "scene of two" with which Henry Arthur Jones lends up to his penultimate climax in his new play at the Empire Theatre is one of the best in construction, in its emotional purport, in its skillful progression, any dramatist has given the theatre in a long while.

This scene will be remembered long, too, as the "making" of Margaret Anglin. She shows in her powerful, pathetic, and wonderfully skillful acting of it the possession of talent held in abeyance in her previous work. She is distinctly a "coming woman" now, and she may in time take her place among the leaders of the stage. The scene and indeed the rôle of Mrs Dane, from first to last, do much for her; but she does as much for them.

It seems that Stephen Phillips's "Herod" will, after all, have a run of three months or so at Her Majesty's Theatre, in London. That is encouraging for the poetic drama. When "Herod" is withdrawn Beerbohm Tree will do Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," acting Malvolio to the Orsino of Robert Taber, the Sir Toby of Lionel Brough, the Clown of Courtice Pounds (remembered here as the original Nanki Poo in "The Mikado,") and the Olivia of Maude Jeffries. The Viola will probably be a comparatively unknown actress, Lily Brayton.

"RICHARD SAVAGE" IN ROCHESTER.

Henry Miller Gives Satisfaction to a Large Audience.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Jan. 1.—Henry Miller made a decided hit in his new play, "Richard Savage," at the Lyceum Theatre here last night. Mr. Miller, under the management of Wagenhals & Kemper, presented this, the latest of Madeleine Lucette Ryley's productions, to a large audience, and the applause after each act left no doubt in the management's mind that they had scored a hit. The story rehearses the career of the poet Richard Savage, as told by his biographer, Dr. Johnson, but materially embellished and amended by the author's imagination, no pretense being made at historical accuracy.

The first act presents the attic quarters of the poet; here he is informed by a former servant of Lady Mason, who was Savage's guardian from infancy, that his mother was Lady Macclesfield, now Mrs. Brett, who was the daughter of Lady Mason. Act II. is the house of Col. Brett, where he meets his mother, who refuses him recognition and denounces him as an impostor. The third act is the scene of revelry at the house of Lord Tyrconnell, ending with a duel between Savage and Lord Tyrconnell, the latter being wounded in the encounter.

The fourth act pictures Savage reduced to penury in the streets of old London. Here he meets an old enemy, Sinclair, and in the duel that follows, Sinclair is killed, not by Savage, but by a man whom he had wronged. Savage is arrested and thrown into prison, where he dies just as his pardon arrives.

MOSAICS FOR THE PHILADELPHIA MINT.

The new Mint at Philadelphia has recently found favor in the eyes of Mr. J. Knox Taylor, the Supervising Architect, and its vestibule and adjacent corridors are about to be decorated in a sumptuous fashion. The work has been given to the Glass Company of Mr. Louis C. Tiffany, where the decorations are now in process of making. The material is glass mosaic, not of that smooth and polished kind which one often sees in Italy, but a mosaic having a certain grainy surface that carries color well and is not disturbed by reflections from too mirror-like surface. At present the Tiffany Glass Company is putting in a ceiling of gold mosaic in glass, lightened with pieces of pale green and white, and having borders representing a wreath of green lit up by colored points. The mosaics with figures are eleven in number, and have been designed by Mr. William B. Van Ingen.

Following the happy suggestion of the Greek artists who wrought in lower Italy during the first century before Christ, the artist has hit upon a method of showing the various processes of coinage with children as the craftsmen. Instead of amoretti handling the blower and pincers, it is a little girl of nine, bare legged and bare armed, who stirs the fire in the furnaces and swings the hammer, melts coins, and stamps the die.

The surfaces to be decorated are somewhat varied and are about ten feet from the floor of the vestibule, so that they are within easy sight. They will be seen in the rather dark passages by the light of electric globes. As one enters the Mint from the street the wall on the left will have a series of three mosaics, a central circle, and two somewhat triangular tympanums. Here we have the little girl in the tympanum to the left heating the furnace; in the middle round she is blowing the flame, while holding a coin with a pair of pincers, and on the right she is lading out the molten metal. On the wall to the right we find her stirring the fire in architectural surroundings of a massive sort that suggest bridges and aqueducts. The centre round shows her seated at an anvil hammering at the coin, with an antique galley sailing on the water at a distance, while on the right she and another little girl are tugging away at a rope apparently hauling ore in to the furnace. In this tympanum we find another vista of arches and distant sea, suggesting the transportation of the metal.

If one now turns round facing the front door, three rounds will be observed above the entrance. In one the girl has a balance in her hand and is weighing coins, in another she and a comrade are stamping the old-fashioned double die by means of a hammer and anvil, and in the third she is blowing the bellows at the back of a very primitive furnace, while she carries the heavy implements of the craft under her arm like a set of golf sticks. Turning away from the door and walking toward the flight of stairs that lead to the numismatic room, two more of these circles will be seen to the right and left passage of the stairs. On the left the little girl is hammering coins and on the right she is stirring the molten metal. All these pictures are treated in a somwhat antique fashion without attempt to be archaeologically correct, and, of course, as far as possible apart from the realistic vein. All the appurtenances, the tools and presses have been carefully studied from objects depicted in the old treatises on coinage, so that while they do not represent the instruments now in use, they also remove the mosaics from the flatness which too close an adherence to actuality often produces.

The figures employed in these mosiacs are as strong and rich as we are accustomed to expect from Tiffany's workshop. The gold mosaic on the ceiling, rising directly from the top of the series of three, acts as a frame, but below them all the walls are of Italian marble slightly veined, so that the brilliant colers of the mosaic stand out with added strength. The five rounds above the entrance and on the opposite wall are set in semicircles of gold mosaic. The general design, however, is carried round the corners of the hall into the corridor that runs at right angles at the foot of the stairs leading to the numismatic room. While the gold mosaic continues into this corridor, and we find the same rounds carried on, the rounds themselves are fitted with circles of Sienna marble.

If the glassmaker has been happy in his choice of colors, the designer has also done his part with no little skill, particularly in the way he has placed his figures. The sense of proportion is well developed; that is to say, the figures and objects connected with coinage that are introduced are neither too small for the spaces nor disproportionately large. The little girl's figure is graceful and well varied. The effect is not that of broad comedy, but an appeal to humor of a gentle sort. These are figures which raise not a laugh but a pleasant smile. The mosaics are to be in place by the first of February.

MISS RUTH HANNA'S DEBUT.

Reception and Dance In Cleveland Chamber of Commerce—1,500 Invitations Were Issued.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Jan. 1.—The coming out party of Miss Ruth Hanna, the youngest daughter of Senator Hanna, tonight was a social success. The reception and dance were held in the Chamber of Commerce, which was engaged for the occation because of the distance of the Hanna home from the centre of the city. The guests included all the leading society people of Cleveland, 1,500 invitations having been issued.

The hall in which the party took place was decorated in an artistic way with evergreens, holly, smilax, and red satin ribbons. The débutante received in a bower of palms at one side of the hall. She was attended by her father, her mother, her sister, Miss Mabel Hanna, and her grandmother, Mrs. D. P. Rhodes.

Miss Hanna wore a beautiful gown of white spangled gauze made over white satin, and with a fold of pink liberty satin draped over the left shoulder and down the back of the waist, skirt, and train. In her hair she wore pink velvet bows, a diamond crescent, and tortoiseshell combs. About her neck was a pearl necklace, given to her by her father. Mrs. Hanna wore a magnificent Court train of silver brocaded white satin, over a petticoat of pastel blue satin, with a flounce of Duchesse lace, ornamented with rhinestones.

The Senator and his family will go to Washington this week. They will make their home in the old Don Cameron residence, and expect to entertain much during the Winter.

CALIFORNIA'S WINE INDUSTRY.

New Deal Establishes a Community of Interests.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 1.—The California wine industry to-day enters upon a new phase in its history. Several powerful financiers of San Francisco have become heavily interested in the leading wine concerns in a manner to establish a community of interests as to the general direction of the trade, while leaving to each corporation or firm its independence of action in the details of its business.

The capitalists in this combination, which will control seven-eighths of the wines of the State, are I. W. Hellman, President of the Nevada National Bank; Antoine Borel of A. Borel & Co., and Daniel Meyer, the private bankers. They have become interested in the California Wine Association, the American-Swiss Agricultural Colony, Lachman & Jacobi, and C. Shilling & Co. all of which in turn have become shareholders in each of the other concerns. The aggregate capital of these firms will be increased to $8,000,000.

Tuxedo Society Colony Fights Fire.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., Jan. 1.—The society colony of Tuxedo was called out this afternoon to do fire duty. The handsome villa of Richard Mortimer began burning about noon. All rushed to the scene of the fire, but too late to save the cottage. It was totally destroyed. Much of the furniture was saved, but badly damaged by water. The fire atarted in the cellar, and is thought to have resulted from a defective flue. Walker Breeze Smith, William Kent, P. Lorillard, Jr., Henry G. Barbey, Fred Carey, and Jules Watable, assisted by Mrs. F. H. Benedict, Miss Potter, and Mrs. Mortimer, did brave work in aiding the firemen and removing furniture from the burning building.

MAY IRWIN'S NEW IDEA

"All the Comforts of Home" in Her Bachelor Apartments.

The Actress Will Build and Manage a High-Priced House—Valet's Work Will Be Continuous.

May Irwin will establish a model bachelor apartment house, which she will manage herself. According to Miss Irwin, most of the bachelor apartments here have failed to do all that was necessary for the comfort of their guests.

Miss Irwin's house will be situated at 155 West Forty-fourth Street, where her dwelling house is at present. She bought this house two years ago, and has since invested a large portion of her earnings in real estate in this city. Since she has been a landlord she has taken a great interest in the subject of bachelor apartments, and has always been of the opinion that she could manage a house for bachelors in which all the guests would be well satisfied with their surroundings. She also is confident that her scheme will be a financial success, as she thinks she will have no difficulty in getting high prices for suites in her establishment.

After the close of her present engagement, Miss Irwin intends to close up her present house, and buy another dwelling near Central Park. The bachelor apartment house which she intends to build will occupy not only the site of the house in which she lives, but the ground occupied by the house directly in the rear, 153 West Forty-fifth Street. Last week she purchased this house, paying for it $35,000 in cash. As soon as she moves, her house and the house she has bought will be torn down, and work will be commenced on the bachelor apartment house, which will cost $150,000. The actress has given her ideas on the subject of apartment houses to an architect, who is at present making plans for it. The house will be built in modern style, and will be fixed up expensively. It will contain suites of two, three, four, five, and six rooms.

Every effort will be made to make the guests feel as comfortable as possible. Their clothing will be mended and kept pressed, and all their belongings kept in good order. A woman will be in charge of the house, whose duty it will be to see that everything that is promised to the guests will be carried out.

"The trouble with all the bachelor apartments that have been started so far," said Miss Irwin, "is that they have not been kept up to the standards they have started with. The valets, who are supposed to shine the shoes and keep the clothes of the guests in order, generally forget to do it after the first two or three weeks, so that their attendance is little more than a farce. In my house I purpose having all the wants of the guests attended to all the time."

"I will have a few improvements in the way of special closets for hanging clothes in and other things like that. I thought at first that I might call the house after myself, but I have changed my mind about that. I will supervise it personally, however, and I want people to know that it's my house and that I'm running it. I think that I am pretty well fitted to run a concern like that. I know something about bachelors, and I know something about running a house, too."

JUSTICE McADAM'S RECEPTION.

Friends Gather Around a Big Punch Bowl and Celebrate New Year's Day.

Supreme Court Justice David McAdam observed the first twentieth century New Year's day, as has been his wont for the last twenty-five years of the nineteenth century, by keeping open house yesterday in the old-fashioned way, and with all the traditional hospitality that term implies.

The Justice's house, at 354 West Thirty-third Street, from noon till nearly midnight, was filled with a passing throng of friends and acquaintances of half a century's standing, who surrounded the Justice's famous old punch bowl and pledged his health through another century in many brimming bumpers.

A silent toast was also drunk to the memory of "Counselor Tom" Nolan, for a quarter of a century an unfailing participator in the Justice's holiday jollity.

Justice McAdam will, in May next, enter upon the fifty-third year of his connection with the law. He has been for twenty-seven years a member of the New York Judiciary. Among the Justice's guests were Judge Henry T. Goldfogle, Morris Littman, Ezekiel Fixman, Counsellor Edward Jacobs, William B. Tullis, Dr. John Martin, Dr. Henry Moeller, Michael Jacobs, Prof. William H. Pope, Richard Fox, and Daniel Mahoney.

We don't say that nothing else will cure a cold, but nothing will cure more or worse colds, or cure them quicker, than JAYNE'S EXPECTORANT.—Adv.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The New Year and the new century in New York society really begin to-day, for, with the holiday over, the many people who have been out of town will return, and the long round of entertainments of all sorts which will fill every waking hour of the next seven weeks will begin. The incidents and events of to-day will be the wedding of Dr. Alexander S. Clarke and Mrs. William F. Burden at the Astoria at noon; the wedding of Carroll Brown of Baltimore and Miss Margaret Daly at 725 Fifth Avenue; the second Wednesday cotillion at Delmonico's; a dance for young people at Mrs. William G. Park's, 47 Fifth Avenue, and the long anticipated dinner dance to be given at Sherry's by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr.

***

The second dance of the four which the Wednesday or Southern Cotillion give each recurring Winter season will take place this evening at Delmonico's. The cotillion, as usual, will be danced before supper, and it will have several Christmas and New Year's features in the matter of decoration and favors. The patronesses who will receive this evening are Mrs. Algernon Sidney Sullivan, Mrs. Samuel Spencer, Mrs. Oliver Livingston Jones, Mrs. John Burling Lawrence, Mrs. William L. Trenholm, and Mrs. J. W. Boothby.

***

Mrs. William Gray Park's dance of this evening will be for her young daughter, Miss Mary S. Park, who will not be introduced for two years, and will include most of the younger set. There will be no cotillion.

***

Mrs. Raymond S. White (Miss Sadie H. Crane) of 318 West Seventy-second Street will give a dinner to-morrow evening at her residence. Mrs. William G. Park will give a dinner of twelve covers at her residence on Monday evening, Jan. 7. Mrs. Edward Lyman Short has sent out cards for two receptions on Wednesdays, Jan. 9 and 16 respectively.

***

After the dances and other festivities that ushered in the new year and the new century at country clubs and houses, those who went out of town for the holidays rose late yesterday. The day was a quiet and uneventful one, but fortunately, was fair, and at Tuxedo and other further resorts there was skating, while at the nearer resorts golf, riding, and driving occupied the late morning and early afternoon hours. There were many luncheons through all the countryside, and numerous dinners last night. In town the day was more than quiet, and few familiar faces were seen at the fashionable restaurants at the luncheon hour. The clubs also were less filled than usual on New Year's day. At evening people began to drift back, and merry parties dined at Sherry's, Delmonico's, and the Waldorf, and attended the theatres.

***

One of the largest house parties over the New Year's holidays was at Shadowbrook, the Lenox country house of Mr. and Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes. It was made up of some forty young people. On New Year's Eve an informal dance was given, and at midnight all formed a large circle and sang "Auld Lang Syne."

***

The members of the Gould house party at Lakewood will return to town to-day. They have had an enjoyable New Year's, for the most part spent in riding and driving. A ball is to be given at the Country Club at Lakewood on Friday evening. The holiday at Tuxedo, after the festivities of New Year's Eve, was comparatively a quiet one.

***

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Stevens entertained a number of guests at a house party over New Year's, at their residence, Castle Point, Hoboken. To these guests they gave an informal dance on New Year's Eve. Among their guests were Mrs. Archibald Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. C. Lewis, Miss Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Francis B. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. L. Lewis, and Mrs. Townsend Ashmore, and Miss Ruth and Master Harry Ashmore.

Mrs. E. Morgan Grinnell gave at her new house, 36 Eeast Fiftieth Street, last evening a small and early cotillion for her daughter, Miss Catherine Grinnell, who is to be introduced next season. The guests were a small-and-early cotillion for her daughter and the cotillion, in which sixty young people took part, was led by Edward Lansing Satterlee, who danced with Miss Catherine Grinnell. The favors were the usual holiday trifles. A supper was served during the evening. Among the guests were a few débutantes and older men as well as the younger set of boys and girls who are home from school and college.

***

Mrs. John Murray Mitchell (Miss Lillian Talmage) of 9 East Sixty-seventh Street, gave at her residence last evening a dinner of twenty covers. The table decorations were holly and red carnations, and there were holly corsage bouquets and boutonnières for the guests.

Mrs. William von Beverhout Thompson entertained the Whist Club at her residence, 111 West Forty-third Street, on New Year's eve. At the midnight hour the tables were pushed aside, a bowl of punch was brought in, and both men and women were given small trumpets as favors. English visitors have begun to arrive in Paris on their way South. The cost of living in Paris, which, of course, was seriously augmented during the exposition, has now been lowered, and poultry, game, fruit, and vegetables, and butcher's meats, which were costly during the great show, can now be had at normal prices. The cost of living on the Riviera, particularly at Nice, where hotel rates are already going up in anticipation of Queen Victoria's visit, and the approaching carnival, promises to be high this Winter.

Queen Victoria spent a quiet Christmastide at Osborne, surrounded by her children and grandchildren. At Gmunden the Queen of Hanover, now very old, yet with wonderful health, had a Christmas of the old-fashioned sort. There was a tree on which hung a variety of gifts, and the Queen remained while they were distributed. The King and Queen of Italy, and Queen Margherita, who is with them, had a quiet Christmas. The Queen of Italy always spends large sums at the holiday season on gifts to her ladies in waiting, of whom there are nearly a hundred. The ex-Empress Eugenie thinks more of New Year's than of Christmas Day, in which she follows the French custom, and she always receives many handsome presents from the adherents of the Napoleonic dynasty. The valuable and interesting presents she herself bestows are the relics of bygone days.

HIRAM HITCHCOCK'S FUNERAL.

Will Take Place at Madison Square Presbyterian Church To-day.

The funeral services of Hiram Hitchcock of the Fifth Avenue Hotel will take place at 10 o'clock this morning at the Madison Square Presbyterian Church. The Rev. Dr. C. H. Parkhurst will officiate. It is said the floral tokens will equal anything in that line ever seen in New York. One immense wreath, sent by the force of dining room men under Thomas Gay attracted much attention. This was more on account of the sentiment expressed than in the beautiful piece of floral work. On a large card was inscribed in excellent script:

"Thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall thy moon withdraw itself, for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the day of thy mourning shall be ended."

The body of Mr. Hitchcock will be taken to Hanover, N. H., in a special car on the train leaving at noon.

NEW YEAR'S APPOINTMENTS

Commissioner of Taxes Patterson Named for a Second Term.

SCHOOL BOARD NOMINATIONS

Two New Men on the Municipal Art Commission—Eighteen City Marshals for Brooklyn.

Mayor Van Wyck called at the City Hall yesterday and announced a number of appointments and reappointments to political places. There was no crowd at the office to shake hands with Mayor Van Wyck and wish him a happy new year, and the Mayor did not seem anxious for any such courtesies to be paid to him, for he kept in his private office while he was in the City Hall. He left by the side-door exit.

Police Commissioner Abell hurried into the Mayor's office shortly before noon. He was greatly surprised that the Mayor was not there. Commissioner Abell hurried away without telling the object of his call.

The appointments made yesterday show that there is no rupture of relations between Tammany Hall and the Kings County Democracy, so far as Mayor Van Wyck is concerned. Nearly all the appointments made yesterday were Brooklyn organization men.

Commissioner of Taxes Thomas J. Patterson was reappointed for a full term of four years at $7,000 a year. His reappointment was urged by Hugh McLaughlin. Eighteen Brooklyn men were appointed City Marshals.

Miles M. O'Brien, Vernon M. Davis, George M. Muth, Charles C. Burlingham, Henry A. Rogers, and Joseph J. Kittel were named as members of the School Board for the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx.

Robert W. De Forest was appointed a member of the Municipal Art Commission, to succeed ex-Judge Henry E. Howland, and Frederick Dielman, an artist, was appointed to succeed John La Farge on the same commission. There is no salary attached to these Commissionerships.

The following City Marshals were appointed for the Borough of Brooklyn:

Thomas F. Gunn, reappointed; Andrew T. Fitzsimmons, reappointed; Michael J. Forbes, in place of Fred G. Cabble; John T. Hagan, in place of William B. Hobby; Alonzo F. Glover, in place of Frederick Mexger; Philip Goodman, reappointed; Michael A. Ward, in place of Thomas Fox; John Wagner, in place of William Bausher; Eugene McCarthy, reappointed; John W. Irwin, in place of Charles Scott; Charles N. Pracht, reappointed; John Reardon, in place of Alexander Rain; Robert W. Oliver, reappointed; David Goldberg, in place of Edward F. O'Brien; Michael J. Duffy, in place of Bernard Reilly; H. H. Lewis, reappointed; Albert H. Blenderman, reappointed, and Arthur Stuber, in place of Andrew J. Lyons.

Edward Haley was appointed a member of the Examining Board of Plumbers at $5 a day.

No political significance is attached to Mayor Van Wyck's appointment of members of the School Board for the Borough of Manhattan. John J. Barry, a well-known builder and a Tammany man, of the Borough of the Bronx, was appointed to succeed Thomas W. Timpson, resigned.

There was plenty of speculation yesterday over Mayor Van Wyck's failure to reappoint Police Commissioner Jacob Hess. It was said, however, that Mayor Van Wyck had decided to allow Commissioner Hess to remain in office until legislated out by the Legislature, as the Tammany men feel certain will happen.

TWO GIRLS ARRESTED.

Annie Hughes and Nellie Bowen Charged with Being Drunk.

The attention of Policeman Michael Cahill was attracted to a crowd of young men surrounding two girls in Cuckoo Row, Sixtieth Street and West End Avenue, last evening. The girls were singing and dancing. Cahill made his way through the crowd and told the girls to move on.

"We won't do it. See?" said one of the girls.

Both girls were taken to the West Sixty-eighth Street Station, where they were charged with being drunk and disorderly. They described themselves as Annie Hughes, sixteen years old, of 44 West End Avenue, and Nellie Bowen, fifteen years old, of 228 West Sixty-first Street. The Hughes girl was locked up and the other was taken to the Gerry society rooms.

When the Bowen girl was being lifted into the patrol wagon a number of her friends begged of the police to release her. The police will make an effort to find out where the prisoners secured the liquor.

WOMAN HELD HIM PRISONER.

Obstreperous Visitor with a Banjo Had Kicked Out a Panel of a Door.

Having imbibed too freely of intoxicants, Louis Strail, who said he was nineteen years old, a machinist, and lived at 325 West Forty-second Street, rapped at the door of Mrs. Catharine Mitchell, on the second floor of 328 West Forty-eighth Street. Mrs. Mitchell is a widow and was at home alone. When the door was opened Strail, who had a banjo, began strumming on it, and said in a husky voice: "Happy New Year."

Mrs. Mitchell was frightened, but managed to reply that she did not receive callers, and then closed the door.

Strail returned down stairs, but not before he had kicked out a panel of the door. Mrs. Mitchell followed the man down the steps and held him by the coat collar until the arrival of Policeman McMahon, who took him to the West Forty-seventh Street Station, where he was locked up.

Found Dead in Areaway.

James Telford, a clerk, was found dead yesterday morning in an areaway at 2,007 Lexington Avenue. While usually sober and steady, it is said that Telford invariably insisted on celebrating the death of the year by drinking freely. On Monday afternoon he was seen intoxicated in Third Avenue. He was not seen again until found dead yesterday morning. The ambulance surgeon who was called on the case said the man had been dead several hours.

Found Dead at Foot of Steps.

Ellen Hofan, a cook employed in the family of Dr. L. Duncan Bulkley, at 4 East Thirty-seventh Street, was found dead at 6 o'clock yesterday evening at the foot of a flight of stairs leading up to her room in the rear of the house.

According to Dr. Bulkley, she returned home yesterday, after being away to spend New Year's Day with her family, somewhat under the influence of liquor and went up stairs to her room. She was found at the foot of the stairs an hour later with her head twisted under her so that her neck was broken.

It is supposed that she started to go down stairs and fell to the bottom, breaking her neck.

Mrs. Howard Gould's House Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gould have been entertaining a party of friends at their country residence, Castlegould, Sands Point, L. I. They went down before Christmas, and will not return to town until next week. At the house party they gave over New Year's Day were Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Clark Robinson, Miss Elise Fulkoner,) Mr. and Mrs. George Kirkpatrick, Dr. Hermanus Basr, and Mrs. Baer, (Miss Mabel McKinley,) Miss Lillian Peck, Miss Louise Falconer, and Arthur Crosby.

Condition of Mr. Cummings.

Dr. John H. Girdner, who is in attendance on Congressman Amos J. Cummings, reported last night that Mr. Cummings is resting easily, and that if no complications set in he will recover rapidly. He has suffered a good deal of pain, as his ankle is broken in three places, and his nervous system has sustained a severe shock.

LIVED TO SEE NEW CENTURY.

Charles Contrell's Wish Is Fulfilled and He Expires While the Chimes Ring.

"I am content—it is the beginning—it is the end." Falling back on his pillow, Charles C. Contrell closed his eyes just as the clamor that greeted the new century began. His son bent over him.

"He is dead," he said softly, "but he has had his wish."

To see the dawn of the new year has been the one desire of Charles C. Contrell, the aged news dealer who has been for ten years a familiar figure to officials and politicians about the Court House, Brooklyn. Lately the old man has been in failing health, and it was with difficulty that he managed to get down to attend to his business. When his friends told him that a man in his condition ought to stay at home, he replied that he had not missed a single day since he opened the little stand near the Court House.

"I'm going to see the old year out," he said, "and the new one in. Then I'll take a rest—maybe a long one."

The old man, who died shortly after midnight, while the chimes rang yesterday, had in his eighty years of life a varied career. In 1846 he enlisted as a volunteer and served through the Mexican War under Gen. Scott. Four years later he joined the rush for the California gold fields. He located in San Francisco and there made a small fortune as a general storekeeper. The money he made in this business he invested in a garden farm just outside the city of San Francisco. The farm prospered for awhile, but afterwards failed, and he lost everything he had. Discouraged, he made his way back to Brooklyn, the city of his birth, and there started life anew.

Again he was successful, and during the fifties became a Commissioner of Excise in Williamsburg, serving for a number of years. After this he entered the office of the Tax Collecter of Brooklyn and from there he went to the Custom House. Here he remained through four administrations.

For some years, however, the old man's luck has been bad. He lost his savings and his health became poor. Determined not to be dependent upon the bounty of his son, he sought among his old political friends for aid. The best they could do for him was to obtain a permit for the erection of a newspaper stand. Here he has been every day for ten years. During the recent cold spell he warmed the little shanty by burning a small oil lamp. Last week he contracted a severe cold, but, in spite of the advice of his friends, stuck to his work until Saturday. When, too ill to longer work, he went to the Brooklyn Hospital. His son, Charles E. Contrell, survives him. The arrangements for the funeral have not yet been made.

GOUVERNEUR HOSPITAL OPENING.

Next Saturday is the date set for the formal opening of the new Gouverneur Hospital building. This was decided yesterday by Commissioner Keller and Miss Storrs, the Superintendent of Gouverneur.

SHIRTMAKERS' WAGES $3 A WEEK.

Two Hundred and Fifty Strike Against a Reduction in Their Pay.

Two hundred and fifty shirtmakers employed by fourteen contractors began the twentieth century yesterday by a strike against a 20 per cent. reduction in wages. The contractors do the work for Salante & Horowitz, 14 and 16 Walker Street; Philip & Son, 24 Walker Street, and Levine & Salatoff, 48 and 52 Lispenard Street.

Leader Salomon of the strikers said that some of the shirtmakers were earning only $3 a week, anyway, and their wives and children had to work. The highest earnings of any one did not exceed $6 a week. Fifty inside workers employed in the general factory of Salante & Horowitz joined the strikers yesterday afternoon.

FIRST ARRIVALS OF THE YEAR.

Freight Steamer Alsenborn Crossed the Bar Two Minutes After Midnight.

The first vessel to enter the harbor of New York in the twentieth century was the freight steamer Alsenborn, which arrived at the Bar at two minutes after midnight. Two hours after the arrival of the Alsenborn, which came from Baltimore, the fruit steamer Mount Vernon, from Jamaica, the first vessel from a foreign port, passed in. The cargo was consigned to the United Fruit Company. The Astoria, from Glasgow, which passed in the Hook at 11:20 P. M., was the first vessel to arrive in Quarantine as well as the first vessel to dock in North River this century. The Rio Grande of the Mallory Line is to be accorded a similar distinction in reference to the East River.

BOSS BAKERS ORGANIZE.

Issue a Statement Denying that Their Bakeries Are Not Kept Clean.

One hundred of the east side master bakers yesterday organized the Hebrew Boss Bakers' Association and decided to fight the strike ordered by the Hebrew Bakers' Union. The new organization held a meeting yesterday afternoon. President Perlun issued a statement declaring that the strike was being run by labor leaders who are not bakers, but whose business is leading strikes for their own personal profit., It denies that there is a strike or that there are any dirty bakeries. The factory inspectors, it declares, have pronounced the bakeries clean.

A committee of fifty strikers will call on President Murphy of the Health Board today and demand an inspection of the bakeries.

HER HUSBAND ANNOYS HER.

Mrs. F. A. Whittemore Has Him Arrested for Attempted Assault.

Frank A. Whittemore, a cigar manufacturer of 191 West Street, charged with attempted assault by his wife, Agnes, was committed to the Tombs in default of $500 bail by Magistrate Deuel in the Centre Street Court yesterday.

Mrs. Whittemore said that on Friday last, after breaking a vow made two months since to leave her alone, her husband's actions were such as to render the protection of the police necessary. Whittemore that night disappeared, she says, and did not again show up until Monday night, when he was greeted at his door by Detective Farrington of the Centre Street Court Squad, who served a warrant secured by Mrs. Whittemore.

Whittemore denied his wife's allegations and went to the Tombs to await further examination.

Woman Who Says She Is Mrs. Rose Frank Tries to Kill Herself.

Mrs. Rose Frank of 1,047 Lexington Avenue attempted suicide on the street last night because, as she said, her husband no longer loved her.

Policeman O'Neill found her lying on the sidewalk in front of 72 East Ninety-third Street with an empty bottle which had contained carbolic acid by her side. She was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital a prisoner. She may die. She said that she was the wife of Alfred Frank of Frank Brothers, dry goods merchants at Seventy-second Street and Third Avenue, but that she had been separated from him and did not care to live any longer.

Mme. Roullion, who keeps the boarding house at 1,047 Lexington Avenue, said that she had engaged a room with her last Friday, saying that she had just broken up housekeeping, as her husband was a traveling man and was away most of the time. Shortly after supper, Mme. Roullion said, a telegram came for Mrs. Frank which read, "Be ready at 7:30. Will call for you and go to the theatre." No name was signed to the message. A few minutes later a handsome and well-dressed woman called and asked for Mrs. Frank, and they went out together.

Mr. Frank could not be found at his residence, 358 East Seventy-ninth Street.

CROSS-COUNTRY RUNNING

Many Events Participated in by Local Club Athletes.

CONTESTS ON LONG ISLAND

Williamsbug Athletic Association Held the First Run of the New Year—Feeney Won Easily.

Yesterday's fine weather brought out the trail followers in force, and the various cross-country courses had their share of contestants. The first run of the new century was that of the Williamsburg Athletic Association, which left the clubhouse of the organization in Williamsburg just after midnight yesterday morning, over thirty athletes participating.

The pace was fast all the way, and some good time was made. Joseph E. Reydell, George Creighton, and F. J. Bermingham officiated as the pacemakers, and they kept the boys going at a merry clip. James Feeney won the event, with A. A. Titus second, H. J. Mackin third, Joseph E. Reydell fourth, George Creighton fifth, and John Hines sixth. Time—0:43:58½.

NEW CENTURY'S NOVEL RACE.

Machines and Men in a Point to Point Speed Conteat on City Streets.

A midnight race of a decidedly novel character, over a point to point course on city streets, was decided well inside the first hour of the new century, or, to be exact, at 12:39:21 3-5 o'clock yesterday morning, when a steam motor vehicle operated by J. M. Paige won The Evening World's unique Dawn of the Century open speed trial by beating about the most remarkable field of competitors that has ever engaged in a race. The contest, promoted by the newspaper named, held the interest of owners of motor vehicles and bicycle riders and foot runners for some days before the time set for the actual test. By the conditions announced, it was free to all who chose to engage, the only restriction put upon competitors being the classification of those competing into three divisions, with three prizes for each division.

The first section of the race was for any method of locomotion, which let in every variety of motor vehicle, the bicycle, and the horse, had any one chosen to try that animal against up-to-date machinery. Even ballooning or aerial travel was not barred, but it happened that there were no aeronauts seeking the chance to win prizes just at that time, and even in the opening of the twentieth century the airship has not been developed yet to the point that it could be regarded as a possibility. The second division was for professional foot runners and walkers, and the third for amateurs, using that old fashioned means of getting over ground known as "Shank's mare," at any gait that suited the individual competitor. By agreement, the start was made as early in the new year and century as the starter could manage, and that official, R. C. Mudge, managed to send away the first competitor in the first second of 1901, that being a motor vehicle of the victoria type, operated by Miss Eva Mudge, who wheeled her carriage before the up-town office of The Evening World, in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, near Seventh Avenue, at the starter's order, and at the signal to go set out with tightly inflated pneumatic tires whirring and buzzing, for the journey of about eight miles to the finishing point, in front of the Pulitzer Building, in Park Row.

The intending competitors had begun to assemble an hour before the time appointed for the start, and when the first stroke of 12 o'clock sounded the scene in One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street was thoroughly in keeping with the character of the impending race. The roadway was crowded from curb to curb for the length of nearly three blocks with motor vehicles, while bicycles filled in the interstices and athletes in running costume, with sweaters or overcoats covering them from the chill of the night air, thronged the sidewalks.

William K. Vanderbilt, in his celebrated motor carriage "The White Ghost," was among the spectators, and a rumor that he meant to compete in the race was circulated, but Mr. Vanderbilt simply watched the start, and then went home. The glare of head and side lights on the many motor vehicles and the colored lanterns on bicycles lent much to the oddity of the picturesque gathering. Every usual or unusual means of locomotion was represented among the road machines, and these, with the bicycles, about seventy-five professional foot runners, and forty-five amateur athletes, among them representatives of half a dozen prominent amateur athletic clubs, swelled the number of starters to more than 200.

To start all together was out of the question, so Mr. Mudge sent the motor vehicles and bicycles away, one at a time, in rapid succession, the time of each being taken, down to the runners, who were sent away in squads. Off at high speed, the motors and bicycles rolled through the lane made in the crowd and plunged into the darkness in rapid succession. The runners followed, each individual taking the course he preferred, until every street leading down town held a long-strung-out procession of racing machines and men, women, and boys. The crowds out late celebrating the new year's coming caught fleeting glimpses of the flying chauffeurs, wheelmen and wheelwomen, and runners, but had hardly time to get a fair view of one before he or she was out of sight in the dark and other racers had sprung into the range of vision from the north.

"From Harlem to the City Hall in fifteen minutes" has long been a popular phrase, but even under the favorable circumstances of deserted streets the idea was not realized in yesterday's early morning race. The pace was fast, for all that, and it took the first motor vehicle but a little more than half an hour to cover the eight-mile course. The winner with the quickest time of the competition was J. M. Paige of 36 West Seventy-sixth Street, in his steam motor, who completed the distance in 38:21 3-5. A very small Postal Telegraph Company messenger boy, William Cohen of 2,235 Seventh Avenue, fifteen years and weighing ninety pounds, covered himself with glory by finishing second on his bicycle in 39:05 2-5. Another bicycler, Robert M. Saveney of 64 Norman Street, Brooklyn, was third in 45:30 2-5. The only woman bicycler who finished was Miss Lottie Brandon, the six-day rider, who got seventh place. J. Gotlieb of 962 First Avenue, representing the Brevoort Athletic Club, won the first prize for amateur runners, in 51:00. H. Thornton of 337 West Thirty-seventh Street, was second in 53:24, and H. O. Tappan of 310 West Thirty-ninth Street third in 59:50 2-5. Ernie Hjertberg of 68 East One Hundred and Twelfth Street, in the division for professional runners, won in 40:00, less than two minutes slower than the Paige machine. Peter Hegelman of 254 West Thirty-second Street was second in 55:59, and S. Walters of 274 Evergreen Avenue, Brooklyn, was third in 56:29 1-5.

CHARGES AGAINST A POLICEMAN.

Thomas Gorman of Brooklyn Accused of Assaulting Samuel Woodburn.

On a charge of assaulting Samuel Woodburn, a saloonkeeper of 189 Sands Street, Brooklyn, Thomas Gorman, a policeman of the Fulton Street Police Station, was arraigned in the Adams Street Police Court before Magistrate Bristow, yesterday. Woodburn declares that Gorman came to his place and knocked him down, and he become unconscious. Bystanders, he said, declared that during that time the policeman stood over him with drawn revolver and club. Woodburn said he was laid up four days as a result of the attack.

Gorman said he rapped on the door to give Woodburn instructions about his blinds, when the saloonkeeper and several friends rushed out and beat him. Magistrate Bristow paroled Gorman until Monday.

THE KILLING OF DEGES.

Mrs. Ertel Says He Attacked Her and She Shot Him In Self-Defense.

Mrs. Mary Ertel, who shot and killed George Deges at 161 Washington Street, Brooklyn, on Monday morning, was arraigned in the Adams Street Police Court yesterday. There were present in the court Mrs. Helena Deges, widow of the murdered man, and the prisoner's husband and nine-year-old boy. Magistrate Bristow remanded Mrs. Ertel for examination on Jan. 10.

When she was being led away her husband stepped up and said:

"Hello, Mary; good-bye."

At the sight of her boy the woman became hysterical. Then, becoming calmer, she embraced him.

"Be a good boy," she said; "you have a good father to care for you."

She took a roll of bills from her pocket and gave $12 to the boy.

When her husband asked her about the murdered man she said:

"Don't talk about that. Everything will come right in time. All I want you to do is to send me my son's picture to the jail. Come yourself, if you want to."

The woman then kissed her child, as the father started away, but when the father put out his hand she did not grasp it.

To the police Mrs. Ertel told how she had killed Deges, and said that under the circumstances she was not sorry.

"He brought it on himself," she said. "I loved him in spite of the way he treated me. He attacked me and I resisted. He threatened and grappled with me. I reached in his waistcoat pocket and got his revolver. I shot him once in the face—merely a flesh wound. He came at me again and I was afraid. So I shot again and killed him. Then I left the revolver on the bed and walked out."

SLEEP THE GREATEST DOCTOR.

Opinion of a Woman Who Has Lived in Three Centuries.

Mrs. Sarah Allen of 523 Van Vorst Place, Union Hill, has the distinction of having seen a portion of life in three different centuries. Mrs. Allen was born in September, 1799, to the best of her knowledge, in the north of Ireland, and came to this country in 1858. Asked to what she ascribed her longevity, she said:

"Well, it's all Providence. I have eaten plain food, prepared in the simplest of styles. I am not a vegetarian. I believe in eating meat, good, wholesome beef, chicken, fish, and all such things. I eat meat now, as old as I am, three times a day. I have always believed in three meals a day, and in late years I frequently ask for a slice of bread at bedtime.

"All my life I have insisted on getting eight or nine hours sleep out of the twenty-four. Sleep is the greatest doctor this side of heaven. It cures all things and is life's salvation."

WILLIAM H. NAGLE NOT GUILTY.

Jury Fails to Convict Bostonian on Manslaughter Charge.

BOSTON, Jan. 1. — William H. Nagle, charged with manslaughter in causing the death of James J. Hayes June 30, 1900, has been found not guilty by a jury in the Superior Criminal Court.

The charge against Nagle was based on the allegation that Nagle in a quarrel struck Hayes a blow on the head which caused Hayes to fall. In falling his head struck the pavement, and a fracture of the skull resulted, from which the man died. The defense did not deny that a blow was struck, but it was claimed that it was given in self-defense. Nagle belongs to a wealthy family of Boston. Hayes was well known as a politician. He had been a State Senator.

PATIENTS FLEE TO STREET.

Fire in Madison Avenue Causes a General Stampede from Doctor's Office.

Fire, originating in a tailor's store in the basement of the seven-story apartment house known as the Sorrento, at 136 and 138 Madison Avenue, at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, did $5,000 damage and created a great deal of excitement among the tenants. Directly over the tailor's store of J. S. Jones, which is located on the Thirty-first Street side of the basement, are the handsome offices of Drs. George J. and John N. Helmer, osteopathists. Shortly before 1 o'clock Jones, who had been working in his place closed up and left for home. A few moments later Dr. George J. Helmer noticed smoke issuing from the crevices about a steam pipe that came up from the basement.

He notified the janitor, but a good deal of time was wasted in trying to extinguish the fire by shoving the nozzle of an extinguisher through the crevice about the pipe. The smoke rapidly increased in volume and density, and the inmates of the house became panicstricken. There was a general and hasty exit. There were about a dozen patients in the offices of the Drs. Helmer undergoing treatment. They were hurried from the building into the street with little preparation.

The fourteen families in the building hastily made their exit by the elevators and stairs. All of the tenants were handsomely dressed, and some stood about watching the proceedings with the great crowd that had collected, while others were sheltered in neighboring houses. The firemen, who were tardily summoned got the fire under control in twenty minutes, and had it extinguished within a half hour.

Jones says he had $8,000 worth of goods in his tailor's store. If this is true, the damage will reach $10,000, but the firemen place the loss at nearer $5,000.

PROFESSOR'S SECOND SIGHT.

Charles Keese Knew Mrs. Delacroix Was Robbed and Was Arrested.

If there ever was a woman who did not believe in signs and omens that woman was Mrs. Annie Delacroix, the wife of a barber, of 304 East Eighty-third street. She had an abiding aversion to fortune telling and fortune tellers on general principles, and she still held it even after meeting Professor Charles Keese, at the home of a mutual friend, Mrs. Keller, at 230 East Fifty-fourth street.

Everybody else about the house thought the professor about the most supernaturally gifted person that ever was. He was the seventh son of the seventh son, in the first place, and then he was born with a veil and just when the orb of Jupiter was bisecting Saturn. He was likewise born in the dark of the moon, and was gifted with the power of second sight. Mrs. Delacroix knew all this, but she still retained her pessimism. Professor Keese tried to convert her, even offering, in the interests of science, to tell her fortune for 25 cents, but she remained obdurate. "It's all nonsense," she told the professor, "and I want none of it in mine." Then she left Mrs. Keller's, still cherishing her aversion.

On Monday Mrs. Delacroix's apartments were entered during her absence and a diamond stick pin, a plush coat and several other valuable articles were stolen. On Monday night she paid another visit to her friend, Mrs. Keller. Professor Keese was there, as were a number of other mutual friends. As soon as Mrs. Delacroix had entered, and before she could tell of the robbery, the professor exclaimed, triumphantly: "Oh, I know what's the matter. You've been robbed." The other guests remained spellbound at this extraordinary gift of aftersight, but not Mrs. Delacroix.

"Yes," said this confirmed skeptic, "and you're the robber."

She followed up her remarks by summoning a policeman, and the professor was arrested.

As he was being locked up in the police station he said: "It's mighty tough that a man gifted with second sight should be charged with such a thing as robbery." The professor will be arraigned in the Yorkville court to-day.

COMPLIMENTS TO MR. LIPTON.

Newspaper Men Send Message and Sir Thomas Replies.

Compliments of the new century were extended to Sir Thomas Lipton by the New York Press Club yesterday. In reply Sir Thomas reciprocated the good-fellowship shown, but once more sent word that the famous old America's Cup is in danger of leaving its holders in the New World. The cablegram sent by the Press Club read:

We toast you to-day. Wish you every success that will not bring us sorrow.

The reply from London was as follows:

Thanks for your very kind greeting. Your sorrow will be smoothed by many trips to the old country. It [referring to the America's Cup] is bound to go this time; the best of friends must part.

DR. D. K. PEARSONS'S GIFTS.

CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—Dr. D. K. Pearsons completed his great benefactions for the nineteenth century, amounting to more than $2,500,000, by mailing a check to Carleton College, Northfield, Minn. The last donation makes a total of $550,000 which Dr. Pearsons has given to the Minnesota institution.

Dr. Pearsons also gave a check for $25,000 to Frederick W. Crosby, Treasurer of Lake Forest University. This gift was on a promise made last February, when Dr. Pearsons offered $25,000 on condition that $100,000 be raised for the university endowment fund. By Saturday night $92,000 had been obtained, and the remaining $8,000 was raised by collections in the Presbyterian churches of Chicago on Sunday. The endowment fund now amounts to $726,000, of which Dr. Pearsons has given $125,000.

LAKEWOOD GOLF WINNERS

Douglas Gets the First Big Trophy of the Century.

DOUBLE VICTORY FOR MOORE

Mallouf, Robertson, and Tilt Also in the Prize List—Women in a Mixed Foursome.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., Jan. 1.—Findlay S. Douglas, America's former amateur champion, won the chief trophy to-day in the New Year's open tournament of the Lakewood Golf Club. He had two good matches, meeting first in the semi-final round for the Lakewood Cup Jasper Lynch of the home club, whom he beat by 2 up and 1 to play. Meanwhile W. H. Davis, another Lakewood crack, had beaten William M. McCawley of the Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia, by the narrow margin of one hole after a grand struggle.

This brought Douglas and Davis together for the final round in the afternoon, and the match was practically a repetition of the final round in the Atlantic City tournament three weeks ago, when Douglas won. He beat Davis to-day by 3 up and 2 to play. Davis put up a grand game, and won the first two holes in succession. Douglas took the following two, and at the end of the first nine he led by 1, and on the sixteenth green the game ended. The cards were:

Findlay S. Douglas, Fairfield—
Out	6	4	5	6	6	6	5	4	—48
In	4	6	4	4	4	4	5		—31—79
W. H. Davis, Lakewood—
Out	5	3	6	7	7	5	7	6	3—49
In	5	5	5	3	4	5	6		—33—82

Douglas thus has the honor of being the first open-tournament victor of the twentieth century, a fact of considerable satisfaction in itself. He, however, was not the only triumphant golfer, for others, according to their several abilities, captured the minor trophies, but in most cases they were only obtained after well-contested games.

N. Mallouf, the young Syrian, who is a student at St. Paul's School, Garden city, won the second cup by defeating John Larkin, the Deal Beach crack, by one hole. Frank A. Moore of Apawamis and Larchmont, took the third cup, and he also had the additional honor of winning the handicap prize, being thus a double victor. R. H. Robertson, President of the Metropolitan Golf Association, won the fourth cup by the slim victory of one hole, over James C. Powers of Dyker Meadow, and the fifth cup went to Arthur Tilt of Fairfield.

The results of the match play rounds for the five cups were, the first round in each case being the semi-final:

Lakewood Cup.—W. H. Davis, Lakewood, beat William M. McCawley, Philadelphia, 1 up; Findlay S. Douglas, Fairfield, beat Jasper Lynch, Lakewood, 2 up and 1 to play.

Final Round.—Douglas beat Davis, 3 up and 2 to play.

Second Cup.—N. Mallouf, Garden City, beat R. F. Manning, Crescent Athletic, 4 up and 3 to play; John Larkin, Deal Beach, beat the Rev. D. L. Schwartz, Lakewood, 1 up. (19 holes.)

Final Round.—Mallouf beat Larkin, 1 up.

Third Cup.—Frank A. Moore, Apawamis, beat A. R. Clapp, Dyker Meadow, 4 up and 3 to play; M. K. Waters, Lakewood, beat George C. Low, Lakewood, 2 up and 1 to play.

Final Rough.—Moore beat Waters, 4 up and 3 to play.

Fourth Cup.—R. H. Robertson, St Andrew's, beat C. A. Sherman, Lakewood, 2 up; James C. Powers, Dyker Meadow, beat L. H. Rider, Nassau, 3 up and 1 to play.

Final Round.—Robertson beat Powers, 1 up.

Fifth Cup.—J. A. Deering, Deal Beach, beat Col. G. B. M. Harvey, Deal Beach, 1 up; A. Tilt, Fairfield, beat H. G. Cortes, Essex County, 3 up and 2 to play.

Final Round.—Tilt beat Deering, 2 up.

The open handicap brought out a big field, and thirty-six scores were turned in. Douglas won the low-score prize with 80 strokes. At net results, Moore and H. A. James of the home club tied at first, with 82, but in the play-off Moore won. The players handing in cards, with scores, were:

Fox Hill Golfers Won.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Jan. 1.—The Fox Hill Golf Club of Staten Island to-day defeated the Atlantic City Country Club in a match golf game of 36 holes by the narrow margin of two up. In the first 18 the Atlantic City club led by one, but in the second half, mainly the result of the good playing of E. S. Knapp, the visitors managed to win out on the last two holes. Singer Captained the Fox Hills and Work the Atlantic City Country Club. The links were in fine condition and the weather moderate without any wind. A large crowd witnessed the contest.

ATHLETICS AT COLUMBIA.

New Ballot System to Be Tried in Election of Football Manager.

Athletic discussion at Columbia University now relates to the choice of a football manager for the coming season. On Friday the undergraduate nominations will be made public preparatory to the final election on Jan. 11. The new system of voting with regular ballots, boxes, and Inspectors will be tried for the first time, and instead of formal registration the student lists of the university will be employed to identify the voter. On account of the widespread dissatisfaction with the last football report, the manager will be opposed by several independent nominees. The following from the college paper seems to express the undergraduate feeling:

"It has become, of late, a custom, the wisdom of which we question, to treat football players and other athletes to the fat of the land, with other objects than that of increasing their weight. The Columbia report is not inconsistent. It shows that the neighborhood of $500 has been expended in dinners, theatre tickets, and outside football games. It also shows that to a coach who received $5,000 for three months' services, additional expenses incurred in the ordinary duties of coaching were allowed. These are the facts. Were things not as they are, there might be dissatisfaction without complaint, but the present financial situation in athletics calls for more than this. It calls for protest. Football is to be tolerated, supported, and encouraged under two circumstances, and two alone—when it is a game for sport and development, and when it is a game for the glory of one's college. We hope and believe that no other motives will actuate us here at Columbia.

"There is only one way to be sure of the fact, and that is to cut out entirely from any expense budget in the future, the items which have been mentioned above, and which in anything else but football would rob a man of his self-respect. Moreover, at Columbia more than anywhere else, and in this year more than in any other, the custom which has been adopted by our football management, and which it was to a degree powerless to refuse to sanction, is a bad one. When the season started we were in debt, or, what amounted to the same thing in the end, the rent of Manhattan Field had been paid with borrowed money. Under the circumstances, economy would have been a credit to a manager and parsimony a virtue. We hope that a sense of the fitness of things will gradually dawn upon us here at Columbia, and that we will hesitate before we spend money which unspent could be not unwisely devoted to the paying of our debts."

It is thought that if the present manager is re-elected, the expression of student opinion, now so pronounced, will prevent extravagant expenses for some time to come.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR EGLOFF.

Century Road Club Member Wins First Cycle Race of the Year.

Special to The New York Times.

VALLEY STREAM, L. I., Jan. 1.—Gus Egloff of the Century Road Club of America rode into this place this morning winner of the annual "midnight ride" that each recurring season ushers in the cyclist's season on Long Island.

The start was made from the Bedford Rest, Brooklyn, one minute past midnight, and twenty-eight cyclists, including one woman, essayed the sixteen-mile race to this place.

Egloff got away in front of the riders and pushing right through took the lead as the Merrick pike was reached after a tussle with Charles Mock, William McKenzie, Tom Hall, the veteran of the Kings County Wheelmen; Ralph Palmer, and other noted riders. Egloff finished first one full minute behind last year's record, with Hall second, and W. Perry third. Time, 0:44:00.

Drag Hunt at Flushing.

Special to The New York Times.

FLUSHING, L. I., Jan. 1.—The drag hunt of the Flushing Riding Club was the feature of one of the biggest days in sports ever planned and successfully carried out in Flushing. The meet was at Sixteenth Street and Broadway, and twenty-six riders participated in the event. A pack of eight hounds were slipped at the throw-off. The riders went over the McCreery Farm, then across the Frame, Bowden, and Graul farmlands; then the Cain Farm, where the hounds were turned and headed for Shore Acres, the country seat of G. Howland Leavitt of New York, crossing in turn the farmlands of Cooper, Wright, Gulteau, Gould, and Leavitt.

The hunters were entertained at Shore Acres at hunt breakfast. Among those who participated in the event were H. G. Murray, master of the hounds; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gould, Mr. and Mrs. G. Howland Leavitt, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Meiere, Miss Sarah Leavitt, Miss Margaret Leavitt, Miss Willetts, Miss Taylor, Miss Emily Bell, Miss Inez Bunkler, Miss Levere, Miss Redman, Miss Lowden, C. L. Murray, and Mr. Cameron.

N. Y. A. C.'s New Year's Celebration.

New Year's Day was observed in a novel manner at the New York Athletic Club, where there was a grand exhibit of the chef's most artistic efforts. In the main dining room was a table extending the length of the room, and on this was displayed in miniature, confectionery, reproductions of historical, athletic, and military events.

One of these showed Fifth Avenue on Dewey Day, with the Memorial Arch in the foreground, while north and south of it and passing through it were some 700 figures.

Another design was a reproduction of the club's quarters at Travers Island, with different games in progress.

Still another pictured a battle between the Chinese and the allied forces, while a fourth depicted a hunting scene.

A smaller display showed three prominent members of the club at the banquet table, and the features of the diners were readily recognized.

Work was begun on the reproductions on Sept. 1, 1900.

Doings of College Athletes.

The Yale basket ball team, now on its Western tour, met with a serious defeat at Fon du Lac, Wis., when the local team beat the collegians 22 goals to 18.

The Springfield Young Men's Christian Association and Dartmouth College had one of the hottest basket ball games of the season last week in Springfield, Ohio. The local team won by one goal, scoring 20 to 19.

The Toronto University hockey team has declined Gale's challenge to play a match in New York this week, owing to the fact that the Canadians feel their team is not yet strong enough to engage in a tournament competition.

Yale, Pennsylvania, Princeton, and Columbia are expected to be represented in the one-mile intercollegiate relay race at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club's athletic carnival, to be held in Madison Square Garden, Feb. 4.

The hockey team of the University of Pennsylvania will play the Crescents, the champions of America, in the Clermont Skating Rink, Brooklyn, Friday night. Next Monday Gale, the intercollegiate hockey champion holder, will meet the Quaker City team in Philadelphia.

The football conference held at Cornell last week terminated without naming a definite coach for the team. This omission has caused considerable disappointment among the undergraduates, who had hoped that Glen S. Warner would have been named as permanent coach, with the same authority he had three years ago. So far as is known the selection of a coach is still in a chaotic state. The fact that Cornell will adhere more strictly to the graduate system is simply following out the intentions previously expressed.

WATSON IN GREAT DEMAND

Boston Yacht Owner Wants Assistant to Capt. Haff.

PLANS FOR THE BOSTON BOAT

New York Yacht Club Expected to Invite Mr. Lawson on the Annual Cruise in July.

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—Although a question of a sailing master for the Lawson boat was practically settled by Mr. Lawson's statement on Saturday night, an earnest endeavor is being made to obtain the services of Capt. Nate Watson, who was prominently mentioned for the chief position when the yacht was first projected. At the request of Mr. Lawson Capt. Watson came up from Beverly to-day and had several conferences with the Boston financier, Designer Crowninshield, and one or two members of the so-called Advisory Board. Mr. Crowninshield told Capt. Watson that both he and Mr. Lawson were very desirous of having his (Watson's) services at least in an advisory way on the new boat. It was pointed out that with the services of two such skilled skippers the yacht would be sure of being placed in a good position, and with an able crew would stand a much better chance than with only one such individual on board.

Capt. Watson in reply expressed an earnest desire to assist in the management of the new yacht, but he pointed out that he was under engagement to Francis Skinner to sail his big schooner, the Constellation, and until he could obtain his consent he could accept no such offer.

Later in the day Capt. Watson had a conference with Mr. Lawson, and to-night left for Beverly. It is believed that Mr. Skinner will consent to release Capt. Watson and that the Plymouth skipper will be on the yacht.

Mr. Crowninshield stated to-day that he would make public his design of the new yacht within a week.

The preliminary work to laying down the yacht is progressing satisfactorily and with no serious delays, and it is expected that the yacht will be on the water by the first or middle of May.

The plans for the Lawson boat include two or three weeks' tuning up in Massachusetts Bay, during which time the rigging will be thoroughly set up and tested and the sails adjusted or recut. The yacht will then be taken round to Newport, and raced with the new Herreshoff boat and the Columbia. It is expected that the yacht will not be in Boston waters much over two or three weeks.

Mr. Lawson is anticipating an invitation from the New York Yacht Club to participate in the annual cruise, which will probably start from Glen Cove, L. I., July 20. Newport, however, will be the racing centre of the Summer until the trial races begin off Sandy Hook, probably about Aug. 10. The America's Cup races this year will begin Aug. 20, and as usual will be the best three in five.

Bronze for Cup Defender.

BRISTOL, R. I., Jan. 1.—A large consignment of Tobin bronze plates for the hull of the new cup defender now building at the Herreshoffs yard hers arrived by freight early to-day from Ansonia, Conn. Each plate was crated separately and almost entirely hidden from view. In all, there were twenty-six crates, with a total weight of about seven tons. The plates are from 12 to 15 feet long and 3½ feet wide. Some are 3-16 and others are but 3-20 inch in thickness. This consignment brings the total number of crates now at the yard up to 74. Nothing will be done toward setting up the framework of the boat until the bulb angle irons arrive, and they are being looked for anxiously.

AMERICAN SKATER WON.

Phil Kearny Defeats Sinniurd in Clermont Avenue Rink.

Peter Sinniurd of Christiania, Norway, was again beaten by a New York skater yesterday in a one-mile skating race, called the New Century Handicap, in Clermont Avenue Rink, Brooklyn.

Previous to the race, Harry P. McDonald of the New York Athletic Club skated a half mile in 1:30 4-5. In the main event the men got away well at the crack of the gun, and then made a killing race of it all the way. Lap after lap Kearny skated right at the heels of the flying Norwegian until they passed the field and got the lead in the eleventh lap. Then the young American schoolboy, amid cheers from the spectators, started to gain. Gradually he crept away to the lead after a desperate finish by a few feet, with the Norwegian second, and Swan third. There was a protest, and as it was shown that the Norwegian had crowded the skaters in making the turns, he was placed third. The summary:

New Century Handicap.—One mile. Won by Philip J. Kearny, Pawnee Athletic Club, Brooklyn, (scratch;) W. W. Swan, New York Athletic Club, (90 yards,) second; Peter Sinniurd, Christiania, Norway, (scratch,) placed third for fouling second man. Time—3:08 4-5.

Half-Mile Exhibition Against Record.—Harry P. McDonald, New York Athletic Club. Time—1:30 4-5.

The visitors played a perfect pass and block game, and outgeneraled the home five at critical points. The score at the end of the first half was 14 to 14.

Manager Kennedy offered a bonus of $25 to any team defeating the Fifteenth on its own floor. The Twenty-third Street five are the first to claim it. The offer is still open. Line-up:

Dr. Miller Wins at Billiards.

Dr. A. B. Miller beat Dr. L. L. Mial last night in the billiard tournament at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club for second and third championship honors. The game was the usual fourteen-inch balk-line match, and Dr. Miller scored the limit of 300 points in 61 innings to 25¼ by Dr. Mial in 60 innings. The former started off at a rapid pace, making the longest run of the evening—44 points—in the first inning, and continued to score for eleven successive innings. Dr. Mial made one excellent run of 42. He took Albro Atkin's place, who was scheduled to meet Dr. Miller, but the latter will play Atkin this evening. The scores:

Boston's Bicycle Race.

BOSTON, Jan. 1.—The second day's riding in the six-day bicycle race at the Park Square Garden began at 1:15 P. M. At the start Walthour and Stinson were in the lead, with Gougoltz and Downey close behind. Muller lost his pedal in the second lap. Fredericks jumped ahead and took the lead on the fifth lap. Thirteen of the originally starters came to the start to-day. All of them looked unusually fresh after their exertions of yesterday. Several of the riders are outspoken in criticism of the track.

The score at the end of the nineteenth hour was as follows, (Downey being in the lead:) Downey, 382.4; McEachern, 382.4; Stinson, 382.4; McLean, 382.4; Kaesar, 382.4; Fischer, 382.4; Walthour, 382.4; Babcock, 381.7; Muller, 372.2; Gougoltz, 300.1, (not riding;) Fredericks, 289.2, (not riding;) Ryser, 223.3, (not riding,) and Aucoutrier, 195.3, (not riding.)

WHITNEY'S RACING PLANS

Lord Beresford's Death Leaves John Huggins in His Employ.

REIFFS WILL RIDE FOR HIM

Owner of Meddler Connected with Other Derby Favorites Whose Engagements May Be Void.

The death of Lord William Beresford, one of the foremost patrons of the turf in England, while a great loss to the English racing interest, in all probability will be the means of restoring the services of John Huggins to an American turfman. Huggins, one of the most successful trainers in America, went abroad to manage and train the horses of Pierre Lorillard, when that famous racing man transferred his racing establishment to England in 1896, and then duplicated his successes in America by winning many races with the rather inferior horses that then made up the Lorillard string.

When Mr. Lorillard formed a partnership with Lord William Beresford, Huggins continued to train for the firm, and his horses continued to win in the same style that horses trained by Huggins have won everywhere that he has raced. Mr. Lorillard later sold out his interest to Lord Beresford, and his contract with Huggins having expired, the American trainer was retained by the Beresford stable.

No higher compliment to the ability of Huggins could have been paid, for Lord William Beresford, considered the best judge of horses and horsemen in England, was regarded as very conservative even in England, and his choice of the American trainer over the many famous English trainers who would have jumped at the chance to form such a connection awakened English racing men generally to Huggins's merit, and he has been looked on as one of the best in the country from that time on.

Huggins has had many opportunities to secure other employment with wealthy owners, but he preferred to continue with the Beresford establishment, and, though not as frequently mentioned in newspaper reports as some other American trainers, at present has a reputation second to no professional horseman in Great Britain. It was with horses trained by Huggins that Tod Sloan won his early success in England, and Sloan's present international fame is due more to Huggins than to any other man connected with racing.

The famous trainer, who is a Texan, and trained horses owned in part or altogether by himself for nearly thirty years before he went abroad, at the request of Lord Beresford, had agreed to train a number of American horses sent to England by William C. Whitney, and when Lord Beresford died, was under engagement to Mr. Whitney as well as to the late nobleman, the agreement made being that Huggens was to train and Lord Beresford to manage the joint stable.

Huggins, at the time this contract was made, was the most eagerly sought race horse trainer in England, and though he refused all outside offers of horses to train, was responsible for the safe management and success of one of the largest stables in England, where public stables with from sixty to one hundred horses under the care of one trainer are not uncommon.

The death of Lord Beresford leaves Huggins with but one employer, Mr. Whitney, and with such a man to handle, prepare, and place his horses, it is not improbable that Mr. Whitney will increase his racing establishment in England. The impression somehow, had got out that Mr. Whitney and Lord Beresford were in a partnership, but this Mr. Whitney has stated was not a fact. He had simply sent a stable to England, and by Lord Beresford's consent had arranged for Huggins to train his horses, Lord Beresford agreeing to manage and place them.

No partnership entries were made on the entries for the establishment under Huggins's care having been made in the name of the individual owners.

DERBY FAVORITES IN DANGER.

Under English racing rules, therefore, all Lord Beresford's entries are void because of his death, the only exceptions being in a few produce stakes and special events, the conditions of which permit the nominations to stand if the estate assumes liability.

Among the horses engaged in stakes this year and owned in Lord Beresford's stable are Volodyovski and Star Shoat, both of which were nominated for the Epsom Derby. The stakes in question were raced by Lord Beresford last year, and raced in his name. Though it is said that through the leasing arrangement, they are still eligible for that race, there is some doubt about it. If they were entered in the Derby in the name of Lord Beresford the rules of racing plainly provide that the engagements are void.

Both colts showed excellent form last season, and both were regarded as very close to first class. Just prior to the death of Lord Beresford, Volodiyouski was the Derby favorite at 9 to 2, while Star Shoot was equal second choice with Toddington, at 9 to 1, and had been backed at that price.

The next Derby is regarded as a very open race, but, aside from the three horses named, the only others that have been mentioned as being backed are Darichs and Revenue at 20 to 1 each. As an instance of how well the Beresford two were thought of, a bet of £250 to £200 was made recently on Volodyouski, Star Shoot, Lord Bobs, and Orchid against the field.

Mr. Whitney's connection with this pair of Derby favorites is but slight, but yet is sufficient to recall the fact that he is the present owner of Meddler, a Derby favorite and by many astute turfmen regarded as a better horse at three years old than Isinglass, who subsequently won the great event, Meddler's engagement having been rendered void through the death in New Orleans of his owner, Abingdon Baird, (Squire Abingdon,) known during his life as the richest commoner in England.

Mr. Whitney, asked concerning the present state of Lord Beresford's turf affairs, has stated that he has had no recent advice from Huggins, and therefore knew nothing of the engagements of the Beresford horses that will hold. As to his plans for a jockey to ride the horses he will race in England, Mr. Whitney said that under his arrangement with Lord Beresford the Reiff brothers were to ride for him.

That sets at rest the report that he expected to send Jockey Nash Turner or any other American jockey to England. The Reiffs, though engaged by Lord Beresford, are under a contract that will permit Trainer Huggins to hold them, and therefore it is likely that the famous brothers will wear Mr. Whitney's colors. The horses Mr. Whitney has under Huggins's care were sent to England last Fall, and are: Jean Beraud, five years; Kilmarnock, four years, and Prince Charles, Elizabeth M., Luke Ward, and Holstein, three years old each.

Racing on Winter Tracks.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 1.—The Morris Stable landed another stake to-day with Choice, who lasted just long enough to show a half length in front of Fleetwing in the New Year's handicap, valued at $1,000. There was a drizzling rain, and the track was very heavy. Uhlers and Belle of Orleans were the only winning favorites, though Violet Parsons was well played, her price receding from 6 to 13 to 5. Benn, the long shot who won the last race, had some backing straight and place. Summaries:

Mile—Uhlers, 103 pounds, (McGinn,) 1; Jack Martin, 103, 2; Nonsuch, 102, 3. Time—1:35.

Handicap, three furlongs—W. J. Deboe, 96, (Weber,) 1; Senator Beveridge, 95, 2; Ida Ledford, 97, 3. Time—1:20. SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 1.—Advance Guard, the strongly played second choice, won the New Year Handicap at Oakland to-day. His victory was due in great measure to the excellent ride put up by O'Connor. Vesuvian and Andrissa of the Jennings stable were favorites, finishing second and third. Morigage was in front for a time, but tired, and Advance Guard took the lead and won by two lengths from Andrissa. The first two-year-old race of the new year went to Golden Cottage, a colt by Golden Garter, out of Pink Cottage, from the stable of G. B. Morris. Travathan stumbled and fell during the last furlong of the closing race. He broke his neck and died in a few minutes. Jockey Weaver was uninjured. Summary: One mile—Aster, 103 pounds, (Dominick,) 1; Alaria, 104, 2; Monrovia, 107, 3. Time—1:41. Five and one-half furlongs—The Pride, (Turner,) 1; St. Cuthbert, 117, 2; Ralston, 117, 3. Time—1:07. LAST BIRD MADE A TIE

Thompson's Miss in Final Round Made Him Divide with Piercy.

BUSY DAY FOR TRAP SHOOTERS

Handicap at Inter-State Park Made a Lively and Close Contest—Gunners' Work Elsewhere.

The holiday live-bird shooting contests at Inter-State Park yesterday drew the largest attendance of the present season, the gunners and spectators completely filling the available accommodations. The tournament was under the management of the New Utrecht Rod and Gun Club, and, while a dozen or more clubs were represented by noted trap shooters, the New Utrechts were the most numerous. The weather favored the sport, and, in addition, the pigeons released were uncommonly strong and fast. Four preliminary events led up to the main event of the day, a handicap sweepstakes at twenty birds, which J. W. Thompson and G. H. Piercy divided. Piercy had missed his first bird, and, though he killed straight after that, Thompson, who had an unbroken score of dead birds to his credit, looked a sure winner when he faced the traps for his twentieth and last bird. On the form he had displayed it looked to be a certainty that Thompson would win, and among the betting men it was any odds on the gun, until the trap was sprung.

Up rose a swift driver, flying close to the ground and directly away from the gunner. Thompson pulled the trigger with just a fraction of a second too much haste. A few scattering feathers showed that the bird was hit, but he kept up his flight. The second barrel was sent after him, but that was a clean miss, and the bird managed to flap out of bounds, leaving Thompson and Piercy in a tie, with nineteen kills each. Annie Oakley, the noted woman trap and rifle shot, was one of the contestants in this event, but her work was far below her average, and she withdrew after the tenth round. Miss Oakley also shot in two of the preliminary contests, at five birds each, but in one she killed only two birds and in the other four. The most interesting of the smaller events was a double-bird event, at three pairs, which Charles Daly won by killing two pairs and a single bird of the third pair, while C. M. Brooks, E. C. Griffith, and J. M. Thompson were close up.

The eighteen best scores in the chief event were as follows:

Handicap, 20 Birds, $10 Entrance.—J. W. Thompson, (29,) 20; G. H. Piercy, (29,) 19; Dr. Webber, (30,) 18; Charles Demorest, (30,) 18; W. H. Sands, (28,) 17; Dr. Miller, (29,) 17; F. H. Keller, (29,) 17; C. M. Chapman, (28,) 17; C. A. Lockwood, (28,) 16; W. Peckard, (28,) 15; E. C. Griffith, (30,) 15; B. F. Wood, (28,) 15; R. H. Tracey, (29,) 14—C. A. Brooks, (30,) 13; P. May, (28,) 11; J. A. Bennett, (29,) 8; D. C. Bennett, (28,) 5; J. D. Frost, (27,) 3; Annie Oakley, (27,) 10; P. A. E. Hendrickson, (28,) 10.

McCONVILLE WON SHOOT-OFF.

After Tie with Chapman, He Took Crescent Club Trophy.

One of the biggest trap-shooting tournaments ever held in the vicinity of New York was conducted yesterday by the trap shooters of the Crescent Athletic Club on the grounds of the organization at Owl's Head, Bay Ridge, L. I. Over three thousand targets were thrown during the day from the Magau trap and expert traps. The race of the day was in the contest for the New Year's Day Cup, presented by the club. W. J. McConville and C. H. Chapman tied with forty-four kills out of the big field of eighteen shooters, and in the shoot-off, McConville won by one bird. The contest for the Banks Trophy, offered by Edward Banks, at thirty birds, fifteen Magau trap and fifteen expert traps, was won by W. K. Fowler, with a clean score. The summaries:

Marshall Trophy Shooting Contest, Fifteen Birds per Man, Expert Rules and Traps, Handicap.—F. B. Stephenson, (2,) 15; McConville, (7,) 13; Brigham, (1,) 12; Jere Lott, (2,) 12; E. Bishop, (scratch,) 12; Fanning, (scratch,) 12; Boucher, (3,) 12; Dr. O'Brien, (3,) 11; Marshall, (2,) 11; R. Townsend, (2,) 11; Notman, (2,) 10; G. Stephenson, Sr., (6,) 10; Kenyon, Jr., (2,) 9; Remsen, (scratch,) 9; Garrett W. Cropsey, (1,) 9; Hopkins, (4,) 9; Chapman, (6,) 8; G. Stephenson, Jr., (2,) 7.

Southern Pacific Company

2-5 Years 4½% Gold Bonds.

Due December 1, 1905.

Redeemable at the option of the Company on and after December 1st, 1902, at par and accrued interest.)

At the price of 98% and Accrued Interest, payable as follows:
$50.00 per Bond on January 7, 1901, and
$937.50 per Bond on February 1, 1901.
$987.50 per Bond of $1,000.

The Bonds are Coupon Bonds in denomination of $1,000 each, with the privilege of registration as to principal. They are dated December 1, 1900, from which date they begin to bear interest at the rate of 4½% p. a., payable half-yearly on June 1st and December 1st. Both the principal and interest of the Bonds are payable in the City of New York in United States Gold Coin of the present standard of weight and fineness and without deduction for any tax or taxes which the Southern Pacific Company may be required to pay or to retain therefrom under any present or future law of the United States or of any State or County or Municipality therein.

Mr. Charles H. Tweed, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Southern Pacific Co., states the following in a letter to us, dated Dec. 27th, 1900:

"The $10,000,000 Southern Pacific Company 4½% Gold Bonds are a direct obligation of the Southern Pacific Company, and are secured by a Mortgage or Deed of Trust dated December 1, 1900, to the Central Trust Company of New York, Trustee. They form part of a present issue of $15,000,000 of such bonds, secured by deposit with the Trustee of $7,174,000, face value of various bonds, and $59,487,000, face value of various stocks, of companies controlled by the Southern Pacific Company, besides stock of Wells, Fargo & Co. to the amount of $1,530,000 face value.

The Mortgage contains a statement of the securities deposited with the Trustee, as well as the terms and conditions under which further issues of Bonds may be made against deposit with the Trustee of additional securities or the mortgaging of additional properties as security thereunder, but the aggregate amount of Bonds at any one time outstanding thereunder is not to exceed $30,000,000.

The Company reserves the right, upon three months' previous notice, to redeem all or any part of the Bonds at par and accrued interest on, or at any interest date after, December 1, 1902, under certain terms and conditions, as stated in the Mortgage, but if a portion only of the outstanding Bonds are at any time to be so redeemed, their distinguishing numbers are to be determined by lot.

The proceeds of the $15,000,000 Bonds will reimburse the Company for a portion of its capital expenditures during the last five years, including the acquisition of the control through stock ownership of upwards of 580 miles of railway, and of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and will furnish funds for the improvement and betterment of its properties.

BROWN BROTHERS & CO.,

ISSUE INTERNATIONAL CHEQUES, COMMERCIAL and TRAVELERS' CREDITS AVAILABLE IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

TO THE FIRST MORTGAGE BONDHOLDERS OF THE

Fort Worth and Denver City Railway Company.

The interest on the first mortgage bonds of the Fort Worth and Denver City Railway Company, which, by agreement of October 12th, 1895, between a Committee of the Bondholders and the Union Pacific, Denver and Gulf Railway Company and its Receiver, was reduced for a time to four per cent., will, after December 1, 1900, accrue and be payable at the original rate of six per cent.

The control of the Company through stock ownership is in the Colorado and Southern Railway Company, and it appears from published reports that the present earnings of the property are not sufficient to pay the full interest on the bonds. Under these circumstances it becomes essential that the bondholders unite in securing all the consideration to which they are entitled, and, if need be, enforcing their rights under the mortgages and otherwise protecting their interests.

The undersigned have been requested by the principal bondholders to act as a bondholders' committee, and in order to confer upon the committee necessary authority, the bondholders are respectfully urged to deposit their bonds at once with the United States Trust Company under a bondholders' agreement lodged with it.

Engraved certificates of deposit will be issued by the Trust Company, and application will be made to the New York Stock Exchange to list the same.

Copies of the agreement can be obtained either from the Trust Company or from the Committee.

ACCIDENT COMPANIES COMBINE.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 1.—A deal in which about $50,000,000 of accident insurance capital is involved and which is considered one of the largest consolidations ever effected in this country was consummated here today. By its terms the Railway Officials and Employes' Accident Association of this city, the Metropolitan Accident Insurance Company of Chicago, the Northwestern Benevolent Society, and the Continental Insurance Company are consolidated under the terms of the Continental Casualty Company, which was incorporated under the insurance laws of Indiana some time ago. Headquarters of the new company will be opened in Chicago.

The Continental Casualty Company has a capital stock of $300,000, and in addition to this it has $361,000 in other assets. The Railway Officials and Employes' Accident Association has confined its business to insuring railway employes against accident, but the new company will go into the general field of health and accident insurance. No change, however, will be made in the policies already issued by the company of this city or by any of the other companies afected by the combination.

SEATTLE, Washington, Jan. 1.—During the past twenty-four hours a committee from the Chamber of Commerce of Seattle, by appealing to the business men of the city has raised $32,400 of a fund for Moran Brothers of this city, so that their bid for a battleship to be built at their yards here may be scaled down to the limit of cost set down by Congress for the appropriations. The matter is being taken up by the business men of Seattle, and the necessary $100,000 is expected to be raised before the end of the week.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Apropos of the changed condition of things in the railroad world, of the growth of the "community of interest" idea, Wall Street is likely in the near future to see other evidences presented of this new order of things. In the coal group, for example, it can be stated on official authority that the purchase of the Pennsylvania Coal Company and of the North American Company by the Morgan interests—the latter concern to be used as the joint selling agent for all the coal companies hitherto acting independently of one another—is but a step toward a far greater plan than has yet been disclosed.

While it is not proposed to put all the companies under the same physical control—to create an open combination and monopoly, in other words—the project under way is so far reaching and so gigantic that it will remove from a field where heretofore have been warring elements all conflicting and opposing influences. Rate cutting and price cutting will shortly be things of the past. Coal will not be mined and sold in some instances at a loss. There will, however, be a policy of "live and let live," as a result of which, coal trade interests declare, the consumer will benefit, not suffer. Incidentally, the revenues of the companies will be conserved and larger new dividends are expected to follow.

And as in the coal group so in other of the railroad stocks. It has not been for nothing, for instance, that St. Paul, Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Union Pacific, Burlington, and the Vanderbilt groups lately have in the stock market been so conspicuously strong. THE NEW YORK TIMES has assurance that comprehensive plans involving these several systems are under way—plans that will bring the roads closer and closer together. The present month is expected to be productive of much development along the lines indicated, and probably of some definite announcements.

JOY IN THE QUAY CAMP

Followers Rejoice Over His Nomination in Joint Caucus.

Are Positive He Will Be Elected to the Senate, with a Number of Votes to Spare.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Jan. 1.—Col. Quay was the unanimous choice of the joint convention of Republican Senators and Members, held to-night in the House chamber to nominate a candidate for United States Senator. The caucus was attended by 123 legislators, or 4 less than the number necessary to a choice in the joint convention of the Senate and House, which will be held Jan. 16.

Three of those present were Messrs. Hill and Tiffany of Susquehanna County and McPherson of Adams, who absented themselves last night from the House caucus and voted with the Democrats in the House today for Gen. Koontz for Speaker. Mr. Beaver of Juniata, who voted with the stalwarts for Mr. Marshall for Speaker, was present, but did not answer to his name. It was stated that he will abide by the caucus. Thomson of Center and Haldeman of Montgomery, who are detained at home by illness, were pledged by their colleagues to Mr. Quay. This apparently gives Mr. Quay 126 of the 127 necessary to a choice. The other absentees voted with the Democrats on the organization of the House, and are classed as anti-Quay Republicans.

Speeches were made nominating Mr. Quay, Congressman John Dalzell and Judge John G. Stewart. On the balloting Mr. Quay received the votes of twenty-six Senators and ninety-three members of the House. Before the result was announced, the names of Messrs. Dalzell and Stewart were withdrawn and the nomination of Mr. Quay was made unanimous, and he was thus given a total of 123 votes.

With one present and not voting, two absent on account of illness, all three of whom, it is claimed, will abide by the caucus decision, a vote of 126 for Quay on joint ballot is indicated. As the names of certain men who had been counted in the anti-Quay column were called and they announced their vote for Mr. Quay there was demonstration of great approval on the part of the great crowd present.

The Quay people are jubilant over the result of the caucus, as the number present exceeded their expectations, and they claim that before the vote for Senator is taken on joint ballot they will have many more than the number necessary to elect. Mr. Quay himself is quoted as saying that he expected 121 votes in the caucus. The news of the result of the gathering was taken to him by his friends, and party leaders from all over the State visited him and extended their congratulations upon what they claim is a certain victory for stalwart Republicanism and party regularity.

While the caucus was in session in the House Chamber, a secret meeting of the anti-Quay Republicans was held at their headquarters at the Commonwealth Hotel. At the close of the meeting the pledge of the anti-Quayites binding themselves together to oppose Mr. Quay's re-election, was made public. The pledge contains sixty-eight names.

A call was issued to-night for a caucus of the House and Senate Democrats on the evening of Jan. 14 for the nomination of a candidate for United States Senator. Col. James M. Guffey of Pittsburg will probably be chosen the caucus nominee.

Both branches of the Pennsylvania Legislature met in biennial session at noon to-day, and the feature of the occasion was the battle between the Quay Republicans and the allied forces of the anti-Quay Republicans and Democrats for control of the House of Representatives, resulting in a victory for the Quay forces. William T. Marshall of Allegheny was the choice of the Quay forces for Speaker, while the Democrats and anti-Quay Republicans were lined up for Gen. William H. Koontz of Somerset, anti-Quay Republican. The membership of the House is 203, there being a vacancy in the sixteenth Pennsylvania District. Of these, 154 are Republicans and 59 Democrats.

Senator Snyder of Chester County was the choice of the Quay faction for President of the Senate, and was elected by a vote of 28 to 13, for Senator Nidler, Democrat, of Cumberland.

In the House, the proceedings began with the formal swearing in of the members, after which the roll call showed three absentees. Nominations for Speaker being in order, the names of Mr. Marshall and Gen. Koontz were presented. As the voting progressed it was seen that the vote would be close, and it was announced as 100 for Marshall and 99 for Koontz. Four Democrats voted for Marshall.

The announcement of the result was followed by vociferous cheering and applause.

MYSTERY IN A SHOOTING.

Woman Who Gave Name and Address, Not Verified, in Presbyterian Hospital—Was Shot Near the Heart.

The Harlem police are trying to solve the mystery of a woman in the Presbyterian Hospital in a dangerous condition with a bullet wound in her breast, just below the heart, and no explanation as to how she received it. She arrived at the hospital at about 8 o'clock last night in a cab. A man about thirty-five years old, with dark mustache, who was with her, led her into the reception room and left hurriedly after saying that she was his sister and that she was sick.

When the surgeons examined her they found that she had fainted from the loss of blood escaping from a bullet wound in her breast. When questioned she said that she was Mary Braun, and lived at 1,440 Park Avenue with her brother Herman, who was a cook in a restaurant on Eighth Avenue. She refused to tell how she had received the wound from which she is suffering.

The police of the East One Hundred and Fourth Street Station sent a detective to the address she gave. The people there said that no Braun had lived there in the past two months, and that there never had been any shooting in the house.

Albert Berg, who keeps a saloon on the ground floor, said that a Mary Braun and her husband had lived there six months ago. He understood that she cooked in an Eighth Avenue restaurant. He knew nothing more of them.

The second floor of the house, which was the floor on which the Braun woman said she lived, was empty, and one of the windows was broken. Another detective again saw the woman at the hospital, but he could learn nothing more than she had told the doctors. The police are now trying to find the whereabouts of the man who brought her to the hospital.

The police of the West Forty-seventh Street Station called up the hospital by telephone and inquired if a woman suffering from a bullet wound was a patient there.

AN ALLEGED BLACKMAILER.

Demanded Money of Wife of Miles McDonnell, Who Is Held for Shooting Four Men.

August Olsen, twenty-nine years old, a sailor, who refuses to give his address, was arrested yesterday morning at the general delivery window of the General Post Office, by Detectives Buckridge and Schaffer of the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Police Station, as he was in the act of asking for mail for himself.

Olsen, it is alleged, wrote a letter to Mrs. Miles McDonnell, asking for money on the ground that he was in the saloon at the time her husband shot the four men, and that he was hurt and wanted money so that he might consult a doctor. Mrs. McDonnell gave the letter to Capt. Dean of the East One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street Police Station, who placed the matter in the hands of the two detectives mentioned. The letter which he wrote is as follows:

Dear Madam: I was at the saloon at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street and Park Avenue Thursday night. Unfortunately, at the time of the trouble I got on the floor and got a very bad cut on my head. Two men took me away to a house on Second Avenue and got me a doctor, who fixed my head. They gave me $5 and told me to stay out of the way, as they were friends of your husband, but I can't stay away on nothing. I have seen the doctor only once since I have no money left. So Mr. McDonnell wants me to keep out of the way you must come at once to see me and send men some money by Monday. I can't tell you where I will be for they have be after me. Twice I had to move. Will let you know where to find me when I hear from you. Send me some money at once so I can see a doctor. I do not want to be witness against Mr. McDonnell. AUGUSTUS OLSEN.

P. S.—Please direct reply to August Olsen, General Post Office.

The police think that the man was not present at the shooting at all, and that it is a sure case of blackmail.

BONDSMEN TO PAY $25,000.

Compromise Effected, in the Case of Tax Receiver McCullough of Blair County, Penn.

ALTOONA, Penn., Jan. 1.—On a confessed defalcation of between $30,000 and $40,000, the County Commissioners have agreed to accept $25,000 from Tax Receiver James H. McCullough's bondsmen, and call his accounts square. He owes $25,000 on his 1898 duplicates and $50,000 on his 1899 duplicates. These amounts include the sum total of his peculations.

The compromise was effected yesterday, after several conferences had been held by the bondsmen, Commissioners, and attorneys. The bondsmen are to pay $12,500 for 1898, and the same amount for 1899, the Commissioners claiming that McCullough's duplicates are accurate up to and including 1897. The bondsmen at first wanted to give only $15,000, but they wished to be relieved of their burden, and therefore acceded to the Commissioners' demands. Judge Martin Bell of Hollidaysburg, has approved the compromise.

The Commissioners will appoint a new receiver to collect the balance. McCullough is still missing, and one of the bondsmen proposes to offer a reward for his apprehension.

BOLD WEST SIDE ROBBERY.

Three Highwaymen Stop Two Men in Twenty-fifth Street and Get Away with Booty.

Three highwaymen stopped Thomas O'Brien, a contractor, and his brother James of Rosebank, S. I., on Twenty-fifth Street, between Sixth and Seventh Avenues, last night, and after robbing Thomas O'Brien of a watch and chain, kicking him about the head, and leaving his face cut open from forehead to chin, made their escape. The police, as well as men from the detective bureau, are searching for the men, of whom they have descriptions.

The two O'Briens paid a visit to a sister living on West Twenty-fifth Street last night, and left her house a few moments before 10 o'clock. As they were walking along between Sixth and Seventh Avenues on Twenty-fifth Street three men rushed out from a doorway and attacked them. One of them seized Thomas O'Brien and held him while another tried to disengage his watch chain from his waistcoat. The third man held his brother.

After a few moments' struggle the man who was holding James O'Brien went to the assistance of his companion and struck their victim a blow behind the ear that felled him to the ground. After kicking him about the head and face the three left, taking with them the watch and chain. They ran along Twenty-fifth Street to Seventh Avenue and separated there, two of them going north, while the other ran south. Their victims were unable to pursue them, and went instead to the West Thirtieth Street Police Station, where they gave a description of their assailants.

One of the men was about 5 feet 11 inches in height, wore dark clothes, and no overcoat. He had a light mustache and blonde hair. The second was short and stout, and had a small mustache. The third was tall and slim, clean shaven, and apparently very young.

We Start Twentieth Century with

A Great White Sale,

and through extraordinary values offered, demonstrate anew

OUR POWER AS GREAT DISTRIBUTERS.

WE ARE RETAIL SELLERS——————WHOLESALE BUYERS

In other words, buy quantities that exceed many times those bought by many wholesalers who wholesale; we also buy for cash invariably—this explains why the most staple goods are so often found here below prices at which they can be bought in quantities of jobbers.... To be sure, we sell at close profit, but doing a cash business and selling great quantities, make it satisfactory—customers getting the benefit and thereby constantly increasing our fame as

GIVERS OF BEST VALUES.

FORTIFYING AT CAPE TOWN

Guns from the Battleship Monarch To Be Landed To-day.

Gravity of Boer Invasion Said Not To Be Understood in England—Kuruman May be Already Invested.

CAPE TOWN, Jan. 2.—The British battleship Monarch will land guns to-morrow as a precautionary measure. The situation is undoubtedly serious.

It is true that the Dutch have not joined the invaders in any considerable numbers, but a lack of arms is believed to be the true reason for abstention. In many places horses are freely offered and information readily supplied to the Boers.

The early proclamation of martial law in the Cape Town division is expected. This division does not include Cape Town itself.

The latest reports show the situation to be generally as follows:

Kuruman, if still uninvested, will probably soon be besieged. Griqualand West is filled with small parties of Boers, who are working south toward Prieska for the purpose of co-operating with or supporting Commandant Hertzog, whose advance parties are in the neighborhood of Fraserburg.

The Boers are close to Graaf Reinet, where of late the Dutch have given many demonstrations of extreme sympathy.

In the eastern part of the colony the advance guard of the Boers is close to Maraisburg, about twenty-five miles northeast of Cradock.

The general opinion here is that the position is not properly appreciated in England. The Worcester Conference excited the Dutch throughout the colony. Many old residents, who are by no means alarmists, regard a general uprising of the Dutch as quite likely.

CRADOCK, Cape Colony, Jan. 2.—A detachment of Boers entered Roodehoogte, south of Middleburg, on Jan. 1. It is believed that this force is going to Graaf Reinet. The telegraph lines are cut between Carnarvon and Somerset West and Steynsburg and Maraisburg.

Large reinforcements have reached Middleburg.

CARNARVON, Jan. 2.—The Boers, commanded by Hertzog, Wessels, Pretorius, and Nieuwenhaut, are continuing their march on Fraserburg. It is reported that they have arrived at Spionberg.

Looting continues. The Boer forces are footsore, and there is great want of fodder, as the country is barren.

Communication with Fraserburg is suspended, and it is doubtful when this will be restored, inasmuch as the Boers are traveling along the line. Col. Thorneycroft and Col. De Lisle are continuing the chase, but their horses are very tired.

Many Dutch residents attended the funeral of a Boer killed in action, and placed wreaths upon his coffin.

The Boers captured and destroyed the mails due on Dec. 30.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—"Martial law has been proclaimed in the Worcestershire, Ceres, Prince Albert, Fraserburg, and Sutherland Divisions," says the Cape Town correspondent of The Daily Mail, wiring yesterday. "The enlistment of volunteers is active, and the best authorities anticipate favorable developments shortly. The great trouble is the scarcity of horses.

"Seven hundred Boers have broken through the cordon at Zuurberg and are advancing upon Richmond. The magistrate there reports that they are burning and looting a few miles from the town.

"Lord Methuen is concentrating a force at Vryburg, whither a thousand troops have been sent from Kimberley, and others from more northerly towns, to deal with a commando that is raiding around Kuruman.

"The Boers have reoccupied Jagersfontein, which, together with Fauresmith, the British evacuated on Christmas Day. The convoy of retiring inhabitants, with hundreds of wagons, extended for seven miles. It was a mournful spectacle. I gather that the motive for the evacuation was the difficulty of maintaining food supplies so far from the railway."

In a dispatch to the War Office Lord Kitchener says:

"Williams engaged the Boers southwest of Middleburg, Cape Colony, and the British now occupy Graef Reinet."

The Standard, commenting on the invasion of Cape Colony, says:

"The American civil war provides a useful parallel. The Confederate raids failed to achieve anything serious."

DE WET AGAIN "HEADED OFF."

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The War Office has received the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener:

"De Wet tried to move toward Bethlehem, but he was headed off by Pilcher, and retreated toward Lindley or Reitz.

"One hundred and thirty Boer horses have been captured near Thaba N'Chu.

"The railway has been damaged south of Serfontein."

New Ships for South African Trade.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Donald Currie & Co., the well-known ship owners, will build seven large steamers to trade between Great Britain and South Africa and America and South Africa.

Mr. Krueger Ill in Bed.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 2.—Mr. Krüger is suffering from a slight attack of bronchitis. There is no anxiety as to his condition, but he is obliged to keep to his bed. Drs. Heymans, Van Khuyzen, and Odert to-day issued the following bulletin: "Mr. Krüger has for some days been suffering from a recurrence of bronchitis, which, in view of his age and the effects of this climate, makes it necessary for him to be more than ordinarily careful."

Portugal's Friendship for England.

LISBON, Jan. 2.—King Carlos, in his speech at the opening of the Cortes to-day, said: "The Queen of England was pleased to send recently to Lisbon a powerful squadron on a special mission. This was extremely agreeable to me, and will be equally so to you. The presence of this great squadron signally emphasizes the solemn affirmation then made of the close friendship and alliance which unites the two nations."

Kitchener to Command in India.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—It is understood that at the conclusion of the operations in South Africa Lord Kitchener will become Commander in Chief in India.

CUDAHY GETS ANOTHER LETTER

Destruction of Entire Family Threatened Unless Rewards Are Withdrawn—Pat Crowe's Brother Freed.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 2.—Another letter, printed with a lead pencil, was received by E. A. Cudahy this afternoon, demanding the withdrawal of the reward for the kidnappers. The fact that the address was printed in similar style to the former ones gave rise to the suspicion that it was from the same source, but Mr. Cudahy stated tonight that he did not attach the slightest significance to it. He said it was of the same class as several others that had been received from various points, except that it had been printed.

The letter demands the withdrawal of the Cudahy offer of reward and of the city's offer as well, under the penalty not only of trouble for the children, but the destruction of the entire "Cudahy family." The epistle closed with an injunction to "heed this warning."

Edward A. Cudahy, Jr., failed to-day to identify J. J. Crowe as one of the men who kidnapped him. Young Cudahy appeared at the city jail and confronted Crowe. After looking at the suspect five minutes or more, Cudahy remarked:

"I never saw that man before. He is not the one who stood guard over me, and if he had anything at all to do with the kidnapping I didn't see him."

After making this declaration the lad was taken before Chief Donahue for a private conference. Crowe was released from custody this afternoon. He was taken to court for a hearing and as no charge was preferred the Court dismissed the case.

It was learned to-day that the man arrested yesterday near Pine Ridge Agency after a chase, and who, it was reported from Chadron, Neb., was Pat Crowe, accused of being implicated in the Cudahy case, was a collector of specimens, named Dennis, of Boston. He was released today.

LIVERPOOL, Jan. 2.—An investigation of the report, circulated in the United States, that "Pat" Crowe, who is suspected of having been the leader of the gang of Omaha kidnappers, was a passenger on board the British steamer Michigan, which left Boston Dec. 22 for this port, arriving here to-day, shows that Crowe, apparently, was not on board. The Michigan carried no passengers, but, in addition to her crew, she had on board a number of cattlemen. None of these would acknowledge himself as Crowe, and as the Liverpool police had not been notified of the expected arrival of the suspected man, they did not examine the cattlemen.

Four Bills to Punish Kidnappers.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 2.—Senator Ransom of Omaha introduced in the Senate today a bill to make kidnapping under certain conditions punishable by death. It provides for three grades of punishment. For simple kidnapping, three to five years in the penitentiary; for kidnapping and extorting money, a life term in prison, and for kidnapping and threatening injury to the victim, hanging. Three other bills bearing on kidnapping and not greatly different in phraseology were introduced.

SEEDS AS VOTE GETTERS.

Free Distribution by the Government Is Regarded as a Joke, but Is Useful Nevertheless.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The annual distribution of seeds is about to begin, and Secretary Wilson said of it to-day: "The distribution of garden seeds is not a matter of particular pride with the Agricultural Department, but it is one of our duties, and we endeavor to discharge it. All the seeds sent out will be tested for germination, purity, and variety. Everything will be done to have the distribution made better and more expeditiously than previous ones."

The Secretary's view of the seed business is shared by everybody connected with the agricultural end of the Government, including the Agricultural Committee of the House. The seed distribution is beginning to be looked upon as a joke in Congress, and in the last session one of the members embalmed in The Congressional Record a poem on "the seeds that never grow." Nevertheless the distribution grows every year, and the distribution which will begin this week will be the largest ever made by the Government.

The value of seeds as campaign documents is proved by the fact that the appropriation was increased at the last session from $130,000 to $170,000. They are reckoned as the best vote producing campaign documents ever franked. Not everybody will go to speeches on heavy subjects, but everybody can understand a seed, even if it does not grow. Even the Congressmen from New York City have received applications for seeds from their constituents, and not from men living in the suburbs either.

The increased appropriation will add 3,000 packages to each Representative's quota. Each package contains five or six varieties of seeds, and the members of the present Congress will thus be able to reach and persuade a larger constituency than any of their predecessors.

THE ALGER-MILES DISPUTE.

Administration, It Is Said, Wants the General to Make No Answer.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Gen. Miles is the centre of gossip just now, and all sorts of stories are current regarding the likelihood of his replying to Gen. Alger's attack upon him. A report which was widely circulated about Washington to-day was to the effect that the Administration had intimated to Gen. Miles its wish that he should not answer the criticisms of the ex-Secretary. This report was denied by those whose names were mentioned in it, and it is certain that it is without foundation. Secretary Root had a long talk with Gen. Miles to-day, but declared afterward that it had to do with matters of military routine, and that the subject of the rumor was not mentioned.

It is assumed that the Administration does not wish the controversy continued, and that, if Gen. Miles should insist on doing so and the controversy should become heated, there might be features of it which would result in action to the detriment of Gen. Miles. If he should attack his superiors, the President, for instance, official notice would have to be taken of it; but there is no reason to suppose that he would do so, and the department has not in so many words forbidden him to attack or criticise a private citizen of Michigan.

Gen. Miles has been besieged by newspapers and by magazine publishers to reply to Mr. Alger, but has not made any definite answer. Some of his friends are advising him to take no notice of the assault.

A PROTEST FROM NEW ORLEANS.

Closing of Private Markets Causes Great Inconvenience.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 2.—The rigid enforcement of the new public market law, which practically prohibits the operation of private markets in New Orleans, has caused a vigorous howl of complaint in many sections of the city since yesterday, when the law became effective. In many sections the householder is now forced to walk half a mile each way to buy meats and vegetables, pay more for them, and do his marketing before noon, as the markets, under the law, are closed at that hour. As a result many persons went without meat at dinner yesterday and to-day, as the private markets they had heretofore patronized were closed up.

The object of the new law is to increase the city's revenue. Chief Clerk Brady of the Department of Police and Public Buildings, said the partial returns were sufficient to convince him that the receipts would be greater than the sum which was offered for the markets by the lessees, $185,000 per year, and he thought the partial collections of a single day justified the figures in the budget of revenue of $192,000 annually.

BELLEVUE DOCTORS TELL OF HOSPITAL PRACTICES

Commissioner Keller Says Their Reply Is Not Conclusive.

ANOTHER ABUSE DISCOVERED

Money Extorted from Poor Patients Under Threats of Being Sent to the Island.

Another abuse which has just come to light in Bellevue Hospital is that small sums are extorted from the poor patients under penalty of being sent to the Island. Commissioner Keller says he has proof of this.

There is to be no truce in the war declared by Commissioner John W. Keller on the abuses at Bellevue Hospital. The Medical Board of the hospital yesterday answered the Commissioner's letter relative to the alleged abuses in the hospital. Twenty-six members of the board were present, in a closed session lasting two hours, and, besides formulating an answer to Commissioner Keller's letter, discussed the charges that have been made. It was said that there was no friction whatever between Mr. Keller and the board.

A letter from Dr. Austin Flint to the President of the board was submitted at the meeting. It was in part a personal vindication of its author against some anonymous newspaper criticisms of his action in the Newport case in taking a fee on account of a patient in the insane pavilion while occupying the position of consulting physician to the hospital. Dr. Flint explains that he had already once examined the patient before his commitment to Bellevue in consequence of having made a public disturbance; that he visited him there, not in any official capacity, but at the request of his family, and to insure his prompt removal to a private asylum, which was effected, on the application of Dr. Flint and his associate to the court. The courtesy of allowing members of the the Medical Board to examine private patients in the hospital, Dr. Flint adds, he never heard questioned, except in connection with this case. He appends to his letter a copy of a plan for the reorganization of the insane pavilion, which he drew up and submitted to the head of the department in January, 1898.

A letter from Dr. Allen Fitch in regard to the same matter was received by Dr. Charles L. Dana, President of the board, in which he says he, at Mrs. Newport's request, examined her husband. Then Dr. Flint prepared the necessary certificate for presentation to the court for Mr. Newport's removal to a private sanitarium, as Mrs. Newport desired. All the proceedings were hurried, at Mrs. Newport's urgent request. "I own no stock in any private asylum, and have never accepted a commission for sending cases to them," writes Dr. Fitch. He had no knowledge that his name was to be used in Dr. Flint's bill.

Dr. Alexander Lambert, the Secretary of the board, delivered to Commissioner Keller in his room in the New Amsterdam Hotel the letter of the board. The Commissioner is still suffering from bronchitis.

The reply informs the Commissioner that a special committee of five has been appointed to take up the matter of the general conditions in the hospital and bring them to his notice officially, and then proceeds to answer Keller's questions.

MEDICAL BOARD'S REPLY.

The board says: "So far from the patient being injured by the bedside instruction of students in Bellevue Hospital, they are helped by it, and in the vast majority of cases the patients do not dislike or fear the interest that is shown in them, but rather the contrary. It is the experience of this institution and of all others that medical instruction given in connection with the hospital promotes the best interests of the patients and of the hospital."

"Cases in the hospital," the board reports, "are to be treated, and examinations are to be made with the same gentleness and consideration as would be shown to patients in private practice. Clinical instruction is conducted by us humanely, and it has not seemed necessary that formal limits should be set with regard to the length of time that a patient is under examination. The great majority of patients are not placed on a table at all, but are seen in their own beds.

"The Medical Board has nothing to do with the fee system in the insane pavilion, the Medical Examiners being paid city officers, not under the control or direction of the Medical Board in any way, and their functions are not those of the treatment and care of the patients.

"The same regulations govern the house physician touching the alcoholic ward and pavilion for insane as govern the wards in the main hospital. It is considered proper and right for a nurse to administer hypodermic injections, but solely under the directions of the house or visiting physician; it is a part of their training as nurses that they should be able to use a hypodermic syringe, but never except under medical directions."

The letter concludes:

"We have, in the foregoing, replied to the questions you have asked us. We are ready to supplement these answers in any way you wish, and to co-operate with you in perfecting the service in any way. The records of the hospital will show that no institution is doing more effective medical and surgical work in the cause of the sick poor than Bellevue Hospital, and the more completely this work is known, the more confident shall we be that the worth and merits of Bellevue Hospital will be recognized."

Commissioner Keller said last evening: "The reply of the Medical Board is a fair answer to all the questions I asked. I believe what the Medical Board says and I accept its statements. Its reply is not specific in regard to the use of the hypodermic syringes by the nurses. Of course, the reply cannot be accepted as conclusive as to the complaints that have been made. Nor could it be reasonably expected to answer these complaints. That must be a matter for individual investigation.

"The letter of the board says nothing as to the various charges that have been made with reference to the service in Bellevue. I presume, however, their Committee of Five will take that up with me.

"But this will not end the investigation by any means. Those persons found to be responsible for the abuses discovered will be punished. The statement, however, that I have singled out a certain set of persons as being responsible and have decided to remove them is not correct. I knew of the conditions at Bellevue for some time before the Hilliard scandal. On Dec. 1 I appeared before the board and told the members that while Bellevue was fair without, it was rotten within, and as the responsible head of the department I was anxious to know whether there was anything to justify the charges made."

CAREFUL INVESTIGATION NEEDED.

"What reply did the board make?"

"There was an informal discussion, out of which the most tangible thing that resulted was the passage of a resolution to try to get the Board of Estimate to appropriate $500,000 for a new administration building. The conditions as they have existed for years are the crystallization of the efforts of various administrations, and it is not easy for a man to take this structure and to say that it is all wrong.

"Radical changes cannot be made at one fell swoop without causing prejudice to the proper working of the hospital and the interests of the sick poor.

"But I think a salutary lesson has been taught already. So far as the nurses are concerned, the investigation is practically closed. I have dismissed ten nurses and also the helpers in the alcoholic ward, and it is pretty well understood that no one can expect any favor who neglects his duty or who ill-treats patients.

"My chief attention now will be given to investigating a system of petty extortion which I believe exists at Bellevue. It has recently come to my knowledge, through clergymen and others, that the sick poor are often threatened with being sent to the island unless they give up so much money. It is hard to get people to tell about these things, but I have obtained information from some of the clergy, and I cannot doubt that there has been extortion practiced at Bellevue."

When asked in regard to his probable action in the cases of Drs. Fitch, Wildman, and Moore, who testified at the Hilliard inquest, Mr. Keller said that he had not yet read the testimony, and he did not know just what admissions they had made.

"If I were to put out Drs. Fitch and Wildmun, who have been examiners in lunacy for years—and I will not put them out unless I am satisfied that they were wrong—if I were to put them out, I might get some doctors certified by the Civil Service Commission, and they might send some sane people to the private asylums. You see that I cannot act hastily and without due consideration of all that is involved."

THE CHARGES AGAINST NURSES.

The Board of Managers of the Mills Training School for Nurses also met yesterday afternoon and empowered Dr. Georgs B. Fowler to draw up a reply to the letter of Commissioner Keller asking for the co-operation of the board in remedying the abuses. The board informed Commissioner Keller that it will co-operate with him as he requests, and that they are investigating all the charges and are doing everything in the premises to remedy abuses and increase the efficiency of the nurses.

In the cases of the six accused nurses, Hamer, Wilson, McCracken, Newcombe, Fredericks, and Rafferty, the board says that in one instance they have discovered that these nurses have not complied with the rules and have treated the patients badly, and in view of these developments the board dismissed the nurse from the school. The letter concludes by saying that the belief of the board is that the recent unfortunate occurrence was in part, at least, the result of the fact that an improper amount of authority is given to the pupil nurses in the wards and too great responsibility, and that too scanty supervision is exercised over them.

It was announced yesterday that the State Board of Charities will take an active part in the reorganization of the Public Charities. The members, it is reported, will spend five days, beginning Jan. 10, and devote their entire time to the subject.

$12,000,000 FOR NEW DOCKS.

Senator Ahearn Denies His Bills Are in the Interest of the Brooklyn Warehouse Combine.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Senator Ahearn of Manhattan introduced a bill to-day which authorizes New York to spend $12,000,000 for the purchase of property along the water front for dock purposes. It is asserted here that the measure is backed by the big warehouse combination in Brooklyn, which was capitalized at $25,000,000, but is now in the hands of a receiver, who is winding up its affairs.

Another bill introduced by Senator Ahearn provides generally that it shall not be necessary for the Board of Docks in New York City to make any attempt to agree upon a price with the owners of property, rights, or privileges needed for the establishment or improvement of wharves in New York City.

Such rights shall vest in the city four months after the Commissioners of Estimate and Assessment shall have filed in the office of the Clerk of the Supreme Court of the First Judicial District their oaths stating the necessity for taking such property. On property already under consideration for wharf purposes the title shall vest in the city three months after similar filing has been made.

The two bills have been passed by previous Legislatures, but were vetoed by the Mayor. This time they are made general by applying them to cities of more than one million inhabitants. As there is only one city of the size in the State the purpose is apparent.

With the Ahearn bills law, it is said, the city could purchase large plots of the warehouse property practically on the latter's own terms, besides other corporation property of the same kind. The New York Dock Commissioners are said to have given the bills their approval.

When Senator Ahearn was asked to-night if the warehouse company was behind the bills he made a strong denial.

Wants to Sell the State Canals.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Senator Ambler introduced a concurrent resolution to-day permitting the State to sell the canals.

E. ROSEWATER IN COURT.

Omaha Editor Charged with Attempting to Corruptly Influence Voters.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Jan. 2.—A complaint was sworn out to-day in the South Omaha Police Court charging E. Rosewater with violating the Corrupt Practices act during the late campaign. The complaint charges that, in furtherance of his candidacy for the United States Senate, he paid, through C. E. Lieweilen, $6; through Paul Barley, $25, and through Chief of Police Mitchell of South Omaha, $25, all of which sums, it is alleged, were given to the parties mentioned for the purpose of corruptly influencing voters. Mr. Rosewater appeared voluntarily in court, and was released on his own recognizance for hearing Saturday.

HANKINS WANTS A DIVORCE.

Chicago Gambler Asks to be Freed from Wife Who Lives Here.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—George V. Hankins, famous the country over as a saloon keeper, turfman, and gambler, has filed a bill for a divorce for Effie S. Hankins, who is almost as well known as her husband. The grounds for the divorce are desertion, and it is stated in the petition that since Oct. 20, 1897, she has refused to live with her husband. She has been living in New York, where she recently filed a petition in bankruptcy.

The couple were married in Chicago on Christmas Eve of 1884.

ASPHALT WAR MAY BE OVER.

Trouble at Bermudez Lake, Minister Loomis Says, Is "Thwarted."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—A dispatch was received by the State Department to-day from Minister Loomis, which seems to indicate that the "asphalt war" in Venezuela is over. It reads as follows: "Have received advices of serious trouble at Bermudez Lake thwarted."

The interpretation of this dispatch which the State Department considers most reasonable is that serious trouble was threatened at the asphalt lake and that it has been averted. Minister Loomis, however, is usually extremely careful in his choice of words, and his employment of such an unusual word as "thwarted" in place of "averted" suggests to the officials that there may be a telegraphic error.

Chicagoans Will Get $1,500,000.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—Controller Kerfoot today received from the County Treasurer his annual statement. It provides for the payment from the special assessment fund of $1,500,000. Part of this sum will be paid on bonds due contractors, and the rest to property owners entitled to rebates on special assessments for local improvements. This $1,500,000 was tied up in the City Controller's hands by the fact that though the County Treasurer had turned over the money monthly, as required by law, no tabulated statement showing the particular lots on which the several assessments had been paid accompanied the money.

ENGINEER HOWARD ARRESTED FOR BIGAMY

Marries the Seventeen-Year-Old Daughter of Henry Hawkes of Brooklyn.

Alleged to Have a Wife and Nine-Year-Old Son Near Boston—Wife Ignorant of Arrest—Prisoner's Denial.

George W. Howard, who in September last married a daughter of Henry Hawkes, a rich Democratic politician of Brooklyn, was locked up in the Adams Street Police Station last night accused of bigamy. He was arrested at 6 o'clock last evening in his apartments in the New Amsterdam Hotel, Manhattan, at the instance of his brother-in-law, Henry Hawkes, Jr., on a warrant issued by Magistrate Brenner.

Howard gives his occupation as civil engineer. He is employed in the power house of the Metropolitan Traction Company, on Twenty-fifth Street. He came to this city from Boston more than a year ago and made many acquaintances in Brooklyn. He attended the monthly dances at the Assembly Rooms, in Pierrepont Street, and there met Miss Helen Hawkes, daughter of Henry Hawkes, Deputy Commissioner of Highways, who lives at 201 Prospect Street. It was a case of love at first sight. Helen was seventeen years old. The wedding was celebrated in Mr. Hawkes's home on Sept. 17 last. After the ceremony there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents, which was attended by all the prominent society people of Brooklyn. The bride received from her parents a handsome residence in St. John's Place completely furnished.

For a time the couple lived in Brooklyn, but Howard later took his bride to Manhattan and went to live at the New Amsterdam Hotel, pleading it was nearer to his office.

Henry Hawkes, Jr., says that since his marriage his brother-in-law has made many visits to Boston, and these visits aroused his suspicions. He engaged a private detective to follow his brother-in-law and on his report to him of this detective Hawkes made the charge of bigamy. He says he learned that Howard was married ten years ago to the daughter of an Episcopal clergyman at Cambridge, Mass., who, with a nine-year-old boy, is living in East Cambridge. The warrant was placed in the hands of Court Officer Maloney and the private detective.

Howard had telephoned to his father-in-law, Mr. Hawkes, that he would take dinner with him in Brooklyn last evening. The elder Hawkes knew nothing of the action taken by his son in court. Howard went to his hotel at 2 o'clock and learned that his brother-in-law had been there looking for him. He went to his room and told the clerk, it is said, to inform any one who might call that he was not in.

When the detectives with the warrant reached the rooms they were told that Howard was not in, and they waited around for him until 6 o'clock, when they went to his room and forced it open, as Howard had locked himself in. He was arrested and went to Brooklyn without resistance.

He was asked why he didn't open the door when the detectives first rapped, and replied:

"I was thinking who I could get for a bondsman."

Mrs. Howard, it appears, had no suspicion of her husband's alleged visits to Boston, and her brother seems to have proceeded in the matter on his own responsibility and without the knowledge of his sister or the other members of the family. The young man after a time, however, informed his father of his suspicions regarding his brother-in-law, but the elder Mr. Hawkes would not believe that Howard was guilty of anything wrong.

The detective who followed Howard to Boston saw him leave his baggage at the Hotel Touraine, in that city, and go to 63 Dana Street, East Cambridge. He found a woman there known as Mrs. George W. Howard, the wife of Howard. The detective says he told the woman that Howard had a wife in Brooklyn, but she would not believe him. She was a Miss Anna Kay, the daughter of an Episcopal clergyman, and was married to Howard on Aug. 19, 1890.

"Who is this woman in Boston who says she is your wife?" Howard was asked last night.

"I do not know of any woman except one with whom I used to live," he replied finally. "There never was any marriage, and I never committed bigamy."

A brother of Howard, who came to this city from Boston yesterday, called at the station house last night and sought to obtain the release of Howard on bail. He called Mr. Hawkes up on the telephone and requested him to furnish a bond, but Mr. Hawkes did not put in an appearance at the station house.

The elder Mr. Hawkes said: "I can hardly believe that this man is guilty. He was plausible and seemed to be the kindest of husbands. My son has been attending to this matter. He is out now. He is curious about this affair, and he says that he will see that Howard is punished. My daughter knows nothing of the matter. She is visiting friends in Albany. She went there with her sister before Christmas, and Howard was to go after her this week. I have telegraphed to her to come home."

HOWARD'S CAMBRIDGE HOME.

Lived In An Apartment House With His Wife and Child.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—George W. Howard lived at 63 Dana Street, Cambridge, with his wife and their nine-year-old boy. It is in a six-family house, and the Howards occupied the top apartment. A visit there tonight found a woman who intimated that she was Mrs. Howard's sister, and said that Mrs. Howard had retired.

When told of the arrest she manifested no surprise. She went into another room and when she came back she said Mrs. Howard had heard nothing about the affair and that she did not believe it in the least degree. When asked if Mr. Howard was at home and as to his home life and his business, she declined to make any statement whatever. The Howard flat was the only one in the neighborhood lighted up, and it was evident something had disturbed the quiet of the place. Howard is little known over here.

UNDERTAKERS IN A TRUST.

Chicagoans Will Be Asked to Pay More to Ride to Cemeteries.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—North Side liverymen and undertakers have formed what patrons call a trust for the purpose of controlling the price of carriages to and from the cemeteries of Chicago. Members of the combine will, it is said, be expected to live up to the established rate or be forced out of business by a boycott.

The prices for carriages charged for the last ten years has been: To Graceland and St. Boniface, $4; to Rosehill, Calvary, Waldheim, Forest Home, Concordia, and Oakwoods cemeteries, each, $5. The price will be increased $1 in each instance.

Shoe Manufacturers Will Combine.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—Shoe manufacturers are planning the establishment of a National shoe company to dominate the distribution of shoes to the retailers and eliminate the middleman's profits. R. F. Wolfe of Columbus, Ohio, is sponsor for the new project, and he has interested twelve of the largest manufacturers of the East. The company is to consist of not more than twelve houses manufacturing dissimilar lines of shoes, with a total capital stock of $3,500,000. Depots will be established in every leading city in the United States.

ATTACK ON SECRETARY ROOT.

Senator Bacon's Attempt to Force Publication of Report on Cuban Frauds Will Fail.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—Senator Bacon introduced a resolution before the holiday adjournment which directed the Secretary of War to transmit to the Senate the report of Abraham L. Lawshe, "Giving in detail the result of his investigation, made under the direction of the War Department, into the receipts and expenditures of the Cuban funds." This resolution was passed Dec. 19.

It is now asserted that Mr. Bacon knew that Mr. Root intended to keep this report secret, and that the resolution was offered for the purpose of compelling publicity, whether the Secretary judged it best to keep it from the public or not. If that was its purpose it has failed. Mr. Root will not transmit the report, and it is believed that he will make no answer to the resolution.

Some of the Secretary's enemies are trying to stir up trouble for him on the ground that such action will place him in contempt of the Senate." It is asserted that the resolution was mandatory and left the Secretary no discretion. Resolutions of this nature, when addressed to the President, always leave the matter to his discretion by adding the words, "if not incompatible with the public interest." It is not considered necessary to add this clause when the Senate calls on a Cabinet officer for information.

The fact is, however, that Cabinet officers usually exercise this discretion, and no way has ever been found of compelling them to furnish the information which they consider it advisable to withhold. In this particular case Mr. Root's reasons for withholding the report of Lawshe are founded on what he considers the public interests. Lawshe was an officer of the Government who was sent to Cuba to secure information which might lead to prosecutions for defrauding the Government. His assignment for that purpose grew out of the Neely scandals. The information which he secured is to be used in prosecuting any criminal cases which have been or may be brought, and the Secretary of War withholds the report on the ground that to publish it would be to acquaint present and prospective defendants with the evidence against them.

"The resolution," said an official who is familiar with the situation, "is like calling upon a district attorney for his trial notes."

Senator Bacon is the Cuban expert of the Democratic party in the Senate. He has made Cuban affairs his especial care and has been actively engaged for the best part of a year in trying to fasten the Neely and other scandals on the Administration. The defeat of his effort to secure the Lawshe report may lead to further efforts on his part, including an attack on the Secretary of War. It is asserted, however, by those who are in a position to know, that the majority of the Senators agree with Mr. Root's view of the case and that any effort to make him force his hand in advance of criminal prosecutions will be defeated.

A BIG MORTGAGE CANCELED.

Society for Establishing Useful Manufactures Pays Off $650,000.

PATERSON, N. J., Jan. 2.—A mortgage for $650,000, executed April 1, 1887, by the Society for Establishing Useful Manufactures, to William Bennington and Garret A. Hobart, as trustees for the families of Morgan G. Colt and Julius C. Flower, to secure payment of the balance of the purchase price of stock of the company, was canceled to-day. The society was formed in 1791. For many years prior to 1887 it was controlled by the stock of Morgan G. Colt and Julius C. Fowler.

In 1887 the society purchased the interest of the Colt and Fowler estates, paying part cash and giving the mortgage for the remainder. The stock, which has since been held by the society, has now been purchased by George F. Baker, a New York banker, and E. Le B. Gardner on behalf of themselves and others. What the purchase price was has not been announced.

PLOW TRUST A CERTAINTY?

Two Years' Work of C. R. Flint Will, It Is Said, Bear Fruit Within a Few Days.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—Within a few days, it is said, C. R. Flint will close a deal to form a trust in plows and cultivators. It is the plan of Mr. Flint and his associates to arrange the closing details before Jan. 15. Plows will be advanced in price not less than 10 per cent., it is said. From South Bend, Ind., word was received to-day that the efforts of Mr. Flint had proved a success, after negotiations that have lasted for nearly two years.

Ex-Judge William A. Vincent, according to the advices from South Bend, has secured sixty written options on the largest plow and cultivating concerns in Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, New York, Michigan, and Wisconsin. These concerns control the plow business to-day. However, there have been many bitter wars in cutting prices and complications have come to the front in exporting goods to Mexico and European countries. Agents have led a merry war of cutting prices with the Mexico trade until the profit has been wiped out.

A conference is to be held in New York this week, at which time ex-Judge Vincent will present his options and the final steps be taken. Every effort is being taken to keep the date and exact place of the meeting a secret. It is said the capital stock will be $35,000,000.

WANTS A NATIONAL TELEGRAPH

Special to The New York Times.

OTTAWA, Ontario, Jan. 2.—Sir Sanford Fleming has addressed a long letter to William Mulock, Postmaster General, in favor of a telegraph service to girdle the globe and owned by the State. The letter is said to be the beginning of a movement to nationalize the cable and telegraph service of the empire. The matter, the writer says, affects Canada as well as Australia.

The arrangement for the establishment of the Pacific cable has been completed. The arrangement implies joint ownership, and in the opinion of Sir Sanford it is the harbinger of a complete system of State-owned telegraphs by land and sea.

With the telegraph system nationalized as suggested, Sir Sanford says that messages will be transmitted to and from the most distant British possessions at one-eighth or one-tenth the rates now levied by the companies. In concluding his letter the writer says:

"British subjects in Canada, in Australia, in New Zealand, in India, in Africa, as well as in the mother country, must unite in securing complete emancipation from the grasp of the great 'cable combine.' At the threshold of the twentieth century high imperial interests demand the cheapest possible telegraph transmission and the greatest possible freedom of intercourse between all the subjects of her Majesty domiciled around the globe. I respectfully submit, therefore, that action cannot be taken a day too soon to nationalize our telegraph system by land and sea throughout the whole empire."

New Street Cars for Chicago.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—As a New Year's present to its patrons and a test to determine the sentiment of the public on the question of motive power, the Chicago City Railway Company is about to put into service five of what are said to be the finest street cars ever built for urban traffic. These new cars, now almost completed, will be put into service within thirty days on the various electric lines, and if found practicable and popular with the public, a complete new line of rolling stock of similar construction will be installed.

Wages of 3,000 Men Reduced.

Special to The New York Times.

At a meeting held in Youngstown, of owners of twenty-nine furnaces, it was decided to reduce the wages of all employes 10 per cent. The reduction becomes effective Feb. 1, and the wages of about 3,000 men will be cut. The workmen have not decided whether they will accept the reduction or go on strike.

LEXINGTON AVE. CABLE FRANCHISE INVALID

Justice Bischoff's Decision May Have Far-Reaching Effect.

TRACKS MAY BE TAKEN UP

Franchise for Operation Above 42d Street and for the 116th Street Line Involved—The Company Appeals.

Justice Bischoff of the Supreme Court, after nearly a year's deliberation, handed down a decision yesterday, which, if sustained by the Court of Appeals, means that the Metropolitan Street Railway Company will have no right to run cars on Lexington Avenue from Forty-second Street to the Harlem River, nor operate the One Hundred and Sixteenth Street crosstown line. The decision practically advises all property owners along the lines designated to sue for damages.

The company immediately gave notice of an appeal, and was given thirty days' stay of the permanent injunction which had been granted by Justice Bischoff.

House, Grossman & Vorhaus, counsel for the man who started the action against the company, say the decision will be far-reaching in its effect, as it means that actions to recover millions of dollars for damages will be started against the company. The decision, if sustained, will also mean that all stocks and bonds issued on the lines affected become of little value, and that eventually the road will have to be torn up.

The action was brought by Louis Tekulsky of 852 Lexington Avenue, whose property is situated between One Hundred and Fourth and One Hundred and Fifth Streets. He objected to the maintenance of a transfer station in front of his property, and wanted damages. One of his contentions was that the sale of franchises to the company was not in compliance with the law, and therefore it was illegal for the company extent named in the suit. Consequently he wishes the franchise of the company declared invalid and all cars stopped running by his house. This same question has been litigated a half dozen times before.

"The contention of the company is that the One Hundred and Sixteenth Street crosstown line and the extension of the Lexington Avenue line from Forty-second Street to the Harlem River were but one extension, authorized under the franchise obtained about 1884, when Lexington Avenue was not physically open through the point where the transfer station is now. The Third Avenue elevated road yards at that time extended to Madison Avenue, and as soon as Lexington Avenue was cut through the line was extended to the Harlem River and the One Hundred and Sixteenth Street crosstown line built. Contending that there was only one extension, we think the sale of the road in one lot was therefore valid and according to statute. However, under Justice Bischoff's decision we think that only the One Hundred and Sixteenth Street line would be affected. The Beckman case, upon which the opinion is principally based, we do not altogether think is similar to our case. The Appellate Division will be asked to pass upon the matter, and, in the meantime, by means of the stay granted, persons living along Lexington Avenue will be enabled to ride home on the cable cars, as usual."

MARRIAGE SURPRISES SOCIETY.

Mrs. Mary Martin Hoffman Weds Charles Gouverneur Weir.

The announcement circulated among the clubs and fashionable resorts of the marriage yesterday afternoon of Mrs. Mary Martin Hoffman to Charles Gouverneur Weir at St. Thomas's Church by the Rev. John Husks created a marked sensation. Mrs. Hoffman is extremely well-known in Newport and New York society. She is the eldest daughter of John W. Ellis, the Cincinnati millionaire, who for many years has resided in New York and Newport.

Until the last two years Mrs. Hoffman, since she became a widow some ten or twelve years ago, has presided over her father's beautiful villa, Stone Acre, on Bellevue Avenue, at Newport. Owing to family disagreements she has not been seen much at Newport during the last two Summers. She is the mother of Miss Emily Hoffman, who was the season's belle three years ago, and who has gained a reputation for her dancing. She is known as the society Carmencita. Miss Hoffman is now a guest on Mr. Eugene Higgins's yacht, the Varuna, in the Mediterranean.

It is understood that Mr. Weir, who is a member of the University Club and lives at Garrisons, N. Y., is several years her junior. Mrs. Hoffman's son, John Ellis Hoffman, married Mrs. Sibyl W. Sherman, a daughter of Mr. William Watts Sherman by his first wife.

SUFFERINGS OF PORTO RICANS.

387 Islanders, Going to Hawaii, Arrive at New Orleans Weak, Sick, and Starving.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 2.—Three hundred and eighty-seven thinly clad, starved out Porto Ricans from the interior of the island arrived on the steamer Arkadia from Ponce to-day. They are en route to Hawaii under contract to work on the sugar plantations. It is understood that 10,000 more of them are to be brought here on the same mission.

No more pitiful sight could be imagined than these poor immigrants as they stood on the deck awaiting inspection at quarantine. All are suffering from anaemia due to lack of food, and men were too weak to stand up when the quarantine officers came. The Winter blasts made life a greater burden than starvation at home had done. None had more than the thinnest of cotton garments on their backs, and these were no protection against the cold. There were three deaths on the voyage, all due to anaemia.

TO RAISE COTTON IN AFRICA.

Booker T. Washington Hints at Great Results If the Work Succeeds.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 2.—Booker T. Washington, Principal of the Tuskegee (Ala.) Normal and Industrial Institute, said this afternoon that he expected the party of professors from his institution sent to West Africa to conduct experiments in cotton raising to arrive at their destination to-day, having sailed from Hamburg recently. The party is headed by Prof. Falloway of the institute and three other instructors. They are equipped with seed, plows, and a complete glenery, in fact everything connected with the growth and marketing of the product.

Prof. Washington stated that the experiments would be conducted under the auspices of the German Government, which is anxious to secure a cotton growing belt in competition with the English cotton sections in India and Egypt. He would not talk further upon the subject, except to state that the German Empire would make a thorough test and that great things would ensue if the experiments proved successful.

GIRL WEDGED IN A CISTERN.

Firemen Called to Rescue Would-Be Suicide Find Her Unconscious.

Special to The New York Times.

MUNCIE, Ind., Jan. 2.—Alice Rumlo, a pretty German girl, attempted suicide today by throwing herself into a deep cistern in which there was fifteen feet of water. The act was the result of being jilted by her sweetheart. The girl, instead of sinking to the bottom, became wedged between the cistern wall and water pipe.

She was found unconscious in this position accidentally. The water enveloped her to her chin. The narrowness of the cistern prevented her being rescued, and recourse was had to the fire department. By means of a rope and ladder a fireman was lowered and made her fast. Then she was hauled to the top. Her recovery is doubtful. It is not known how long she was in the icy waters.

EDWARD EASTWOOD DEAD.

Old Watchman Never Recovered from Maltreatment by Robbers.

Special to The New York Times.

MAMARONECK, Jan. 2.—Edward Eastwood, sixty-five years old, who for more than twenty years was night watchman at the New Haven Railroad station here, died to-day. His death, it is said, was hastened by exposure and worriment which he underwent about a year ago, when he was bound and gagged by a gang of highwaymen, who blew open the safe of the freight house.

The safeblowers tied him fast to a big chair in the cold storage house and left him there from 11 o'clock at night until 6 the next morning. Eastwood took a severe cold, from which he never recovered.

NEW CRUCIBLE STEEL PLANT.

Largest One in This Country May Be Built at Norwalk, Ohio.

Special to The New York Times.

NORWALK, Ohio, Jan. 2.—For several weeks Pittsburg, Chicago, and Ohio coal and iron men of wealth have been obtaining options on land in and near this city through two prominent business men of Norwalk. Nearly 2,000 acres have been secured already north of the town and along the Wheeling and Lake Erie Railway.

To-day the announcement is made by authority of the Pittsburg men, who have been in the city for a day or two, that a crucible steel plant larger than any now in operation in the United States is likely to be built at this place.

The Wheeling and Lake Erie Railway is interested in the deal. It has large dockage interests at Huron, twelve miles north of here, with ample facilities for handling coal and ore, and has hundreds of acres of valuable coal lands.

Big Safe Company Reorganized.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMILTON, Ohio, Jan. 2.—The reorganization of the Herring-Hall-Marvin Safe Company was completed here to-day by the filing of deeds whereby the receivers, George R. Gray and Wright D. Pownall of New York, who have had charge of the property for three years, have transferred it back to the reorganized company. The consideration was $100,000, being nominal, as no appraisement was required. The new company expects to make the enterprise successful. E. T. Pullen will be General Manager.

PHILBIN WILL CO-OPERATE

Assigns Assistant Schurman to the Reform Committees.

James D. McClelland Is Removed and John J. Delany Is Appointed in His Place.

District Attorney Philbin yesterday announced his purpose of personally co-operating with the Committee of Five and the Committee of Fifteen. He assigned Assistant District Attorney George W. Schurman, recently appointed, to confer with the representatives of the two committees and to investigate forthwith any evidence either might have ready to submit. Mr. Schurman will hold these conferences at his office in the Criminal Courts Building, and Mr. Philbin announced that he would also personally take part in them. The date for the first meeting has not yet been fixed.

The assignment of an Assistant District Attorney to these committees is said to have resulted from a conference held by the District Attorney, Lewis Nixon, and Charles Stewart Smith last week.

The District Attorney said that neither committee had as yet submitted any evidence to him. This probably will be done at the first conference held. If deemed strong enough, any evidence submitted will immediately be submitted to the Grand Jury, and if indictments are returned they will not be allowed to rest undisturbed in the pigeonholes of the public prosecutor's desk.

Mr. Philbin completed his full staff of eight statutory assistants yesterday by requesting the resignation of James D. McClelland, appointing John J. Delany to the vacancy, and retaining in their present positions James J. Walsh and Stephen S. Blake. The appointment of Francis P. Garvan as Deputy Assistant was also announced.

The full assistants, as the staff is now made up, and who will probably hold office during Mr. Philbin's incumbency, are Messrs. Le Barbier, First Assistant; Osborne, Townsend, Blake, and Walsh, retained, and George W. Schurman, Franklin Pierce, and John J. Delany, appointed. Mr. Philbin has removed but three of the full assistants—Unger, McIntyre, and McClelland. Thomas F. Byrne, placed in charge of the Indictment Bureau, was not made a full assistant, but his annual compensation of $4,000 will be increased, in view of his added duties. John J. Delany, the new assistant, is a Democrat, a member of the Democratic Club, and also of the Catholic Club. He is thirty-nine years old, and at present has a law office at 27 William Street. In 1899 he was appointed Assistant Corporation Counsel, under the late William H. Clark. This position he held for six years. During this time he was engaged in the preparation of appeal cases in the first part of his term, and later defended many actions against the city. He was graduated from St. Francis Xavier's and the Columbia Law School.

Deputy Assistant Francis P. Garvan is a clerk in the office of Col. E. C. James, at 56 Pine Street. He is about twenty-five years old and a graduate of Yale. For several years he has been in charge of the preparation of cases for trial, and, according to Mr. Philbin, is a young man of much ability.

Stephen S. Blake, retained, was for four terms Judge of the City Court of Bridgeport, Conn. He was appointed an Assistant District Attorney by Col. Gardiner.

James J. Walsh, retained, was also appointed by Col. Gordiner in 1898. Previous to that time he was associated in the practice of law with Surrogate Fitzgerald. He was for two years a School Inspector, resigning when elected to Congress in 1884.

District Attorney Philbin also made the assignments of his staff to the different courts yesterday. These assignments, he said, did not indicate that all of the deputies thus designated would be retained. The assignments are as follows:

Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court—Le Barbier and Schwartzkopf; General Sessions, Part I.—Townsend and Gordon; Part II.—Walsh, Hermann, and Skidmore; Part III.—McClelland (afterward removed) and O'Connor; Part IV.—Blake, Cowan, and Blumenthal; Special Sessions—Gray; Preparation of Cases for Trial—Osborne and Collins; Indictment Bureau—Byrne and Gans; Cases on Appeal—Le Barbier and Keith; Magistrates' Courts—James D. Carr; Habeas Corpus and Mandamus Proceedings—Sullivan; Forfeited Recognizances—Edwards.

Assistant District Attorney Franklin Pierce was assigned to the prosecution of the Bellevue nurses, Marshall, Dean, and Davis.

THE COMMITTEE OF FIFTEEN.

After the Committee of Fifteen held its meeting in the Charities Building yesterday afternoon, Charles Stewart Smith, who acted as Chairman in the absence of Mr Baldwin, said that there would be no union of this committee with the one appointed by Tammany Hall.

"We wish them every success," he added, "but our own work will be independent. The new District Attorney has promised to help us all he can, and up to date we have many names of gambling houses and other disorderly resorts. Before taking definite action for their suppression or for the punishment of those interested in maintaining them, we shall make still further investigations."

When Mr. Smith was asked about what action the committee would take regarding such places as had already been closed, but concerning which evidence is at hand, he said that if places were closed, he and his associates would see to it that they were not reopened. He added that he thought it easier to get evidence against the people who ran a gambling house after the house had been closed than while it was open.

On account of the illness of Charities Commissioner Keller, there will be no meeting of the Tammany Committee until next Monday. It was learned that the Tammany committee intends to present to the Grand Jury various charges against police officials, based on certain evidence that its agents have collected. Who these charges will affect has not been announced. Around Police Headquarters gossip, usually so plentiful, was scarce yesterday.

"Nothing to say," was the word that was sent out by Chief Devery whenever anybody called to see if he had resigned his place or if he was about to be forcibly ejected therefrom.

The Commissioners held no meeting at all, though they had been scheduled for one late in the afternoon. President York was asked about his opinion as to the part of Gov. Odell's message relating to a single-headed police department in the city. He replied that his "say" on that subject had been said so often that he was tired of reading it; that he had nothing to add to it.

No action on the names of Roundsmen eligible for Sergeantcies was taken by the board. Originally there were eighty-two names on the list, but on Monday afternoon thirty more were added. The sending for the extra list, which was done after President York left Headquarters on that afternoon, gave rise to the rumor that there was a "scrap" going on inside the board, but this was proved untrue. It seems that Commissioner Sexton, after the President had gone, suggested to Commissioners Hess and Abell that they should have the extra list of thirty. Mr. Sexton would not say yesterday why he wanted the extra list, but he disclaimed emphatically any effort on his part to act against the President.

There was much talk about who would be made the head of the force in event of the passage of a bill as suggested by the Governor. Mr. York was named by many, as heretofore, but it all amounted to nothing more or less than "Headquarters gossip."

Babies have troubles enough that can't be helped; don't let 'em run down and get thin. A thin baby is never healthy. Loss of fat is not a mere accident, something to be indifferent to.

Give 'em Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil; it's the best baby-food in the world, whenever the better one isn't enough.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.

The officers nominated were: Senator Mahlon Pitney of Morris County for President, Walter E. Edge of Atlantic County for Secretary, by a vote of 9 to 7 over George Frey of Camden; J. Fischer of Ocean County, Assistant General Clerk; Robert Bustard of Passaic, Calendar Clerk; John T. Garwood of Salem County, Sergeant at Arms; Arthur Bedell of Camden County, Assistant Sergeant at Arms; Jesse R. The voting will begin Jan. 15, when the two houses will vote separately. The candidate receiving 127 votes on joint ballot will be declared elected.

REPUBLICAN CLUB DINNER.

Five ex-Presidents of the Organization the Guests—Senator Depew Ill.

The Republican Club gave a dinner last night to the ex-Presidents of the organization, of which five were present. Senator Depew, the present President, is ill at his home with a cold. Louis Stern presided at the dinner. Speeches were made by James W. Hawes, James P. Foster, Edmund Wetmore, Arthur L. Merriam, Job E. Hedges, Charles F. Homer, Frank Brainard, and Cephas Brainerd.

In his remarks Mr. Wetmore pointed out that the only possibility of the defeat of Tammany Hall next Fall was the amalgamation of all forces opposed to Tammany, earnestly seconded by the Republican organization.

Gen. Henry C. Tremaine and ex-Judge William K. Olcott, rival aspirants for the Presidency, were among the guests.

COL. ROOSEVELT IS A MASON.

Vice President-Elect Takes His First Degree at Oyster Bay.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., Jan. 2.—The rooms of the Matinecock Lodge, F. and A. M., located in the Bank Building, on Main Street, were crowded to-night to witness the first degree conferred upon Theodore Roosevelt, the Vice President-elect of the United States. Every lodge in this Masonic district was represented, and many brethern were unable to witness the ceremonies on account of the size of the room. Grand Secretary Ehlers was present. The ceremonies were of the usual order, and most of the visitors left on the 10 o'clock train.

It was not intended to make a function of this degree, but when the third is conferred, many of the most prominent Masons in the State will be present, and a banquet given in the public hall.

SOIL PIPE TRUST COMPLETE.

Combination of Southern Concerns Became Effective Yesterday.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 2.—It is understood that the soil pipe combine went into effect to-day. By the terms of the agreement it is understood that the independent soil pipe factories and the Central Foundry Company, which absorbed most of the soil pipe concerns in the country last Fall, will act in concert to maintain prices, and that they will all operate on the allotment plan. This plan means that the contracts received will be given to the pipe concern which can manufacture at the least cost to the combine, and that each concern shall share in the profit of the manufacture.

The Southern pipe concerns said to be in the combine are the Chattanooga Pipe and Foundry Company, Chattanooga; Nelson Manufacturing Company, and Bessmer Pipe Company, Bessemer, Ala., and Hercules Foundry Company, Anniston, Ala.

Denials of participation in the combine have been made by some of these concerns, but it is well understood that there is a general agreement. The only concern in the South not in the combine so far, it is generally understood, is the Birmingham Pipe and Casting Company, at Birmingham.

RIGHT TO REBIND BOOKS.

No Invasion of Copyright to Trim and Restore Them, Court Says.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—To trim old books, to cut off the edges of the leaves, and to rebind them is held by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals to be no invasion of the rights of a person holding the copyright for the books. The ruling was announced by Judges Woods, Jenkins, and Grosscup in reversing an order of the lower court, which had granted a restraining order against G. B. Doan and Hart Hanson, on motion of the American Book Company. The court, however, puts a proviso upon this ruling by a statement that the book so rebound, recovered, and offered for sale should have prominently displayed and stamped upon its cover notice that the book was a second-hand copy.

The American Book Company had complained that the defendants were selling old school books on which they, the complainants, had the copyright. The defendants had acquired hundreds of thousands of copies of the books in various stages of preservation. The court says:

"We think that, so far as respects the copyright laws of the United States, no legal right of the appellee was invaded by so doing. What was done was merely the restoration of the books to their original condition when sold by the appellee, or so nearly so as could be done."

RUBBER TRUST AND ITS RIVALS.

Report Says Progress Has Been Made in Harmonizing Interests.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—The United States Rubber Company, it is reported, will not make the threatened 25 per cent. cut in prices as proposed. This is due, it is said, to the fact that the Hood Rubber Company has agreed to consider a proposition for the sale of its business to interests friendly to the United States Company. Pending these negotiations, no change in prices will be made.

The report was sent out to-day that considerable progress had been made in harmonizing the various rubber interests, presumably through the meeting held in New York last evening. The Hood Company was not represented, but the authority for stating that negotiations are in progress between it and those who are striving to bring about a combination of all the rubber plants is entirely trustworthy. That the acquisition of this company or, in fact, of all the outside concerns will prevent competition in the business is not thought likely in trade circles. It was remarked to-day that it does not require such a large amount of money to start the business, and if the trust keeps its prices high enough to make a fair profit on its large capitalization, there will be a good many independent plants started within a year.

RUSSIA AND MANCHURIA

Text of Agreement with China for Protection of Fen-Ting.

Russian Political Resident to Have Control—Chinese Troops To Be Disbanded—Virtual Protectorate Created.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—In a dispatch to The Times from Peking, dated Dec. 31, Dr. Morrison gives the text of the Russo-Chinese agreement for the Russian protection of the Manchurian Province of Fen-Ting. Russia, he says, consents that China shall resume the civil government on the following conditions:

First—The Tartar General, Tseng, undertakes to protect and pacify the province and to assist in the construction of the railroad.

Second—He must kindly treat, feed, and lodge Russians engaged in the military occupation and in the protection of the railway.

Third—He must disarm and disband the Chinese soldiery, delivering to the Russians all munitions of war in such arsenals as the Russians have not yet occupied.

Fourth—All forts and defenses in the province not occupied by the Russians and all powder magazines not required by them must be dismantled in the presence of Russian officials.

Fifth—Niu-Chwang and other places now in Russian occupation shall be restored to the Chinese civil administration when Russia is satisfied that the pacification of the province is complete.

Sixth—The Chinese shall maintain law and order by local police under a Tartar General.

Seventh—A Russian political regiment, with general powers of control, shall be stationed at Mukden, to whom the Tartar General, Tseng, must give all information respecting any important measure.

Eighth—In the event of the local police being insufficient for any emergency, Gen. Tseng will notify the Russian Resident and invite Russia to send reinforcements.

Ninth—The Russian text shall be the standard.

"The functions given to the Russian Resident," says Dr. Morrison, "are similar to those of the Russian Resident in Bokhara or those of the British Residents in the native States of India.

"The agreement will necessarily be followed by similar agreements with reference to the other two provinces. Then Manchuria will be de facto a Russian protectorate, Russia by a pre-existing arrangement having already the right to maintain all troops necessary for the protection of the railway."

Commenting upon the information transmitted by Dr. Morrison, The Times says:

"The problem raised is very serious. The agreement is utterly irreconcilable with Russia's professed attitude toward China and the assurances she has volunteered to the powers. In fact, the situation contemplated by the Anglo-German agreement seems definitely to confront us."

The Peking correspondent of The Daily Mail, wiring Jan. 1, says:

"Russia, by conciliation, is trying to secure special advantages, and there is a strong belief that she will receive American support. It is hinted that Russia inspired unfounded charges of barbarity against the German troops, her motive being to sow dissension between Great Britain and Germany."

AMERICA WISHES LENIENCY.

But This Country's Hands Are Tied Regarding China Through Mr. Conger's Blunder.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The situation foreseen by the State Department when it objected to the use of the word "irrevocable" in the China joint note has come to pass. China is seeking a modification of the note, which is directly in line with the American policy, and the word "irrevocable" prevents the powers from acceding to it unless by unanimous consent. The hands of the United States and Great Britain are tied by Minister Conger's blunder.

Both powers will nevertheless do what they can to secure the concessions desired by China. No request has been made by China for a modification of the demands. That would be impossible, in view of the word "irrevocable." The Chinese diplomats have gotten around that by merely inquiring whether the clause providing for the destruction of the forts cannot be construed as meaning their dismantlement. This is not a request for a modification, which could not be entertained, it is merely a question about the construction of one of the clauses. If moderation rules the councils of the powers, a reply will be made in the affirmative.

The United States, handicapped as it is by Mr. Conger's action, will do everything it can to secure such a construction, and it is understood that Great Britain will take similar action. She was obliged to agree to the word "irrevocable" after Mr. Conger had had it reinserted. Her policy is now in harmony with that of the United States, though at one stage of the Chinese difficulty there was considerable divergence.

Very much depends on the degree of earnestness with which Minister Conger carries out the wishes of the State Department. A determined effort on the part of the American and British Ministers might, it is believed, open the eyes of the other powers to the cruelty and absurdity of the demand for the total destruction of the forts. From the earliest steps of the trouble the United States has attempted to preserve the forts, beginning with the time when Admiral Kempff refused to fire upon them. This act was taken on Kempff's own responsibility, but was immediately indorsed by his Government. Great Britain at that time was on the other side.

"See what an inhuman thing this demand is," said an official to-day. "It calls on China to make herself defenseless, not only against her present adversaries, but against any nation whatever, in any part of the world, which may make war upon her in the future. It calls upon her to lay herself open to attack from all quarters. It requires, not only that she shall give us the key of her front and back doors, but that she shall bather both doors down and let anybody enter who has the fancy to do so."

If Minister Conger does not represent the wishes of the United States with sufficient earnestness, it is hoped that Sir Ernest Mason Satow will do so. The ingenuity of the Chinese in making an inquiry instead of a request opens a loophole for escape, but it is realized that the matter rests in the disposition of the other powers to hear reason. If they are obstinate the United States and Great Britain can do nothing.

KLONDIKER LOST AND WON.

Bayonne Man Brings Back Gold, but Leaves His Feet in Alaska.

BAYONNE, N. J., Jan. 2.—John E. Baptie returned here yesterday from a three years' trip through the Klondike in search of a fortune in gold. He comes back minus both of his feet, having lost them through frostbite, but he says he got his fortune all right. Baptie left Bayonne in February, 1898, with a party of prospectors. While traveling up Montana Creek in the Klondike region months afterward, in company with a Haverstraw man, he suffered intensely from cold and exposure, and both of his feet were frostbitten. With the assistance of his companion he was able to make his way to Dawson. The journey occupied ten days.

At times Baptie's companion was able to give him some assistance, but at other times he had to depend entirely upon his own efforts. He says he crawled part of the way on his hands and knees. On arriving at Dawson both his feet were amputated. After the amputation steel plates were fastened to the stumps, and on these Baptie can get along, with the aid of crutches. He brought back with him a large quantity of gold dust, the exact value of which he does not yet know.

He says he has two paying claims in the Klondike, and that he is going back to work them in a short time.

BUYS SALT IN PORTUGAL.

Armour Packing Company Considers Trust Prices Too High.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 2.—Twenty-five thousand tons of common salt purchased in Lisbon, Portugal, have been contracted for by the Armour Packing Company of this city. "We found that prices have gone steadily up on account of the Salt Trust," said the company's purchasing agent to-day, "and so we went outside of this country for our salt." Twenty-five carloads of the shipment are already on the road, and thirty-five additional carloads will follow soon.

THE CORBIN EXECUTORS WIN.

Referee Belford Decides Against Mrs. Hallett Alsop Borrowe.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., Jan. 2.—Ex-Congressman Joseph M. Belford as referee has just filed his report in the suit brought against the estate of Austin Corbin. The referee finds in favor of the executors. The finding, if it be sustained, means that Mrs. Anna W. Corbin Borrowe, wife of Hallett Alsop Borrowe, has failed in her fight against the executors of her father's estate.

When, in June, 1898, the executors, including the widow, filed an accounting placing the value of Mr. Corbin's personal estate at $1,600,000, Mrs. Borrowe filed a bill of objection to the accounting, claiming a long list of irregularities on the part of the executors.

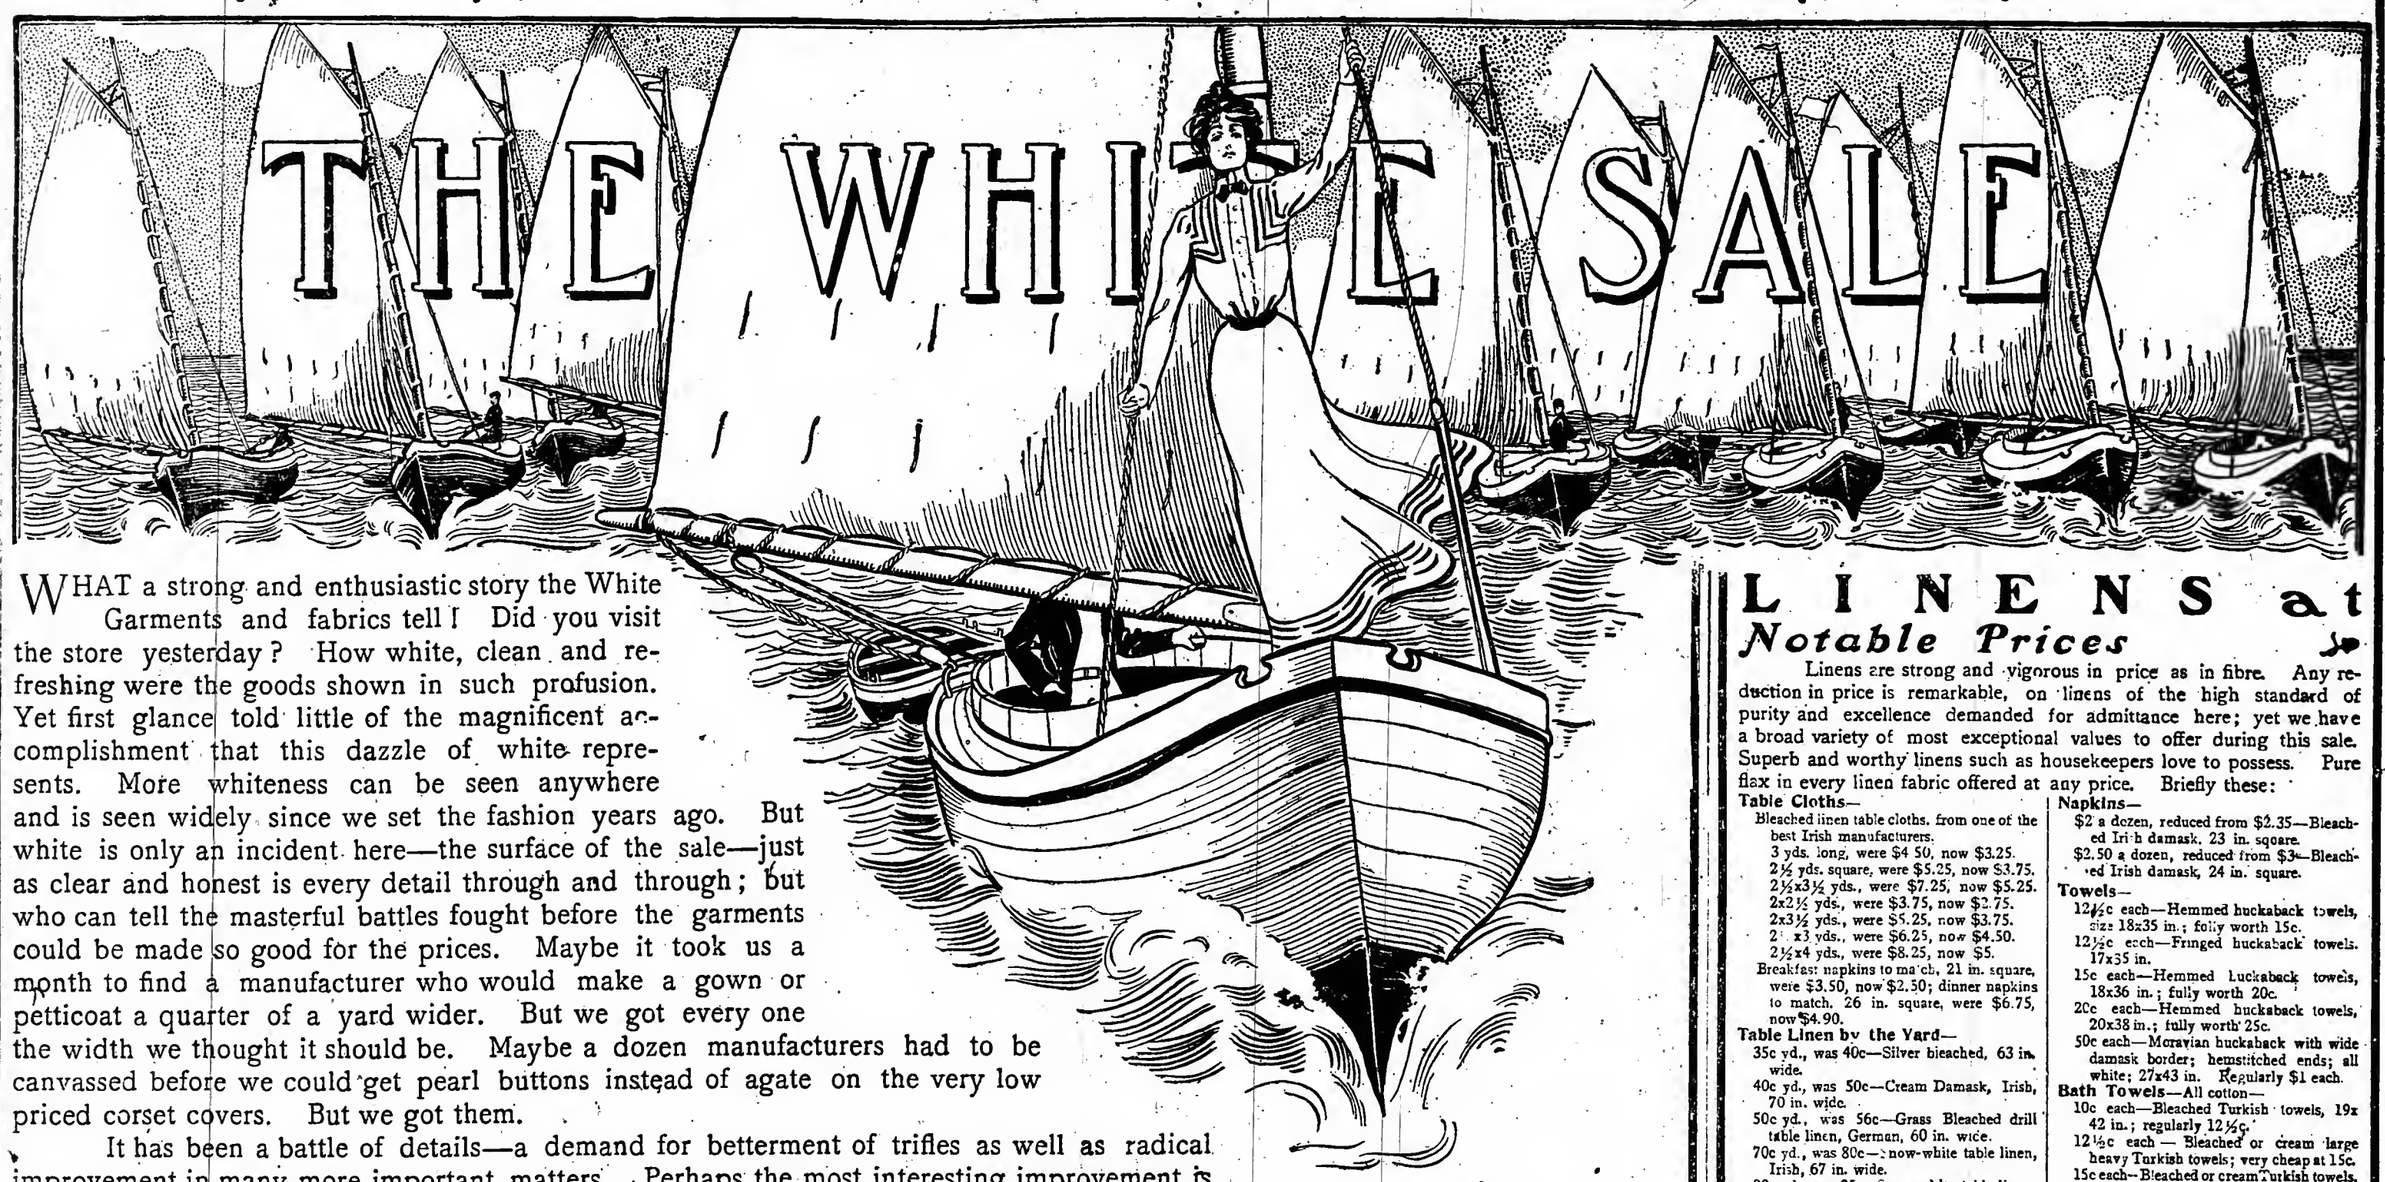
The Wanamaker Store The Wanamaker Store The Wanamaker Store



WHAT a strong and enthusiastic story the White Garments and fabrics tell! Did you visit the store yesterday? How white, clean and refreshing were the goods shown in such profusion. Yet first glance told little of the magnificent accomplishment that this dazzle of white represents. More whiteness can be seen anywhere and is seen widely since we set the fashion years ago. But white is only an incident here—the surface of the sale—just as clear and honest is every detail through and through; but who can tell the masterful battles fought before the garments could be made so good for the prices. Maybe it took us a month to find a manufacturer who would make a gown or petticoat a quarter of a yard wider. But we got every one the width we thought it should be. Maybe a dozen manufacturers had to be canvassed before we could get pearl buttons instead of agate on the very low priced corset covers. But we got them.

It has been a battle of details—a demand for betterment of trifles as well as radical improvement in many more important matters. Perhaps the most interesting improvement is in variety. More kinds of gowns or petticoats at each price, making such an array as is unthought-of and, of course, unattempted by any other store.

This is because we do not plan a bargain sale—don't buy a dollar's worth merely because it's cheap. But we plan a splendid gathering—broad, complete variety of the neatest, most refined, most comfortable under-garments that care and skill can make. Then, after goodness and beauty are assured, we pare down the prices.

That is why this sale has no counterpart, and no real imitator. It stands alone in attracting women who care nothing for a bargain that compels them to sacrifice their taste for refined and carefully-made garments.

Briefly these are chiefest varieties at most popular prices:

Office Supplies

We've been at it for months, and have this year a gathering excelling all previous collections of blank-books, office stationery, typewriter supplies, and everything else that can come under the head of business necessities. And all at low prices, made with especial reference to this sale. Witness a few specimens:

The Looked-for Post-Holiday SALE OF BOOKS

"Hurt Books!" That's the term we've been using for years as applied to all that entered into this clear-up sale. But it's hardly fair to a collection such as this. True, some of them are scuffed or soiled somewhat. But many are without a single fault. Their presence in the company of the really "hurt" books is due only to the fact that they are so reduced in quantities—odd lots.

Among them are books in sets—standard authors—fiction, poetry, history, the sciences, all sorts of desirable books. And the prices are about one-third regular prices. There's splendid choosing to-day, and interesting additions will be made daily.

Various Styles of COUCHES Under-priced

First, concerning a specially attractive, though brief offering of wardrobe couches in a certain very desirable style. They are upholstered in tow and moss, with tufted cotton tops; the springs of best quality; the lids with self-opening attachment; covering of imitation Bagdad. One Hundred of these at $9.75 Each.

Couches will be delivered in about four days from date of order.

Hardly less interesting is this sale of sample couches. They've been handled a bit more than our regular goods and show slight evidences of it—only slight. The blemishes are not enough in themselves alone to warrant reductions like these:

Men's Clothing

Speaking of Prince Alberts. Do you know that we can fit you as well, right out of this splendid stock, as any fine custom tailor? We are constantly making new converts to the ready-to-wear Prince Albert coat. But do you know further the very substantial saving possible through selection from this stock? Take this as an instance:

Coat and vest of imported black Vicuna—soft and luxurious—lined throughout with extra heavy silk; double-breasted vests. You know that good tailors generally want no less than $60—our price is $35.

Other good black Thibet coats and vests, serge lined, at $20; silk lined, at $25.

Men's striped worsted trousers in latest, best patterns, at $5 to $8.

Men's fancy double-breasted vests, at $3.50.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Men's Night Shirts

Here are two sorts, both of which are particularly good values at the price—fifty cents.

One kind is of muslin—fine and heavy enough to be both comfortable and serviceable. Liberally cut and strongly made. Some severely plain, others with fancy trimming. Sizes 14 to 19.

The other are domet flannel night shirts. Cozy and warm, though really only cotton, fleecy on both sides. Cut large enough—not skimped anywhere. Good variety of tasteful colorings and stripes. Sizes 14 to 19.

Half dollar for either sort.

Men's Store, Broadway and Ninth.

Boys' SUITS

A lot of handsome sack suits for boys of 13 to 19 years, are greatly reduced in price to-day. They are of fancy cheviots and neat worsteds—the best sellers of the season. All small lots—a wide variety—but none complete in sizes. Your size is surely in one or another. Men of small stature can also be fitted in this collection. The price shall be $10 each, though the suits are very good $12 to $15 values.

Second floor, Fourth avenue.

Fine LAMPS Mounted on Vases

ARMY BILL IN THE SENATE

Likely to be Given the Right of Way After To-day.

War Department Embarrassed by the Delay—Friends of Subsidy Bill Want to Divide the Time.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The general expectation among Senators is that the first few days of the time of the Senate after reconvening to-morrow will be devoted to consideration of the Army Reorganization bill, but there is some disposition to make an arrangement for a division of time that will permit of the continued presentation of the Ship Subsidy bill during a part of each day.

The delay in the passage of the Army bill has seriously embarrassed the War Department, and threatens to considerably hamper the operations in the Philippines. With every day of delay the difficulties in the way of recruiting the new army and getting it to the Philippines in time for the return of the volunteers are increased.

It is stated that there are not now enough officers for recruiting duty, and that, with the number now in the Philippines, it is impossible to get officers who can perform that work with the dispatch which will be necessary when the new army comes to be raised. The army has now regular officers enough for a force of 29,000, though it is 65,000 strong. Fully 20 per cent. of these are on detached duty. The force in the Philippines is badly under officered, and operations of importance have to be intrusted to officers of low rank.

The War Department estimate that it will take six months to raise the new army made it possible that the exchange of the new force for the old one could be accomplished by June 30, the time set by law for the discharge of the volunteers. It has now become practically certain that it will be necessary to keep some at least of the present Philippine army in the islands until at least the time set for their mustering out. The only way of avoiding this would be to raise the new army in less than the time estimated as necessary by the department, and, as the facilities for recruiting have not improved, that is impossible.

When the Committee on Order of Business representing the Republican side of the Senate made the Subsidy bill the regular order of business at the beginning of the present session there was an understanding that when the Army bill should be presented for consideration the other measure should be laid aside temporarily if considered necessary, in order to secure the prompt passage of the Army bill. There is apparently a disposition on the part of some Senators partially to disregard this agreement, and the friends of the Subsidy bill, most of whom are also supporters of the Army bill, are trying to secure an understanding for confinement of the discussion of the Army bill to the morning hour of the Senate's daily proceedings, giving the time each day after 2 o'clock to the Subsidy bill.

A meeting of the Committee on Military Affairs has been called for to-morrow, when the matter of procedure probably will be discussed and a decision reached as to whether the committee shall ask for all the time of the Senate until its bill is disposed of or for only part of it. Some members of the committee are disposed to divide time with the Subsidy bill for the present, but all Senators, regardless of politics, consider the Army bill of pressing importance. Hence it is probable that some arrangement will be reached guarding against any protracted delay on the military measure. While comparatively few of the opposition Senators will vote for that bill, none of them appears willing to make any objection to its early consideration.

There has been a general surmise that Senator Cockrell would offer a substitute for the Army bill, but he stated to-day that he had no such intention, at the same time expressing his conviction that the bill should be pressed to early disposition because of the condition in the Philippines. Mr. Cockrell expressed the further opinion that the Army bill would not be debated at great length unless there should be at the same time an attempt to carry the Subsidy bill along with it. In that event he thought it might be difficult to get the Army bill through promptly. The opposition Senators generally will content themselves with an explanation of their views upon the Army bill and will make no opposition to its becoming a law.

There are still several speeches to be made upon the Subsidy bill, but apparently none of the promised speeches have been prepared, so that Senator Hawley may be able to go on uninterruptedly for some time with the Army bill regardless of any arrangement concerning the Subsidy bill.

Urges Passage of the Shipping Bill.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2.—Theodore C. Search, President of the National Association of Manufacturers, has sent a circular to the members of the organization urging a united effort to help pass the Ship Subsidy bill, now pending in the United States Senate.

REAPPORTIONMENT IN THE HOUSE.

Hopkins Measure May Be Passed This Week—River and Harbor Bill.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The House probably will dispose of the Reapportionment bill this week, although Chairman Burton of the River and Harbor Committee is inclined to contest the right of way with the Census Committee. The Reapportionment bill, carrying out as it does a Constitutional requirement, is a matter of higher privilege than an appropriation bill, and if Chairman Hopkins insists, it probably will be given priority. Mr. Hopkins, however, may yield if he finds that any large proportion of the members will not return from their holiday vacation in time to vote upon the measure this week.

A very determined fight will be made against this bill by members from States which lose Representatives under it, and Mr. Hopkins desires a full House when the vote is taken. He is confident that his measure will carry with a full attendance. In any event, neither Mr. Hopkins nor Mr. Burton desires to proceed to-morrow, so that the session probably will be brief and unimportant. On Friday either the River and Harbor or the Reapportionment bill will be taken up. If it should be the latter, the expectation is that its consideration will be completed on Saturday. If the former, the length of time to be consumed is problematical.

GREENWICH ASSESSMENTS.

Valuations on the Property of Many Well-Known Persons Raised Considerably.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., Jan. 2.—The Assessors to-day filed the grand list of taxable property of the town with Town Clerk James R. Meade, and anxious property owners have been perusing it to discover how much they have been assessed, whether the valuation of their property has been increased, and whether their neighbors have been let off more easily than themselves.

Although the totals will not be figured up until the three men who constitute the Board of Relief have worked on them, the Assessors are satisfied that they have raised the grand list from $7,356,447.12 last year to over $8,000,000 for the coming year. The Board of Relief can undo the work of the five Assessors if it chooses. It is, however, doubtful if many deductions will be made.

The following shows how the work of the Assessors has affected some of the most prominent of the taxpayers:

H. O. Havemeyer last year paid taxes on six houses valued at $51,400, and 101 acres of land at $16,100. This year he has been assessed on five houses at $66,000 and 102 acres at $20,000.

E. C. Benedict's list in 1899 showed that he owned houses valued at $100,000, had 66 acres of land worth $37,500, thirteen horses, averaging $100 each, two cows, worth $20 each; carriages worth $1,500; timepieces worth $200; pianos worth $100; furniture and books worth $250, bank stock, $6...0, and $7,000 invested in vessels and commerce. This year's list shows him to be worth $35,000 more, his houses having increased $25,000; his land $7,000, his pianos $400, his furniture $500, and his yacht Oneida $6,000.

Joseph Milbank's new list shows one house at $46,000; an increase of $35,000; ten acres of land at $20,000, the same value as last year, and a new item "all other taxable property," at $25,000.

J. Kennedy Tod has been credited with having three houses valued at $45,000; an increase of 50 per cent., and his 111 acres are taxed at $40,000 instead of $26,400.

George L. Tyson, commodore of the Riverside Yacht Club, has his assessment for 8 houses raised from $42,500 to $50,000, and the value of his 58 acres is raised from $6,000 to $20,000.

A. B. Hilton has had his assessment raised $10,000, to $40,000.

William Rockefeller's assessment is increased only $11,050. His six houses are taxed at $16,900 and his 260 acres at $58,700, an increase of $5,500 on the houses and $7,550 on the land.

Robert Stewart has also escaped lightly, the valuation on his 2 houses and 12 acres being raised to $28,500, an increase of $4,200.

John H. Courlic will pay on three houses at $43,000 instead of $34,000, and his 80 acres have been raised $8,000, to $28,000.

Mrs. A. A. Anderson, daughter of the late Jeremiah Milbank, has the value of her five houses raised from $37,400, to $79,000. Altogether her assessment is increased $18,850.

A. A. Marks, Chairman of the Town Investigating Committee, has the value of his 2 houses increased $6,000, to $20,000, and his 40 acres from $6,729, to $10,800.

Robert M. Bruce, who asked the Assessors to increased his assessment 50 per cent., but who did not put in a list, has his assignment raised from $65,340, to $94,275.

Other wealthy New Yorkers who have had valuations raised are E. W. Bullinger, to $55,000; C. Lowther to $64,800; Alfred Peats, to $45,000; W. A. Copp, to $35,000; J. P. Laflin, to $28,100; A. Foster Higgins, to $35,030; James McCutcheon, to $34,000; W. R. H. Martin, to $74,700; L. V. Harkness, to $56,000; Charles T. Wills, to $47,000, and W. H. S. Wood, to $35,000.

CUBA'S CONSTITUTION.

Convention Is Considering Two Promulgations—One Makes Concessions to the United States.

HAVANA, Jan. 2.—The Cuban Constitutional Convention is consedering two promulgations of the future relations between Cuba and the United States. One of these affirms, in the first place, an acceptance of the Monroe doctrine and the establishment of friendly relations with all nations, together with a resolution to proceed in all cases in complete accord with the United States.

In the second place it proposes to put at the disposal of the United States a portion of the shore of any bay on the north coast and of two bays on the south coast for naval stations, together with concessions sufficient for the purpose of defense and sanitation. In the third place, it declares that Cuba will place herself on a war footing to help the United States in case such assistance should be needed, while a fourth proviso is an amplification of the first, second, and third.

The other promulgation contemplates

First—That the convention is vested with authority only to convene.

Second—Not having been granted legislative functions, the convention cannot arrange the basis of future relations.

Third—Nevertheless, should Washington desire such a discussion, the convention is willing to discuss and agree upon an arrangement of mutual relations.

Fourth—The aspirations of the convention are merely to consolidate the country for reconstruction. Its energies are directed toward supporting the avowed policy of the United States, to which Cuba is bound by indestructible ties of gratitude, said policy being based upon the unequivocal preservation of liberty and independence throughout the American Continent.

The first promulgation embodies the desires of delegates friendly to the United States. The latter is a counter check to the extremists. It is considered that the first is likely to carry.

MRS. RATHBUN ARRESTED.

New Haven Coroner's Report Says Her Husband Was Killed by Poison Intended for J. F. Hart.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 2.—The report of the Coroner in regard to the Rathbun poisoning mystery, which has been absorbing public attention for the last week, was made public to-day. It finds that the death of William Rathbun was caused by poison put into the coffee of a boarder, John F. Hart, by Marta Ann Rathbun, wife of the dead man.

The intention of Mrs. Rathbun, according to the Coroner's finding, was to secure the death of Hart. Jealousy, because Hart, who previously had been very attentive to her, was neglecting her and devoting himself to another woman, is ascribed in the Coroner's report as the motive for Mrs. Rathbun's alleged act. The poison used was Rough-on-Rats, and it is said to have been put into the dinner pail of John F. Hart. William Rathbun, who ordinarily drank tea, was induced to take a drink of the coffee after Hart had declared that it had a peculiar taste and burned his stomach. Both men were afterward taken sick, but Hart recovered.

Mrs. Rathbun was arrested at noon on a warrant charging her with murder. She will have a preliminary hearing in the City Court to-morrow.

BOMB IN A CHICAGO TUNNEL.

Police Think Discharged Street Car Employe Was Bent on Mischief.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—On information from a source which he declines to make public, Detective Sergeant McLaughlin located a gas pipe bomb in one of the niches of the La Salle Street Tunnel shortly before midnight. The bomb was taken by the policeman to the Central Station, and thence carried to the lake front and exploded.

Detective McLaughlin said he received a hint to the effect that an effort would be made to blow up the tunnel used for the passage of the North Side cable cars. He hastened to the scene and found a piece of three-inch gas pipe about fifteen inches long in one of the small arched openings in the dividing wall of the tunnel. A half-burned fuse protruded from one end. When touched off the bomb is said by the policeman to have exploded with a loud report.

Earlier in the night one of the sweepers employed in the tunnel saw a man about twenty-five years old and shabbily dressed loitering in the tunnel. He was asked what he was doing there, and replied, "Nothing." The stranger left the tunnel hurriedly. The police suspect the bomb was placed there by a discharged employe of the company.

BRIEFS IN THE PORTO RICAN CASES FILED

Counsel Argue Against the Collection of Duties.

Maintain in the Federal Supreme Court that the President Has Exceeded His Powers.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—The first briefs to be filed in the cases involving the relation of the United States to their insular possessions, which are to be argued in the United States Supreme Court next week, were submitted to-day. There are eight of the cases, and briefs were filed in two of them, the cases of Carlos Armstrong and of Samuel B. Downes. In both cases the briefs represent the parties opposing the contentions of the Government.

The Armstrong case comes to the Supreme Court from the Court of Claims. Armstrong is a British subject doing business in Ponce, Porto Rico, and he sues to recover tariff duties collected on goods imported into Porto Rico from New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore. The Court of Claims decided against him, and he appeals from that decision. The brief in this case was filed by John C. Chaney on behalf of Mr. Armstrong.

The plea is made in the brief that the collection of duties was, in the circumstances, a violation of the Constitution of the United States, as by the terms of the Paris Treaty the island of Porto Rico became a portion of the United States. The brief lays down the following propositions as the basis of the appellant's contentions:

"The Constitution of the United States reaches over every portion of the National domain, whether in the form of States, Territories, or districts, because this Constitution provides for Territories as well as States. The cession made by Spain in the Treaty of Paris produced an absolute change of title and sovereignty in Porto Rico.

"The President of the United States is an executive officer only. He has no right to exercise legislative functions. The imposition by executive orders of customs duties on commerce between the Island of Porto Rico and other parts of the United States after the treaty of peace and the exchange of ratifications is unauthorized and void, and the collection of such duties is without warrant of law.

"A Government without limitations was never intended by the founders of the Nation. They sought to establish, and did establish, a Constitutional republic which furnished a written guarantee of protection to all its inhabitants. The idea that in one portion of the country the executive and legislative authority is subject to restrictions and limitations and that in another portion it is without any restriction or limitation—that in one part a republican Government exists and in another part an unlimited despotism—is repugnant to the theory upon which the Government was founded. Every inhabitant is entitled to the protection afforded by the Bill of Rights."

A large part of the brief is devoted to the refutation of the doctrine laid down by the Attorney General in the Goetze case, recently argued by him in the Supreme Court, to the effect that the Government of the United States should have an unlimited hand in the control of territory outside of the States. Replying to this declaration, Mr. Chaney says:

"Mr. McKinley is the President of the United States—the President of its territory and its people. He is not the President of any other territory or people, and he is the despot of no people and no territory. He was never elected nor commissioned the despot of anybody or anything.

"The Congress is the Congress of the United States—the Congress of the territory and people of the United States. It is not the Congress of any other territory or people. It is omnipotent nowhere on the face of the earth. It was created by the people of the United States under a Constitution specifically pointing out its powers and duties. It exists by virtue of that Constitution, as does also the Presidential office. It is omnipotent nowhere. The only omnipotent thing this side of heaven is the Constitution formulated by the fathers out of times which proved the necessity of providing against despotism in the Presidential office and against the omnipotence of men representing the people of the United States.

"One would think, to hear the arguments advanced by the Government, that there are no restrictions or limitations of any sort upon Congress, or the President, so far as the Territories are concerned. They may give to Alaska an absolute monarchy; they may give to the Hawaiian Islands a republic, or they may give to Porto Rico such a government as Weyler would provide. They may give to the Philippines a form of government after the plan of Turkey and China. They may establish a republic in one part and a monarchy in another; they may deny to the unfortunate inhabitants of these islands all the recognized rights and privileges which characterize the codes of civilized nations. In short, they may restore all the relics of barbarism, and there is no power on earth to stop or control them.

"It is no answer to this to say that the Congress is too enlightened, and the President too merciful to commit such acts of tyranny and oppression. That does not change the question. We contend that no such right exists; that Congress in its Government of the Territories is itself subject to Constitutional limitations, and that the people of these Territories or colonies are protected by these limitations, and that they may themselves appeal to that instrument for protection."

The brief in the Downes case was filed by F. R. Coudert, Jr. In this case exception is taken to the imposition of duties on goods imported into the United States from Porto Rico. In his brief Mr. Coudert, quoting the decision of the Supreme Court in the Cherokee Nation case, asks, "If the Paris Treaty did not make Porto Rico a part of the United States, how could the Congress of the United States be vested with the right to legislate for it and determine the 'civil rights and political status of its native inhabitants'?" Replying to his own question, Mr. Coudert says:

"The Congress of the United States is not invested by the Constitution, and cannot therefore be invested by treaty, with the power to legislate for a foreign country.

Mr. Coudert also suggests the possibility of an amendment to the Constitution, saying: "Nor need there be any concern with reference to the question of expediency. If the people of the United States deem it expedient that the additional powers exercised by their temporary agents should be approved and should be continued to their successors, the people can so ordain. The Constitution has provided an easy method for their so ordaining. It has not established the Supreme Court for that purpose. A Constitutional amendment, if demanded by the people, can be presented in Congress and ratified by the Legislatures in less time than it will take this Court to unravel and determine the momentous questions involved in this case.

"If a revolution in our method of government and in the principles for which this Government stands is to be made, it should be made by the power which is at the base of all government—the people—for whose benefit the Government is made. It certainly should not be done by a court intended to be a conservator of all our institutions, and not the voice of the people, to change the form and character of those institutions."

Suez Canal Traffic in 1899.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2.—There was a substantial increase in the traffic through the Suez Canal in 1899, as compared with the previous year, according to statistics furnished the Department of State by United States Consul Hossfeld at Trieste, Austria. A total of 3,503 vessels passed through the canal in 1898, and in 1899 the number was increased to 3,607, representing an increase of 104 vessels and a gain of 657,017 tons. The average time consumed in passing through the canal in 1899 was eighteen hours and thirty-eight minutes, about half an hour longer than was necessary during the previous year. It is worthy of note that only 327 steamers which went through in 1899 were making their first passage of the canal.

The allegation is that he has failed to maintain proper discipline among the staff of attendants.

BILL FOR PIPE GALLERIES

Merchants' Association Will Send Measure to the Legislature.

Will Be Built Simultaneously with the Rapid Transit Tunnel—Precautions Against Explosion—City Will Have Control.

Steps were taken yesterday by the Merchants' Association, through President King, to have a bill drawn providing for construction of pipe galleries along the line of the Rapid Transit Railway. William R. Corwine of the association will visit the Rapid Transit Commissioners and some of the city officials to-day to arrange for a bill to be introduced early in the session of the Legislature. Mr. Corwine said the association understands the importance of having the galleries built simultaneously with the tunnel.

When, a few weeks ago, the Rapid Transit Commissioners decided to abandon the pipe galleries in Elm Street, after work amounting to between $50,000 and $100,000 had been done, it was with the object of having just such a bill prepared as is now proposed. This will give the city entire control and relieve the contractor of any financial hardship. Controller Coler, who has always favored the construction of galleries to run the entire route, said yesterday he sees no bar to this plan being carried out, and the other Commissioners and the Merchants' Association favor it. If the plan is carried out it will be directly in line with the plan of municipal ownership for other public utilities.

One objection on the part of Engineers Birdsall and Loomis to the former plan as to Elm Street was that the allotted space would not be large enough for the pipes that would eventually be laid. The new bill will obviously take this matter into consideration, together with the idea of absolute city control. Whatever the engineers do in regard to space allotment, electrical conduits will under no circumstances form a part of the pipe gallery plant. To prevent danger from explosion electrical conduits will be laid between the roofs of the galleries and the street surface.

STEEL WORK IN THE TUNNEL.

Installed in Elm Street, Between Prince and Houston—Bonds Delivered.

The first steel work in the Elm Street portion of the rapid transit tunnel was installed yesterday between Prince and Houston Streets. Steel work in the block north will be begun next week. Superintendent Herrick of the Degnon-McLean Company, which has the contract for the section, said yesterday that by the middle of February one block at least will be finished so far as the steel work is concerned.

Messrs. August Belmont & Co. delivered yesterday to Controller Coler railroad bonds of the value of $1,000,000, in compliance with the terms of the supplemental agreement with Mr. McDonald, the contractor, dated Feb. 21, 1900, which called for this additional security to be deposited at the beginning of the year 1901. These bonds are to be retained by the city for the same general purposes as are covered in the five-million-dollar bond for the construction, and so long as there is no penalty incurred under this bond the Rapid Transit Subway Construction Company is entitled to receive the interest which comes due from time to time upon these securities.

Two Hudson (N. Y.) Women Drowned.

HUDSON, N. Y., Jan. 2.—While Mrs. Herbert Shaw and Mrs. Jonas Miller, daughters of William Browne of this city, accompanied by Miss Amelia Spencer, were returning from a visit to Athens to-day across the ice in a sleigh drawn by Harry Hermance of Hudson and Michael Keyes of Troy the ice gave way, and precipitated all five into the water. The men succeeded in getting on firm ice and pulling Mrs. Miller out of the water, but the other two women were drawn under the ice by the swift current. Men are grappling for the bodies, but there is little chance for their recovery until Spring, as the water at this part of the river is very deep.

WANTS TO STAY IN CONVENT.

Henrietta Cunningham, Once a Wayward Girl, May Become a Nun.

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 2.—There was a peculiar case brought to light to-day before Vice Chancellor Stevens. In it a mother seeks to recover her daughter, who is a voluntary inmate of the House of the Good Shepherd in this city. The girl refuses to leave unless the Rev. Hugh P. Fleming, pastor of St. John's Church, Orange, is made her guardian. She refuses to return to her mother and father.

In response to a question by the Vice Chancellor, Mr. Kearns, attorney for the House of the Good Shepherd, explained the case by saying that the girl was arrested for disorderly conduct in Orange a year ago. The Police Justice gave her the option of going to jail or to the House of the Good Shepherd. She elected to enter the latter place, and did so without formal commitment. Since being in the home the girl, Mr. Kearns said, had been confirmed, and desired to remain in the institution and to lead a Christian life. Her parents, it was asserted, were not fit custodians of the girl.

H. H. Snedeker, counsel for the mother, admitted the father was not a proper person to take care of the daughter, but sought to have the girl given into the charge of a reputable resident of Orange. He denied the mother was unfitted.

The girl herself expressed preference either to stay in the home or to have Father Fleming appointed her legal guardian. She does not want to return home. It is said, she is contemplating entering the sisterhood.

CHILD KILLERS SENTENCED.

Dr. Thompson and Harry Fowler of Long Branch Go to Prison.

FREEHOLD, N. J., Jan. 2.—Harry Fowler of Long Branch and Dr. Reuben P. Thompson of Seabright were to-day sentenced to eighteen years in State prison for the murder of the infant child of Miss Etta White of Long Branch. Fowler was the father of the infant. Miss White and her mother, Mrs. Nellie White, were also indicted for the crime along with Fowler and Thompson. The cases of the White women went over for one week. It is expected they will plead non vult and be given light sentences. Miss White has made a confession.

The crime was committed on May 1 last. Fowler was already married and is a carriage builder by trade. The child was discovered sunk in the South Shrewsbury River. Fowler confessed that Dr. Thompson poured something down the baby's throat in a funnel, and after it was dead Fowler threw the body into the river. Dr. Thompson is only thirty-five years old. He is a son of ex-Sheriff John E. Thompson of Navesink Highlands.

ROCKEFELLER'S GRANDSON DEAD.

Child of Mr. and Mrs. Harold McCormick Succumbs to Scarlet Fever.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Jan. 2.—The two-year-old son of Mrs. Harold McCormick, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, died to-day of scarlet fever at his parents' home, Pocantico Hills. Another child of Mrs. McCormick is also dangerously ill from the fever, but it is believed the crisis is past.

The family declined this afternoon to give out any information, and especially that pertaining to the approaching wedding of Mr. Rockefeller's daughter, which will undoubtedly be further postponed.

ABRAHAM COHEN'S SENTENCE.

He Will Go to Prison for the Full Term for Selling Mollie Weinstein.

Judge Foster will have before him for sentence to-day Abraham Cohen, who was convicted in General Sessions of the abduction of Mollie Weinstein. He will be given the extreme penalty of five years in Sing Sing Prison at hard labor. He is married, and in court to-day will appear his wife to plead for mercy. Her appeal will not avail. Judge Foster has made up his mind to make an example of Cohen as a warning to hundreds of other young men who have been abducting young women and leading them to east side haunts.

The evidence against Cohen was that he found the young girl seeking employment. He gave her drugged soda water, and on the pretext of taking her to his mother's residence took her to the house from which she escaped, and was paid a roll of bills for it. The young girl was kept a prisoner in the place until released by the Gerry Society. Judge Foster found that Cohen had made a practice of luring young girls to such places.

May Stanley, who was indicted and convicted for keeping the resort to which Cohen took Mollie Weinstein, was discharged yesterday. Judge Foster said:

"While there is no doubt of some guilt in your case, the fact that you took the stand and testified, enabling this Court to bring about the punishment of one of the most abominable offenders ever brought into a criminal court, deserves consideration." Judge Foster's action in discharging the Stanley woman was concurred in by District Attorney Philbin and Commodore Gerry.

BOY STEALS TWO MAIL SACKS.

Burns Many Letters Before He Is Caught Near Poughkeepsie.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Jan. 2.—Two pouches of mail matter were stolen from a flat car in front of the New York Central station here about 4 o'clock this morning. The sacks were among a number that were thrown off of the fast mail from the West to be transferred to a train which stepped at stations between here and New York. Each bag contained several hundred pieces.

A man was seen engaged in burning letters at a bonfire in some woods a mile and a half north of the city, and several officers started in that direction, but the thief escaped. He had destroyed a large number of the letters, but the police recovered some, which were turned over to the Post Office authorities.

The thief, it was discovered soon afterward, was Francis Murphy, nineteen years of age, of this city. Two officers from this city arrested Murphy in a signal tower seven miles north of Poughkeepsie this afternoon, and he is now in jail here awaiting instructions from United States Commissioner Shields, who has been notified of his arrest.

Murphy is very illiterate. Seeing the mail sacks being unloaded, he says, the idea struck him that he might get enough money out of one of them to pay his fare to Chicago, where his father works. The letters contained checks to the value of $1,000, but the boy got only twelve cents in money and threw the checks away. All of the letters, many of which he destroyed, were addressed to persons in Yonkers.

Joseph Giller, twenty-seven years old, a cabinetmaker, of 600 Tenth Avenue, who was shot Dec. 14, in the home of Miss Sadie Dean, an actress at the same address, died in Roosevelt Hospital last night. Giller used to visit the young actress, who was arrested on suspicion of having shot him.

She said a revolver had been presented to her the day before, and she showed it to Glider, who accidentally shot himself.

At the meeting of the Board of Education for the Boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx last night a communication was read from the Mayor announcing the reappointment of six of the members of the board whose term expired at the end of last year, and the appointment of John J. Barry as a member of the board to take the place of Thomas W. Timpson, who has resigned.

Vernon M. Davis and J. J. Kittel were reelected as delegates to the Central Board. The Treasurer of the board announced that $18,700 had been collected in the schools in Manhattan for the fund to aid the Galveston sufferers.

GOV. ODELL'S MESSAGE

Advocates Economy in All Departments.

TALKS OF NEW YORK POLICE

Recommends a Single-Headed Commission.

Declares that Trust Companies Should Be Compelled to Pay More Taxes, that Excise Law Should Be Amended to Prevent Colonization in Raines Law Hotels, and that Gas and Electric Lighting Companies Be Placed Under the Control of the Railroad Commission.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Gov. Odell has submitted his first message to the Legislature. In it he discusses conditions throughout the State and makes recommendations as follows:

State of New York,
Executive Chamber,
Albany, Jan. 2, 1901.

To the Legislature of the State of New York:

The Constitution provides that the Governor shall communicate by message to the Legislature at every session "the condition of the State and recommend such matters to it as he shall judge expedient." Acting under this mandate, I have the honor to transmit to you the following message:

FINANCIAL.

On Sept. 30, 1900, the close of the fiscal year, the total debt of the State amounted to $10,130,660, classified as follows:

Canals	$8,500,660
Adirondack Park, Chapter 561, Laws of 1885	330,000
Adirondack Park, Chapter 220, Laws of 1897	400,000
National Guard, public defenses, Chapter 672, Laws of 1898, and Chapter 193, Laws of 1899	900,000

Of this debt, $55,000 will fall due on the 30th day of January, 1901, and $55,000 on the 30th day of January, 1902. The first has been cared for by an appropriation made by the Legislature of 1900, and no other provision, excepting for the item falling due in January, 1902, for the redemption of outstanding certificates of indebtedness, will be necessary during the current year.

The receipts and balances for the year ending Sept. 30, 1900, were $36,511,698.25.

Of this amount $4,504,814.74 was the balance carried down from October, 1899.

The total payments for all purposes during the year amounted to $29,221,895.70, leaving a balance in the State Treasury on Sept. 30, 1900, of $7,289,802.55.

The tax rate for the current year is 1.96 mills, which will yield on the valuation of the State, ($5,461,302,752,) $10,704,153.39.

The amount received from corporations during the fiscal year was:

For taxes on corporations	$2,624,508.05
For organization taxes	356,778.61

being an increase over the preceding year of $239,968.61.

The amount received from taxes on Inheritances for the year ending Sept. 30, 1900, was $4,384,803.27, an increase over the preceding fiscal year of $2,140,191.03.

The amount received from license fees for the sale of liquors, Chapter 112 of the Laws of 1896, and the amendments thereto, for the year ended Sept. 30, was $4,235,870.25; an increase over the preceding year of $4,591.70.

EXPENDITURES.

A study of the principal expenditures is wise in view of the necessities which arise for a more economical administration. They are therefore submitted to you in full, and are as follows:

For educational purposes	$5,195,800.06
For charitable institutions, including care of the insane	6,748,134.03
For the Adirondack Park, purchase of lands and expenses	431,902.69
For printing and advertising	583,191.47
For the Legislature	706,709.35
For State prisons	602,800.93
For the judiciary	928,987.37
For the National Guard, including armories and arsenals, for public defenses	1,005,144.89
For the Excise Department, including refunds	564,681.65
For public buildings	261,644.41
For canals	2,875,625.93

One of the largest sources of revenue to the State is that arising from the collateral inheritance tax. With the object of inquiring into the expense of collection of this tax in view, I have secured from the Controller a statement which shows that during the years from 1897 to 1900, inclusive, there has been received from this source $11,765,211.08, and there has been expended, including $159,351.96 in refunds, $1,408,613.50 for collection. In other words, more than 12 per cent. of the tax has been used for administration purposes. The law provides that the County Treasurers shall be paid a fee for collection. The only work performed for this has been the signing of duplicate receipts and the transmission of the money to the Controller, at an expense during the period referred to of $276,276.16. The appraisement of the property has cost, in addition, $200,906.80, or about 3 per cent. of the total amount collected.

The legal expenses other than those named above have also been very large, and could be greatly reduced if the compensation of the attorneys was fixed by statute on a percentage basis, rather than left to the discretion of the Controller. No business man would suffer such an enormous drain upon his resources for the small amount of work now performed. One-half of the sum expended should have been ample for the collection of these moneys, and that of itself would have effected an average saving during the past four years of at least $500,000 per year.

I recommend that in all counties where there are now official appraisers the collection of the taxes be transferred to the State Controller, and in all other counties the County Treasurer be made the official appraiser for such counties with no additional fee for such service.

EMPLOYES AND CLERKS.

Since the adoption of the State Constitution a necessity for an increase in the force of employes in the Legislature has arisen, and without proper amendment to the legislative law this increase has been met through what is known as a supplemental list. With no definite limitation as to the number of such employes extravagance and abuses are apt to result. I recommend an amendment to the legislative law that will fix the number and compensation of such additional employes.

The Controller's report shows also vast increase in the expenditures for clerical and other help in the departments. No doubt a thorough pruning could be effected if the Legislature would investigate and report promptly its findings, and I ask for such action. All items of expenditure in the appropriation bills should be made more in detail, so as to give fuller effect to the veto power of the Executive against unnecessary expenditures, without a disapproval of many of the gross appropriations.

CORPORATIONS.

In connection with the report of the Controller it may be well to consider the effect of our incorporation laws, and what bearing they have upon the revenues of the State, and what, if any, legislation is required to liberalize and make them more effective. That corporations are treated more liberally in other States than in our own, is well known. The additional burdens placed upon domestic corporations force capital to go to other States where more favorable laws exist, and New York is losing the revenues which other States are enjoying at its expense. The total amount of money received from the incorporation tax during the past year was but $356,778.61, showing that only $34,000,000 of capital was organized under our laws in that period. Many instances could be cited where single corporations with a greater capitalization than the aggregate just referred to have been made in other States. What renders this condition of affairs the more unjust is that foreign corporations transact their business and use our State to all practical purposes as their main distributing point and place of business. It is comparatively easy for them to escape taxation upon a great amount of capital under that section of the law which provides that they shall pay only upon the amount of capital actually employed within the State. With inadequate means for determining that amount, upon which an honest difference of opinion may also exist, they pay but little if any taxes. What then shall we do to make our laws more popular and at the same time protect the interests of the State and increase its revenue? While the cost of incorporation is greater in New York than in any other State, entailing a larger burden upon the corporations at their inception, this is of but minor import, and has but little bearing upon the discrimination against New York.

ASKS FOR LIBERAL LAWS.

Without considering the restrictions as to the line of business or the acquirement of property, and the mortgaging of such properties, the one feature of our laws which to the average capitalist is the most distasteful is that section which provides that he shall be liable for all the debts of the corporation, individually through a failure to make an annual report, which under a recent decision of the Court of Appeals is held to include, not only the floating, but also the mortgage indebtedness of every corporation. It is right that Directors should be held accountable for their action where fraud or misuse of moneys or property is involved. When we take into consideration, however, that the report referred to, if necessary at all, could be enforced against the corporation by an action to compel it, under a money penalty, it would seem to be a very severe punishment that the failure to so file it should result in the transfer of its full debt, to each and every Director.

When we consider also that these reports need not convey a correct statement of the condition of the company, and are therefore of no benefit either to the State or to the company's stockholders, it would seem desirable, as a matter of right, that this provision should be repealed.

The references made above, together with those as to the limitation to debt, which do not now, under our law, extend to railroads, and other minor details, we might well regard with favorable consideration because they would do much to remove the objectionable features which now surround our corporation laws.

This subject is recommended to your careful consideration, with the hope that the present Legislature will not adjourn without having enacted amendments which will liberalize and make more popular our corporation laws. We should exercise the same supervision over foreign corporations who seek to do business within our State as over our own, and they should be subject to the same limitations. Many complaints now made against large combinations of capital are just, but owing to our lack of jurisdiction we are unable to control, and therefore no law can be framed which will reach foreign corporations effectively. Even though we deny their right to file certificates, the greatest penalty is the withholding of the right to use our courts, and this in effect is but a slight embarrassment, as the United States Court can be used for the same purpose. Liberal laws, therefore, which will accord the same rights as those given to individuals, restrictive as to their powers and the safeguarding of the people's interest, will accomplish much more than declamation against corporations, and will at the same time aid us by relieving the burdens of taxation upon the homes of those who can ill afford to bear them.

SPECIAL ATTORNEYS.

The abuses which have grown up under the attorney system are such as to call for correction. There are perhaps instances where the services of special attorneys may be justified, but in most cases the work performed by them should be left to the legal department of the State. I direct the attention of the Legislature specifically to the law governing attorneys for the Lunacy Commission and by the Forest Preserve Board. A great amount of money has been expended in the past for such services, and if it is possible to save these expenditures without detriment to the State, it should be done. A portion at least is unnecessary, and I am convinced can be avoided without any serious embarrassment following. This recommendation is made with the belief that you will give it the attention which its importance deserves.

COMMISSIONS.

One of the most important matters to which the attention of the Legislature should be given is the possibility of consolidating or abolishing many of the commissions which have been heretofore created for the care, supervision, and control of the various interests of the State. Many of these have outgrown their usefulness. Legislation in recent years has enlarged, and in many cases duplicated the work, until their many officials, with the accompanying salaries, expenses, and other incidental outlays have grown to proportions inconsistent with a due regard to the interests of the taxpayers. In this connection your attention is called to the amount appropriated by the last Legislature for the salaries and office expenses of some of these various commissions.

The Board of Mediation and Arbitration received an appropriation of $17,800 for salaries and office expenses. The Bureau of Labor Statistics received an appropriation of $32,942. The State Factory Inspector's department received an appropriation of $121,551, making a total appropriation for these three departments of $172,293.

FACTORY INSPECTION.

There are nearly as many men employed in the Factory Inspector's office as in the enforcement of the excise laws. It would seem that the State might be readily divided into inspection districts, with much better results than are obtainable under the present system, and in addition to the duties now performed, the Inspectors could at the same time collect the labor statistics, and the necessity for a separate set of men, now going over the same ground and duplicating the work, might thus be avoided. Factory Inspectors in the course of their inspection become familiar with the questions arising between employer and employe, and reports could thus furnish a great deal of the information that is needed for the proper consideration of the relations existing between them. If this be so, it would seem that by a consolidation of these three departments into one, to be known as the Department of Labor, the work done by each of the present departments could be more efficiently performed and at a very much less expense than is now possible. In this Department of Labor should be created, with a Deputy in charge of each of the three branches heretofore conducted separately, a provision could be made by which a Board of Mediation and Arbitration might be selected from those connected with the department, and a large saving of salaries and office expenses be effected.

In my opinion at least $72,000 would be saved as the result of such a union, and the great interests of labor be better conserved. I recommend such legislation as will accomplish this result.

The Factory Inspector has been charged under a recent law with the examination of the sweat-shop system in the larger cities of the State, and has examined 27,000 applications for licenses, of which 19,000 were granted. This law has been generally obeyed. It would be impossible, it seems to me, to prohibit entirely the performance of work in homes, and possibly it would not be desirable, but supervision by local boards of health and deputy factory inspectors will result in a very much better hygienic condition than has prevailed heretofore. The penalty for violation of the law should be made more stringent, and in this direction it is to be hoped that the necessary amendments may be enacted.

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY.

There have been frequent attempts during the past few years to enact what has been called an employers' liability law, the object being to place employes upon the same footing as individuals not employed, where death or injury may result from the acts of fellow employes without contributory negligence. The wide divergence of opinion existing between the employers and employes is responsible for the failure to secure affirmative action, and therefore it has been impossible for these interests to meet upon a common ground. A system of compulsory insurance of employes by the employers has been suggested as the best way of arriving at a solution of this question. It seems to me that it is possible either by this method, or by more clearly defining the law as to when the acts of the employe stand for those of the employer, to arrive at some conclusion satisfactory to both these great interests. The employer should furnish to his employe every protection. It is as necessary that careful and prudent men should be employed as it is that the best mechanical appliances should be used in the prosecution of business, and known incompetency which causes injury should be punished as fully as the failure to provide other proper safeguards. I commend this subject to you for your careful consideration. The States of Massachusetts, Indiana, Colorado, and Alabama now have Liability acts, and they have been found to work without detriment or serious embarrassment, and the great State of New York owes to the laboring interests of the State the same ample protection.

STATE BOARD OF CHARITIES.

Article 8 of the Constitution provides for a State Board of Charities, to be appointed by the Governor. As at present constituted this board consists of twelve members, receiving a compensation of $10 for each day's attendance at meetings of the board, with expenses. The board also maintains an office with a Secretary and other employes. The appropriation for salaries of Commissioners, employers, and other expenses amounted to the sum of $51,620 last year.

The duties imposed upon this board, while important, I believe could be more properly attended to by a single Commissioner, selected by the Governor by and with the consent of the Senate, together with such State officers as might be designated by him. I would recommend that the present board be abolished, and the duties heretofore imposed upon it be discharged by one made up as above suggested. The reduction which I am satisfied would result thereby, without impairing the efficiency of the work, would be about $25,000 per year.

RAILROAD COMMISSION.

The Railroad Commission, in addition to the other duties imposed upon it, has been engaged in the work of abolishing grade crossings, under the appropriation made last year. This work should continue, and the Legislature should make an adequate provision for that purpose.

PRISONS COMMISSION.

Article 8 of the Constitution provides for a Commission of Prisons, and Chapter 1,023 of the Laws of 1895 provided that the Governor should appoint eight Commissioners who receive $10 per day and expenses while in the performance of their duties. This commission also maintains an office and office force, and received an appropriation last year therefor amounting to $13,000. While it is true that this board has effected a great saving to the State, and a better sanitary condition in the various subdivisions, yet its work has reached such a satisfactory stage that, in my judgment, the duties of this commission should be conferred upon a single Commissioner, to be selected by the Governor by and with the consent of the Senate, who, together with such State officers as might be designated, could continue the work of the present Board of Prison Commissioners. The expenses which would be saved by this consolidation, without lessening the efficiency of the commission, would be at least $10,000 per year.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

I also desire to call your attention to the State Board of Health, which consists of three Commissioners appointed by the Governor and certain ex-officio members. The duties are such that one competent man, giving his time thereto, might easily perform them, provided that the supervision of tuberculosis and glanders in cattle were transferred to the Department of Agriculture, where it properly belongs, and the necessity for a large office force at an expense according to the appropriation of last year of $42,200 could be largely reduced. This is also suggested, with a recommendation for affirmative action by the Legislature.

STATE LUNACY COMMISSION.

On Oct. 1, 1900, there were 22,088 inmates in the various State hospitals. The number on Oct. 1, 1899, was 21,435, showing an increase for the year of 653. This seems to be about the average increase for the past five or six years. The expenditure for the maintenance of the State hospitals for the past fiscal year was $3,599,631.56, or at the rate of $165.38 per capita, as against $178.42 for the previous year. This decrease was brought about by an arbitrary reduction in the number of employes, and has not seemed to cause any serious impairment in the proper administration of the various hospitals.

The total expenditures for construction work and repairs of an extraordinary character during the past year have been $662,948.90. The commission reports that they have $20,000,000 invested in buildings and equipments. In other words, it has cost $900 for each patient for buildings and equipments. This sum indicates to my mind that there has been great extravagance in the matter of buildings and equipments. While it is not possible to undo what has passed, yet it is certain that in the future greater economy can be exercised in appropriations for these purposes. The commission requests an appropriation for the accommodation of 500 patients at Rochester and 200 patients at Gowanda. I do not favor this appropriation unless it can be shown that there is an absolute necessity in the near future for these buildings, and this appears to be very questionable.

The old system of permitting the Board of Managers to be in absolute control of their various institutions was an incentive to economy and general good management, and if again adopted would probably result in additional saving to the State. At present the Boards of Managers are mere figureheads. The stewards and Superintendents are called to Albany bi-monthly. A careful perusal of all that has been done by them at these meetings convinces me that the advantage gained is not commensurate with the expense incurred. It seems to me that all of their business could be equally well prosecuted if they remained at their various institutions instead of coming to Albany. We should be liberal, but not extravagant. We should not permit a false economy to stand between the State and the proper care of the patients, but stories of extravagance that have come from the institutions are such as to justify the most rigid investigation by you as to the management of the State hospitals for the insane. I believe that with no harm to these institutions, a saving of at least three-quarters of a million dollars can be effected in this department.

FOREST, FISH, AND GAME.

The preservation of the forests, especially as a protection to the water supply of the State, has been one that has received proper attention from the Legislature, and is of the greatest importance. The same care has also been extended to the protection of the fish and game interests and the shell fish culture along our coasts. The steps taken toward this end have undoubtedly resulted in great benefit.

It seems to me, however, that two boards, one charged with the purchase of lands and the other with their protection, must necessarily duplicate each other's work to a considerable degree, and that a consolidation would result in a large saving. The Forest Preserve Board is composed almost entirely of officials elected by the people, and the Fish and Game Commission appointees of the Governor. The law governing the work of the Forest Preserve Board could be amended so as to permit the selection of a member by the Governor, by and with the consent of the Senate, who with the two State officers now designated should constitute the Forest Preserve Board, and the powers and duties of the Forest, Fish and Game Commission could be transferred to the board as thus constituted. The importance of this suggestion is realized perhaps more fully by placing before you the appropriation made for these boards last year. There was appropriated by the last Legislature for the salaries and office expenses of the Forestry, Fish and Game Commission the sum of $82,875. This includes the expenses of printing and publication of reports, salaries of Commissioners and employes and other expenses incidental to the maintenance of such a department, but not the maintenance of hatcheries and legal expenses. Aside from the sum of $250,000 appropriated for the purchase of lands and expenses of the Forest Preserve Board there were expended for other salaries and office expenses over $14,000, and paid for additional counsel, about $12,000. The legal work of this department should be performed by the Attorney General.

The saving of expenses which would undoubtedly follow consolidation, amounting probably to $35,000, is certainly enough to warrant careful consideration upon the part of the Legislature, and such legislation as will lead to this result is recommended.

OF WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

One of the offices which, in my judgment, might be abolished without loss to the interests of the State and with a saving of expense is the Superintendent of Weights and Measures. Apparently he may not perform any duties oftener than once in ten years, while he receives an annual salary of $500. This office appears to be in the nature of a sinecure, and I recommend legislation looking to its abolishment.

JUDICIARY AND STATE PRINTING.

Other great items of expense which have been growing steadily are the expenses of the judiciary and of State printing.

Upon the adoption of our present State Constitution the Appellate Division superseded the General Terms, the object being to relieve the Court of Appeals from the great volume of business which before had been left to its determination.

While a more rapid adjudication of actions was the object of the change above referred to, it was not supposed that this and other amendments made in the Constitution would so enormously increase the expenses of the judiciary of the State. Many laws, such as that providing for clerks and personal attendants, have been enacted in recent years, and there seems to be no limit to which this extravagance may not lead. As an example, illustrating my meaning, your attention is called to the expenses which have grown up under the Special Jury law, passed in 1896 for the City of New York. The Appellate Division of the First Department is responsible for the appointment of the officials charged with the administration of this law, and have placed in charge one Commissioner at a salary of $6,000, a deputy at $3,000, three clerks at $1,500 per year each, three at $1,000 per year, and one at $750, a total of $17,250. In addition to these officials this division also maintains its staff of employes upon the same liberal basis. Of course New York City pays the expenses of the Jury Commission, but this prodigacy in the one case is an indication that no greater care is exercised where the expenses are borne by the State. It seems to me therefore that in making your appropriations for the judiciary a saving could be effected without a loss of dignity or power to the various branches resulting therefrom. I may say in justification of the criticism of the Special Jury law that I am informed that the Commissioner is seldom called upon to furnish a jury, and it is a hindrance rather than a benefit to our jury system, and the law should therefore be repealed.

Another great increase in expenditures has been in the item of printing, which in 1880 amounted to $108,435.88, and last year to $383,191.47, or five times as much.

It is your duty to curtail in every way this wasteful extravagance which exists to-day in almost every State department. It is no answer to cite the fact that others have done worse, and that the State is better able to afford these expenditures because of the indirect taxation, but it is your duty at once to take such action as may be necessary to correct what I am convinced are grave abuses.

It is the right of the taxpayers to expect at the hands of the Legislature such action as will lead to a reduction of their burdens, which are now bearing heavily, especially upon the farming sections of the State. I trust your favorable consideration will be given to these recommendations.

STATE TAX COMMISSION.

The State Board of Tax Commissioners have had placed upon them the additional duty of assessing the special franchise tax under the law enacted during the administration of my predecessor. Under the first operations of this law 4,751 valuations were made, aggregating a total of $266,163,059, an increase of $170,101,157 over the assessment of the same properties by local Assessors the year previous. The Tax Commissioners in the valuations under this special franchise tax have had to do with the assessment of property crossing highways, and they have recommended that where the occupation is less than 200 feet the law be so amended as to leave to the localities the assessment. State supervision of such properties causing serious and unnecessary irritation to those affected, with hardly any correponding benefit to the State.

TAXATION.

The subject of taxation is one that is of the most import to the people of the State at large. The attempt from time to time to shift the responsibility from one class of property to the other, with but correspondingly slight decrease in the burden borne by the real estate throughout the Commonwealth, does not fulfill the requirements of the constituency which we represent. I have looked forward with pleasurable anticipation to the day when the State of New York would no longer find it necessary to levy a direct tax for State purposes. The franchise tax meets to a limited degree this expectation. The Stranahan bill, the purpose of which was to impose a tax upon all mortgages, came nearer its consummation than any law that had ever before been presented to the Legislature. The complications and antagonisms which it aroused made it unwise to act upon a matter of such great importance during the last session of the Legislature; so to-day we have the same problem confronting us as has been before us for so many years.

TAX ON CORPORATIONS.

All corporations receive from the State certain rights. They have, first, the right to exist. In addition, some acquire from municipalities, through the action of the State, rights to build, maintain, and operate their properties. It seems to me, therefore, that capital of this character in our State should pay a tribute to the creating power for that which they have received. This justifies the present laws taxing corporations for State purposes, and all future corporation tax laws should be based upon this principle. That the present law works hardships to some and is not fully enforced in other cases is apparent. This no makeshift remedy will correct, but an entirely new system should be framed to meet existing conditions and a fair and equitable recompense from all corporations enjoying State protection and favors should be exacted. Exemptions should be given by the localities rather than by the State, because it is the former which receives the greatest benefit, and all corporations should therefore pay a tax based upon their earning power. But few of the many corporations in the State are now taxed in this manner, and therefore the unfair discrimination exists. A correction of this error would add greatly to corporation tax receipts by the State.

In addition to this, corporations organized under the transportation laws, which include all those using public utilities, should also pay an aditional tax. To correct many abuses which grew up under the administration of this feature of our law, the franchise law was enacted. While agreeing with the principle, I am convinced that the method of its administration is crude and should be more clearly defined.

TRUST COMPANY TAXES.

We have in addition to these as a source of revenue a great number of banks, both National and State; trust and insurance companies, some of which are assessed at a high figure and others at a valuation so low as to be absurd. It is a well-known fact that trust companies do not pay their proportion of the State's taxes, and that this discrimination is of such a character as to enable them to thrive and do business where a National or State bank cannot. The total amount of the capitalization, undivided profits, and surplus of banks amounts to $385,133,329, of which about $55,000,000 is in real estate, leaving about $330,000,000 in personal property in such capital and surplus. Trust companies and banks should pay a tax upon their capital to the State, because of their use of our courts and for the other privileges which are accorded them. One per cent. upon this amount could be exacted, which, added to the tax for the Treasury between three and four millions dollars, and would not materially interfere with the collection of taxes in the various localities. In addition to this the surplus of savings banks and insurance companies, which is now held as a reserve, and which amounts to $469,707,751, should pay its proper proportion of the taxes, because it is in effect the capital of such banks and companies, and should be so treated. I do not believe in attacking the deposit of the poor man, whether in savings banks or in the form of life insurance. Every possible inducement should be afforded by the State to encourage saving by those who labor and desire to lay up a fund against a "rainy day." But this surplus which accumulates from time to time should bear its portion of the tax burden, and the enactment of a law which would tax it at the rate of 1 per cent., as above, would not be too great in consideration for the protection and safeguards which our State throws around savings banks and insurance companies. These suggestions, in my judgment, if favorably acted upon, will greatly relieve the burden upon real estate. In return for this I should favor exemption from payments by banks, other than savings banks, of all local assessments for State purposes, and in the case of savings banks and insurance companies from all other taxation except upon their real estate.

The inequalities resulting from the taxation of mortgages are very great, the burden being borne principally by estate and trust funds, nearly all other mortgages escaping taxation.

If the suggestions before outlined should meet with favor, I should recommend exempting mortgages entirely from taxation, in the belief that their taxation should be left to the operation of the transfer tax law, the present unfair discrimination being thereby corrected, and a lower rate secured to borrowers.

THE EXCISE DEPARTMENT.

The total receipts of the Excise Department from all sources for the last year amounted to $12,567,199.25, the State's share being $4,232,625.09. This revenue was derived from 31,530 certificates; 4,392 certificates were surrendered during the year. The total expense of operating this department was $280,995.06, to which should be added County Treasurers' fees, amounting to $55,758.54, making the total expense of collection $336,753.60.

Your attention is called to the low expense of collection as compared with the expense of collection of the collateral inheritance tax heretofore alluded to. The excise law was originally framed for the purpose of taking the saloon out of politics and reducing the number of licensed places. Since 1896, the date of the passage of the law, there has been a decrease of licensed places to the number of 5,608. It is still possible, however, to subject the dealers to blackmail and intimidation. I find under the present operation of the law that where a violation occurs the dealer is under the control of the blackmailer, just as he was under the law for which this one was substituted. It is possible for a citizen to begin a civil prosecution on his own relation against the violator and then carry the proceedings along to trial, or if he so desires, the prosecution may be closed without either the consent or the knowledge of the Excise Department. Instances have come to my notice where such suits have been settled without any reference to the department and without any knowledge by it of the consummation of such settlement. This is not the purpose of the law. It was intended to hold at all times the liquor dealer responsible, and if he was guilty of a violation it was designed that his certificate should be cancelled. Under the circumstances related it is possible for a man to be a frequent violator, to be prosecuted, to be blackmailed, and still continue in business. I would recommend, therefore, that the law be amended so that it will be impossible, if a prosecution is begun, to settle it without the consent and approval of the Excise Department.

RAINES LAW HOTELS.

I believe that criminal prosecution is of greater effect than a civil prosecution, for the reason that in the majority of cases the licenses are not owned by the proprietors of the places, but by some other individual. The real violator against the law therefore escapes and renders valueless the license intrusted to his keeping. This should also be corrected.

During political campaigns some of the hotels known as Raines law hotels have been subject to more or less suspicion as to the character of their guests, and the charge has been openly made that they are often used for the purpose of colonization of illegal voters in Greater New York and the other cities of the State. No possible restriction can be placed upon places of this character except by constant supervision. Under the so-called Metropolitan Election law the proprietors of these hotels are required, thirty days before an election, to give to the Superintendent of Election a list of the names of the permanent guests of their houses. This renders it still possible to colonize and cast a fraudulent vote. I would suggest an amendment to the Excise law by which the Excise Commissioner may at all times throughout the year call upon the hotels under his jurisdiction for such a list of permanent guests as are then domiciled, and that he may be empowered to make such additional regulations as will at all times place him in possession of such information as he may be called upon to furnish by the Superintendent of Election or others.

PUBLIC WORKS.

Your attention is directed to the report of the Superintendent of Public Works for a detailed statement of the operations of this department. The expenditures this year were $950,925, as against $867,148.41 for the year 1899. This increase was due to the eight-hour law, which largely increased the pay rolls, especially for lock and bridge tending.

The repair of the canals and structure for the current year include the grading of 130 miles of towing path, of which 88 miles were raised and gravelled; also the repairing and lining of a large number of structures, namely, waste weirs, culverts, vertical and slope walls, bridge abutments, aqueducts, dams, &c.

A large number of special appropriations are made annually, and the work thereunder is in most cases required to be performed under the direction of the Superintendent of Public Works. Under these special acts by the Legislature the amount of $211,327.88 was appropriated, and the cost of the completed work was $169,317.09, exclusive of the cost of engineering. Three contracts under special appropriations were commenced and completed to date in 1900, the appropriations for which were $10,996.13, and their cost $9,976.18. Twenty-eight contracts have been awarded this year, under which work is proceeding, but not completed. The appropriations for these amounted to $505,426.89. The contracts were awarded for $380,529.17. From these figures it would seem that this department has been managed in a businesslike manner, and that no undue extravagance has been permitted.

The tonnage of the canal for 1899 was 3,386,051. For 1900 to Oct. 1 it was 2,868,526 tons, and the estimated tonnage for 1900 is 3,349,461 tons, showing a falling off for the season of 336,590 tons. It is supposed that this is due in part to the fact that the lake trade did not open until April 23, which was unusually late. The Superintendent believes that a large part of the canal's tonnage may be reclaimed by the repeal of so much of chapter 935, Laws of 1896, as prevents the formation of canal transportation companies with more than $50,000 capital. I recommend that such action be taken by the Legislature.

STATE PRISONS.

The number of prisoners confined in the various prisons during the last year averages 3,376. The expenditure for maintenance during the fiscal year was $460,528.02. A somewhat larger appropriation for care and maintenance will be required for the coming year, for the reason that the Eastern New York Reformatory at Napanoch will come under the charge of this department. It has been found that approximately 1,600 prisoners have been engaged in productive industries. At a first glance this would seem to indicate that over half of the prisoners were idle. Such was not the case, however. The others have been employed, but not upon productive industry. If the State and its political divisions would make greater demands for manufactured product, more prisoners could be employed on such work, and their labor would contribute in a larger measure to their support. The Superintendent reports the structures at Sing Sing and Auburn as unsanitary, and in such a condition as to prevent the application of a comprehensive scheme of gradation and classification of the prisoners and the attainment of reformatory results that might be obtained if proper buildings were provided. It is hoped that from time to time the work of the prisoners in the production of the necessary materials for new buildings, as well as in the construction of the buildings themselves, may permit their enlargement and the betterment of the sanitary condition of the prisons without any great expense to the State.

It is gratifying to note that most of the prison labor is now fully employed upon industries not interdicted by the various laws for the protection of free labor which have been enacted during the past ten years. The Bertillon system of measurement, which has been perfected under the present Superintendent, not only renders it much easier to detect and identify a criminal who has previously served a term of imprisonment, but it also makes possible the enlargement to a greater degree of the scope of the law which was passed last year, permitting Judges to fix indeterminate sentences. While the application of this law rests entirely within the discretion of the court, its scope should be so broadened as to be made mandatory in the case of conviction for a first offense for all crimes except those against the person. This would enable the prison department carefully to watch and hold out inducements to those who had taken their first step in crime, and when in their judgment the prisoner had shown sufficient signs of reformation, liberty could be granted. This could be done without any serious menace to society at large, and would relieve the congestion which now seems to render necessary the erection of more prisons in the near future.

MUNICIPALITIES.

The influence of good government in municipalities is of such a character as to affect the people of the State, and therefore its consideration by the highest law-making power under our Constitution is proper and necessary. We may expect to find that whenever extravagance exists as to local government it will have a similar bearing upon the action of the representatives from such a centre on the expenses of the Commonwealth. While it is true that such remedies as are permitted under our system of government can be used by the voters themselves to correct and rebuke, yet it is at the same time your province to assist in restraining and correcting evils which, though local, may by their bearing upon other sections become the evil of the whole State.

The Legislature of 1900 authorized the appointment of a commission to redraft the charter of the City of New York, and also authorized the appointment of a commission to investigate and report on the tenement houses of the greater cities of the State. Both of these commissions were appointed by my predecessor and both will submit reports to this Legislature. Matters of such grave importance, affecting the great municipalities, should be carefully considered and such recommendations as may appear feasible in the direction of better city administration should receive favorable action. These two commissions have had under consideration two very important subjects. One has to do with the Government; the other in effect with the morals, health, and physical well being of a vast number of citizens.

CHARTER REVISION.

While the revision of the charter has for its object an improvement in New York City Government, yet it has not fully met all expectations, particularly as to expenditures and the husbanding of the resources of the city. Every department of New York needs corrective legislation. Especially is this true of those departments whose administration is confined to county lines. In this direction I desire to call your attention to the fact that many of the public officers in that city are receiving a larger remuneration for their services than that which is given to the President of the United States. Your attention is called to a few instances of this character. The Sheriff of the County of New York receives an annual salary of $20,000, and one-half of the fees, which are said to amount to $60,000 a year more. The claim has been made heretofore that the Sheriff takes great financial responsibility, and is therefore entitled to additional compensation. This is not now true in effect, because he can at all times demand a bond of indemnity and thus save himself from all harm. It would seem to me that a salary of $20,000 would be ample for this office. The same may be said of the County Clerk and the Registrar of the County of New York, whose salaries are excessive. In the County of Kings the combined salaries of the Sheriff, County Clerk, and Registrar amount to $300,000 per annum. This could be reduced by abolishing the fee system and substituting therefor salaries, the balance to be paid into the Treasury for the purpose of reducing the taxes upon property.

Recommendations to reduce commissions and to substitute single-headed commissions whenever possible should be given favorable consideration.

The maintenance of the supremacy of the Greater New York as a commercial centre is important to every part of our State. Therefore the development of the water front of New York City and the improvement of its dockage facilities should receive the attention of both the municipal and State authorities. It seems to me that legislation for a more rapid improvement of its wharfing facilities should be inaugurated, and a much greater efficiency could be secured if a single-headed commission were substituted for the present Dock Board.

NEW YORK POLICE DEPARTMENT.

The serious problem as to the proper administration of the New York Police Department should receive your immediate attention. The present condition is probably due to divided responsibility. I am not one of those who believe that because there is a disregard for existing regulations upon the part of some of those charged with police administration, the whole system is faulty and bad. With the present complicated system, the responsibility for this condition can be shifted from one to another, and it is therefore almost impossible for even the Chief Executive of the city to secure an honest and faithful enforcement of the law. Vice can never be entirely eradicated from the City of New York, or from any other city. It can, however, be held in subjection and not allowed to flaunt itself defiantly before the public. It can be curbed and held under such control that at least the citizens will feel that the department has done all that lies in its power to enforce the law. How can this be best accomplished, and what action shall be taken by the Legislature to obtain this result? In looking over the situation, and understanding something of the workings of the department, I believe that a more perfect system can be secured by a more complete centralization of authority.

At present we have, first, the Governor, charged with the execution and enforcement of the laws, whose sole power at present to obey the mandate of the Constitution lies in the suspension of the Mayor and his removal when charges of official misconduct have, after a due hearing, been proven. While it is true that, during the administration of my predecessor, this power was ample to bring about the revocation of an order issued without warrant, and which for a time seemed to make a conflict between the State and city authorities imminent, yet it is possible that Mayors may hereafter disregard such injunction until the injury has resulted, or an actual outbreak has occurred. It cannot, therefore, be said that the authority of the Governor is all that could be desired properly to discharge the duties imposed upon him. It may be claimed that the Mayor himself possesses ample power as the Chief Executive of the city, but this is disproven when we recollect that the Mayor has no authority to remove his Commissioners after the expiration of six months from the beginning of his term of office. Therefore, he is powerless except to try upon charges, and then the same condition that has been cited above may result, with consequent disaster to the public. While it is true that a majority of the Commissioners, with the approval of the Mayor, may remove, yet this solution brings up again divided responsibility and renders it almost impossible to secure that discipline which is so desirable in a well-organized police force.

SINGLE-HEADED COMMISSION.

What remedy have we, then, for this manifest evil which has brought the police force of New York City into such disrepute? A State constabulary has been suggested, but the strong disinclination upon the part of the other municipalities throughout the State to acquiesce in this solution renders this plan valueless. A metropolitan police system is open to the criticism that it is a violation of the principle of home rule guaranteed by the Constitution. We are therefore brought to face this proposition, with no apparent remedy as yet suggested. In my opinion, there should be no centralization of power. There is no necessity, it seems to me, for a Commissioner who is not in effect as well as in name the absolute head of the police system of the City of New York. An efficient man, the choice of the Mayor, as a single-headed Commissioner, with all the powers now possessed by the Chief of Police, would at once narrow down the responsibility and place it within the power of the Chief Executive of the State to hold accountable the Mayor and the Commissioner thus appointed. This suggestion, if given effect by legislative enactment, would in my opinion, be no violation of the principle of home rule. It is, moreover, right that, inasmuch as the Governor is equally responsible, he should have an authority over this department, because the people, not only of New York City, but of the whole State, are interested, and certain powers to be exercised only in cases of emergency should be conferred upon him to enable him to carry out the Constitutional mandates.

I recommend, therefore, the substitution of a single-headed Police Commission for the City of New York, such Commissioner to be the Chief of Police of the city, to be appointed by the Mayor, and subject to removal either by the Mayor or the Governor, and that the present office of a separate Chief of Police be abolished.

CITY EMPLOYES.

The decision of the Court of Appeals, which in effect makes the tenure of office no longer secure, should receive your early consideration. It has come to my knowledge that the employes of various city departments have been coerced in numerous instances under the ruling as now laid down by the Court of Appeals. I recommend that an amendment be enacted making the section of the civil service law effected by that decision legislative. This is due to the man who works by the day as well as to the higher-paid officials. Both should have the same protection under all circumstances, and the full intent and purpose of our civil service laws be given effect.

RAMAPO WATER COMPANY.

Under Chapter 985 of the Laws of 1895, as amended, the Ramapo Water Company was given the power of condemnation for the purpose of securing to it the water and lands necessary for its purposes. During the year 1899 an attempt was made to enter into a contract with this company by the municipal board empowered to make such contracts. This proposition when presented to the citizens of New York was severely criticised by them, and the question of continued municipal ownership of their water supply was thus brought to their attention. The Legislature of 1900 enacted a law which made the consummation of such a contract impossible without the unanimous consent of those empowered to make such contract. The ownership of water rights sufficient to provide the City of New York with an ample supply of pure and wholesome water should be entirely under the control and direction of that municipality. By what now seems to have been an unfortunate omission in the original charter of the City of New York, the city is not given the same rights that are afforded other municipalities for securing an additional water supply. It should therefore be your first aim to correct and repeal such terest in the subject. Twenty-three roads, covering a mileage of 53.58, have been constructed, or are now in process of construction, at a cost of $377,394, one-half of which expense was borne by the localities in which the roads are located. Surveys have already been made which if adopted will call for an appropriation by the State of $1,222,000.

It would be inexpedient for the Legislature to appropriate this sum in any one year, but it is evident that if the building of roads is to continue, a much larger appropriation will be necessary this present year. An amendment to the law which would provide that the State should pay the entire expense of construction by the issuance of bonds, levying upon the counties their proportion for the benefits received, would expedite and reduce the cost and extend the time for payment over a longer period and at a lower rate of interest. A systematic plan should be adopted, however, for the building of roads, so that all parts of the State should be equally benefited. We should effect the reopening of the old State roads, which would be of much greater advantage to the citizens of all parts of the State than the building of many such roads in any one locality.

With State aid for a common road through all counties, the building of other roads under a local money system by the counties would follow, and in a short time good roads would come without any great expense which must necessarily follow, and the discrimination which is probable under a full State system would be avoided.

CANALS.

During the administration of my predecessor a commission was appointed by him for the purpose of taking into consideration the improvement and enlargement of the present canal system of the State. A report from this commission was made to the State Legislature of 1900. Acting upon the recommendations contained in that report the Legislature appropriated the sum of $200,000, Chapter 411, Laws of 1900, for surveys and estimates of the cost of such enlargement or improvement of the canal system. The report on these surveys and estimates will be ready for submission to the Legislature about the 1st of February of this year. I shall, therefore, defer such recommendations as I have to make on this subject until the transmission of that report.

PALISADES.

The work of the Commissioners of the Palisades Inter-State Park has been eminently successful, and I desire to commend to your careful attention their forthcoming report, and urge your action on their request for financial support, in a spirit of liberality commensurate with the importance of the undertaking, and the great public interest therein. In anticipation of their report I am able to state that the $10,000 appropriated last year for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the Commissioners and perfecting surveys and maps, have been used entirely as the nucleus of a fund for acquiring and closing down the most destructive of the quarries. Blasting at these quarries stopped on Christmas Eve in accordance with the provisions of option contracts binding until June 1 next.

The Commissioners are securing options at conservative prices on several miles of the Palisades, and through the generosity of a number of public spirited gentlemen have obtained subscriptions amounting to upward of $120,000 to be used for the purpose of taking up the quarry options, contingent upon a State appropriation sufficient to close the options upon the remainder of the property now under contract. A practical and business-like solution of the question of the preservation of the Palisades is thus presented and the project awaits only the proper action of the Legislature for its consummation.

AGRICULTURAL.

The appropriation of the State last year of a sum sufficient to discharge the obligations of the State Fair, bringing it under the control of a commission appointed by the State, has proved wise, and the encouragement thus given has resulted in the most successful fair that has been known in recent years. Sufficient appropriation should be made to continue this work as a State institution during the coming year. The various laws passed empowering the Commissioner of Agriculture to protect consumers from adulterated food products have been thoroughly enforced, and the results, in the main, have been satisfactory. You are referred to the report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for a detailed statement of the work of this department.

The sugar beet industry of the State should still be encouraged and the bounty continued. It is anticipated that this year about 9,000,000 pounds of beet sugar will be produced in our State.

Farmers Institutes have been conducted successfully and are of great benefit to the farming localities. The work of the stamping out of tuberculosis and glanders among the cattle should, in my opinion, be transferred to this department, because it comes properly within the scope of its duties and because it can be done with less expense.

THE NATIONAL GUARD.

I am pleased to report that the National Guard is in a condition entirely satisfactory, and under the existing regulations governing it has reached such a degree of efficiency that it may be safely relied upon to perform every duty that may fall to it. Every man owes his country a duty, and it ought to be both from a patriotic and physical standpoint the aim of every citizen to serve his State for the term which is usually given by those who enter the National Guard.

The National Guard was not intended as a military reserve of the general Government, and it cannot in any way be so regarded. Separate companies and regiments are made up of men who through social or business relations are usually known to each other. They are willing to give their services to the State if such a call is made upon them. The Guard should never be expected to do anything else than was originally intended; that is, to suppress local troubles and repel foreign invasion, and strengthen the Federal arm only until a sufficient force can be recruited that will be put into the field to replace them, but the Guard should never be broken up. This was the theory under which it was called into service during the war of the rebellion, and it should still be our aim so to regard it. The instruction which they are now receiving at the State camp, giving as it does, to every man a practical insight into the duties which he may be called upon to discharge, teaching him the necessity of looking after himself, is calculated to raise the standard of efficiency.

The display of this force at times, even though no actual outbreak occurs, has a tendency to curb lawlessness and bring respect for the law. This was notably the case in the Croton Dam strikes last year, where the mere assembling of the troops was sufficient to prevent what might have been a serious outbreak. I trust that the time may be far distant when the services of the National Guard may be necessary in our State. Mediation and arbitration, it seems to me, should be our aim rather than the exhibition of armed force. Yet we must always recollect that there may be occasions when every other remedy may fail, and as a last resort we may be compelled to rely upon the National Guard for the preservation of life and property. The force now consists of about 14,000.

NAVAL MILITIA.

A faithful adjunct and auxiliary of the National Guard is the Naval Militia. The Naval Militia is as important in its way as are the infantry and other arms of the State. Their services may at any time become necessary, and they form the nucleus for building up such a naval force as may be needed for the protection of our harbors. The total amount appropriated for the National Goard and Naval Militia last year was $359,939.71. This is exclusive of appropriations made for buildings. I desire in this, as in every other branch of the State Government, to recommend economy where no serious impairment of the service may result.

INSURANCE DEPARTMENT.

The Superintendent of Insurance reports that there are 253 fire, marine, life, and casualty companies doing business in this State, with assets of $1,943,004,411, and liabilities, except capital stock, of $1,515,309,737, and capital stock of $105,122,017. These companies report a surplus of $373,326,119, and risks in force $32,025,249,575. There are 55 fraternal beneficiary societies which show receipts for the year 1899 of $33,074,648, and disbursements of about $31,000,000. Fifty-three non-fraternal associations show receipts of $1,382,831, and payments for claims $7,956,903, and for expenses $3,398,036. The work of this department is constantly on the increase, and unusual efforts are necessary in order to protect the rights of the policy holders and members of the beneficiary associations. I have no suggestions to offer concerning this department.

PUBLIC UTILITIES.

During the last few years there has been considerable discussion in regard to the municipal ownership of public utilities. It is proper in the consideration of this question to view it, however, from the standpoint of those interested in private corporations now owning such utilities and of the taxpayers of the municipality.

Undoubtedly cities have been benefited in the past from competition between private corporations, which for a time had the effect of lowering prices, which competition, however, usually results in a combination of such competing interests. Then prices are raised again in order that dividends may be made upon a capitalization far in excess of that warranted by business possibilities.

Then it is that dissatisfaction arises and the demand for municipal ownership is most urgent. This unsatisfactory condition could have been avoided had the power to authorize the formation of a new company been lodged in some competent authority. And it would be possible with such authority, in the event of the desire by a municipality to acquire such properties, to protect the rights of both the corporation and the municipality. The question is one properly deserving the attention of the Legislature. Those corporations owning and controlling public utilities are all organized under the transportation law. They are all subject to the same provisions, with this exception, that the railroad corporations have now been placed under the control of the State Railroad Commission. I am convinced that the execution of the law which created that commission has been of such a beneficial character to the citizens at large that some would now think of returning to the former method of bringing to the Legislature, there to be hurriedly acted upon, questions of such great importance.

CHANGE OF CONTROL.

This subject is one deserving the wisdom and attention of men who may be specially charged with the duty of investigating the desirability for the creation of such corporations, as well as the question whether they are created for the purpose of threatening or attacking existing corporations, or created in their interests. The Railroad Commission, if charged with this duty, could readily determine whether there was a necessity for another company, or whether the desired result could not be accomplished by enforcing a reduction of rates or compliance with other reasonable requests of citizens. In the event of a desire for municipal ownership this board could act as a mediator and conserve all interests equally.

I recommend, therefore, that gas and electric lighting companies, and the question relating to their organization, administration, and control, shall be placed in the hands of the Railroad Commission, care being taken to provide such limitation on their discretion as will secure due regard to the wishes of every locality and prevent the commission's sanctioning the creation of such corporations without the consent of the local authorities.

BANKING DEPARTMENT.

The number of State banks of deposit and discount has had a net decrease of seven during the year, the trust companies of two, and the savings banks of one. The total resources of the State banks of deposit and discount on Sept. 4, 1900, were $351,080,252. The trust companies reported a gain in resources from January to July aggregating $124,203,165, and the savings banks an increase of $37,460,061 in the same period. The statement may be made unreservedly that, as a whole, the banking institutions of the State are in excellent condition. The total resources of the State banks of deposit and discount, of the trust companies, and of the savings banks at the dates of their latest reports amount to $2,185,433,300, which is an increase of $121,116,072 from the preceding year.

On the part of some of the savings and loan associations in the State, among those which are classified as "Nationals," there has been a tendency to engage in business which brings disaster. Besides the payment of extravagant salaries to their officers, and a waste of money in maintaining luxurious offices at a large cost for rent, abuses of the gravest character obtain in some of these associations. Real estate owned by officers individually is purchased by such associations at prices advantageous to the management, but ruinous to the institutions. Speculative dealing is undertaken in real estate, which, even where the intention is honest, is almost sure to cause loss and embarrassment. Associations are given over to the control of a few men by agency contracts, under which all earnings above an agreed percentage are taken by the officers in lieu of salaries, and it goes without saying that the managers realize their proportion regularly in cash, while the shareholders generally get no paper profits. Withdrawals are paid upon a basis destructive to the hopes and interests of the persistent members. These and similar methods which, when not actually dishonest, are at least unwise and unsafe, cannot but wreck any institution which persists in employing them, and the record for the past year shows that several associations were sacrificed to them, having gone into liquidation through a receiver or otherwise, and subjecting many innocent investors to losses which mean embarrassment and hardship. Such practices ought not to be possible under the law, and legislation is recommended which will serve to prevent them.

STATUTORY REVISION.

In 1889 the Statutory Revision Commission was appointed to prepare bills for the consolidation and revision of the Statutes, (Laws 1889, Chapter 289.) In 1895 the commission was designated to revise the Code of Civil Procedure, (Laws of 1895, Chapter 1,036.) The commission began work upon the general laws in 1889 and since that time forty-eight of their general laws have been enacted by the Legislature. At the last session of the Legislature the commission presented certain new general laws and amendments to nearly all of the general laws previously enacted, which bills, in the judgment of the commission, were necessary to bring the general laws down to date. The commission also presented eleven bills as a plan for the revision of the Code of Civil Procedure. All of these bills introduced in 1900 were referred to a special committee of the Assembly, and upon the adjournment of the Legislature a joint committee of Senate and Assembly was appointed to consider them and report thereon to the Legislature of 1901. On Jan. 1, 1901, the Statutory Revision Commission went out of existence by legislative enactment, (Laws of 1900, Chapter 964.) The plan of code revision proposed by the Statutory Revision Commission has been disapproved by Bar Associations of the State on the ground that it does not purport to revise the practice provisions of the present code. The plan proposed by the committee contemplates the removal from the Code of Civil Procedure of all the provisions now relating directly to practice and the assignment of this material to a proper place in the general laws and to make such obviously necessary changes in pleading and practice as may be agreed upon.

I am informed that the revision of the general laws reported by the Statutory Revision Commission is not based directly upon the session laws, and I believe that no revision can be complete which does not take into account the entire field of legislation and dispose of all laws. Our laws should not remain in their present confused condition. To this end I suggest that a special committee be appointed in each house of the present Legislature to take charge of the bills referred to the Joint Committee last session; and further recommend that a special committee be appointed to complete the revision of the Code of Civil Procedure and the statutes upon plans to be agreed upon by the committee in conference with the bar associations of the State, with instructions to report said revision to the Legislature of 1902.

DIVORCE LAWS.

During the past year a scandal in reference to the administration of the divorce laws of the State was exposed, and it became apparent that, in the hands of unscrupulous men, the law could be so manipulated that fraud was easily possible. Marital relations should be sacred, and only dissolved when statutory causes have been clearly proved. It seems to me that an amendment mandatory in its character should be enacted, which would provide that the service of the summons in such an action should be proved before and the case heard by the trial Judge in open court. This would correct the abuses now existing.

NATURALIZATION.

My attention has been called to the fraudulent use of naturalization papers in recent elections. A practice, which is more or less extensive, has grown up whereby naturalization papers issued to one man are illegally used by another for the purpose of registering and voting. The necessity for a remedy is apparent, and I recommend the enactment of an amendment to our present law concerning naturalization, so as to provide that the papers shall contain a description of the person to whom they are issued. This would make it possible properly to identify and prevent fraud.

EDUCATION.

The State's concern in the work of the Board of Regents and in that of the Department of Public Instruction is that the two should accomplish without friction the objects for which they are maintained. These objects, while distinct, are not conflicting. Each department is now in a satisfactory condition. Between them, it is believed, a harmonious temper now prevails. There are a few points at which the labor of the two is on parallel if not identical lines. That supplies no necessary reason for antagonism. On the contrary, it commends a mutual economy or exchange of effort. Public opinion will censure any policy or persons found to be the cause of occasion of avoidable discord between these bodies.

Each department will, I assume, set forth to the Legislature its estimates of its needs and its reasons for them. Each department can well make its executive officer its sole or main medium for communication with the Legislature. Results hardly short of scandal have marked a neglect of this course in the past.

I recommend the considerate treatment of the budgets presented by each department, especially in cases in which no needless increase of amounts is asked. A year of business, not of battle, of concert of action, not of contention, would be a year well spent in the State's educational field.

THE PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

The Pan-American Exposition, which is to open in Buffalo on May 1, has received the cordial support of both the National and State Governments. It should be your duty to aid in every way commensurate with the necessities in making this exposition such a success as will redound to the credit of the State.

Expositions of this character have a tendency, through the knowledge acquired of the resources of the various countries participating, to bring about an interchange of business that is of lasting benefit to the commercial interests of all. Our State is to be congratulated upon the enterprise which conceived and the success which promises to come as the result of this great exposition.

GENERAL.

The reports from all the departments will be submitted at the proper time for the information of the Legislature, and it is not therefore necessary for me to refer to them in detail.

The Legislature should at this the beginning of a new century aid in every way possible in the development and prosperity of the State. Economy should prevail, yet nothing should be done that may be regarded as inimical to the rights of the citizens and the vast interests we represent. Upon the Legislature the full responsibility must rest for the passage of all laws. It will be my aim so far as possible to aid in the work with which you are charged, withholding my official sanction only from such measures as may seem to me to be contrary to public policy. With a desire for the most cordial relations between the Executive and the members of the Legislature, I feel that I may at all times be assured that the objects for which we are striving have the highest motives, and the desire to give equal rights and protection to all interests that tend to the welfare and advancement of our Commonwealth.

B. B. ODELL, Jr.

GOV. ODELL'S DAY.

Sets Aside Some of the Practices of His Predecessor—His Message Well Received.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Gov. Odell began his first day of routine work as Governor of New York State this morning. He walked to the Capitol, reaching his office just as the clock struck 10, and promptly set about altering a number of things that were unalterable routine under Gov. Roosevelt. First of all he abolished the daily séances that have been held with the newspaper men for the past two years. Gov. Roosevelt used to drop everything and admit the correspondents at 11 A. M. and 5 P. M. punctually. Reporters hereafter will have to send in their cards the same as other visitors. In addition the Governor will not set apart a certain time every day to see miscellaneous callers as Gov. Roosevelt did. Indications are that public utterances from the Governor will be far less frequent than in the past because of these two new rules.

The Governor's first callers were State Superintendent of Prisons Cornelius V. Collins, Charles S. Francis of Troy, United States Minister to Greece, and Prof. William P. Mason of the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute of Troy. They came to press the candidacy of Prof. Mason for appointment as a member of the State Board of Health.

Senators Feeter, Brackett, Ambler, and other legislators called early and paid their respects.

The Governor's message pleased almost everybody. Special praise was bestowed upon those portions recommending a reform of the taxation laws of the State so as to raise revenue for the support of the State Government by other than district taxation; repealing the Ramapo Water charter; recommending a single head for the Police Department of New York City, and single heads for the Charities and Health Departments.

It was noticed that the portion of the message recommending rigid economy in the administration of the affairs of the State Government, and suggesting the abolition of a number of sinecures in the State commissions, was applauded most by members who have the least taint of being closely allied with political bosses. Politicians who hang about the "lobby" rail did not like the Governor's way of putting the thing at all, and they did not hesitate to say so. The legislative leaders, however, have made up their minds to stand by the Governor.

MR. COLER LIKES THE MESSAGE.

Controller Coler was asked yesterday what he thought of the message of Gov. Odell. He said:

"It is an excellent message and comes from a man who knows all about the State Government and the needs of the State. It is a plain business message, and I believe that Gov. Odell intends to carry out what he proposes. Nobody knows better than he what the State needs, and his remarks show that he evidently intends to take advantage of the great opportunities offered to him in his new office. I have only glanced over the document. I will speak in detail about it after I have given it careful consideration."

Protest Against Seating C. S. Adler.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—During the roll call of members in the Assembly this morning Assemblyman Julius Harburger of New York filed a petition on behalf of ex-Assemblyman Isidor Cohen of New York City protesting against the seating of Charles S. Adler, Republican, representing the Eighth New York Assembly District. Mr. Cohen was the Democratic candidate for member of Assembly in the Eighth District. Mr. Cohen, in his petition, claims the count was defective, and that the Inspectors refused to credit him with certain ballots that had been cast for him. Speaker Nixon referred the protest to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

First Deputy Attorney General.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Attorney General John C. Davies to-day appointed Henry B. Coman of Morrisville, Madison County, his first deputy, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge Coyne, at a salary of $4,000 per year and $1,800 expenses. Mr. Coman has been a deputy in the Attorney General's office for the past six months and has had charge of the franchise law tax litigation.

BUFFALO'S DIVORCE MILL.

Detectives Arrest a Lawyer, Charging Subornation of Perjury.

BUFFALO, Jan. 2.—A sensation was sprung in the alleged divorce mill case today, when detectives arrested David C. Fitzgerald, one of the lawyers alleged to have operated the mill, on a warrant issued by Justice Warren B. Hooker of the Supreme Court, charging him with subornation of perjury in procuring false testimony for the plaintiff in the divorce suit of Elizabeth Garlipp against August Garlipp.

The arrest is the outcome of the investigation of the divorce mill charges that has been going on in the District Attorney's office since the conference of the Supreme Court Justices at the City Hall on the charges. When Fitzgerald was arraigned this afternoon he pleaded not guilty and waived examination. Bail was fixed at $4,000.

Order in Chicago Gas Suit.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—Judge Kohlsaat, in the United States District Court, to-day issued an order in the injunction suit brought by the People's Gaslight and Coke Company, stipulating that the city shall not attempt to enforce the recently passed 75 cents gas ordinance pending the hearing of arguments on the case next week.

New Yorkers Buy Cincinnati Hotel.

E. N. Wilson of the Hotel Gerard and his son-in-law, M. M. Harms of this city, have purchased the Gerdes Hotel, in Cincinnati, Ohio, and are now in possession. Negotiations in the deal were conducted through Broker Matthew J. Ward.

NEW YORK LEGISLATURE

Full Attendance in Both Houses at Albany on First Day.

Members Hear Governor's Message and Speeches by Presiding Officers and Adjourn for a Week.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—The Legislature of 1901 convened this morning, with a full attendance in both Senate and Assembly. Elaborate floral decorations graced the desks of Lieut. Gov. Woodruff, Speaker Nixon, and the leaders of the majority and minority sides.

The feature of the session was the reading of the first annual message of Gov. B. B. Odell, Jr., which claimed the attention of the members of both houses because of its radical suggestions.

Next in interest to the message were the addresses of the presiding officers. In the Senate, Lieut. Gov. Woodruff's remarks were terse and brief. In the Assembly the address of Speaker Nixon was listened to attentively, for it outlined at considerable length the plans of the coming session, which promises to be of absorbing interest for divers reasons.

PROCEEDINGS IN BOTH HOUSES.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—The Assembly was called to order by Clerk Archie E. Baxter. A large floral piece of rectangular shape, with the figures "11" in immortelles and three gavels, signifying eleven years of service as Assemblyman and three as Speaker, rested on the Speaker's desk. It was the gift of several members and friends from Chautauqua County. Numerous other floral tributes decorated the desks of the members. The roll call showed but two absentees.

The balloting for a Speaker resulted as follows: Whole number of votes cast 146, of which S. Fred Nixon, Republican, of Chautauqua, received 104, and Daniel D. Frisbie, Democrat, of Schoharie, 42. Mr. Nixon was thereupon duly declared elected Speaker for the session of 1901. Mr. Frisbie, by virtue of his defeat for Speaker, becomes the leader of the minority.

The other nominees selected by the Republicans in caucus last night, as already announced, were elected in both houses.

SPEAKER NIXON'S ADDRESS.

Leaders Alids and Frisbie were appointed a committee to escort the Speaker to the chair. Speaker Nixon, in his opening address to the members, said in part:

"Since the adjournment of the last Assembly, we have had the impressive spectacle of the choice of Chief Magistrate of this great Nation. The majority was quite emphatic in this State, as well as in the Nation, and we find the majority of the dominant party materially increased in this Assembly. This is not a commission to legislate for the advancement of a political party regardless of the public interest, but should rather make us more conservative, more painstaking, more scrupulous in our action.

"Very important measures will come before this Assembly, and I trust they will receive your early and most earnest attention. The subject of an adequate water supply for the great City of New York is one of the important matters that has occupied public attention for over a year past, and it should be permanently settled this session that the city shall own its own supply, and if any corporation has acquired powers that might prevent any city or village in the State from owning its source of water supply, the charter of such corporation should be repealed and the people protected on their right to municipal ownership.

"In my opinion the time has come when in view of the great personal and corporate wealth of the State, there should be no longer a State tax upon real estate. Some way should be found, and I believe can be devised, to raise all the necessary revenue for State expenses without levying a dollar upon real estate. There would still be plenty left for real estate to pay in meeting local expenses, which are quite generally burdensome.

"Relative to the canals, the commercial supremacy of the State of New York is a matter of pride and personal interest with us all. A stupendous plan to preserve or enhance that supremacy, regardless of the amount of expenditure required, should not be hastily adopted, lest it prove an investment involving such a heavy burden or debt and interest and annual expense that the burden upon taxpayers will more than offset all the benefits that may be derived. On the other hand, I trust that no such proposition may be considered unfavorably solely because all counties may not be benefited alike.

"Serious questions will arise in the consideration of amendments to the charter of Greater New York, some of which have already been prepared by an able commission and others will no doubt be presented. It is a difficult problem to define exactly the proper dividing line between complete home rule and State control. Upon matters which concern only the city itself there is no disposition among the people of the State to exercise any State control; but the fairness of all general elections is vital to the rights of every voter in the State, wherever he may reside.

"The ideal police force would be one which should not be the servant of any political organization, but whose sole aim and ambition should be to protect life and property, to prevent crime and see that it is brought to punishment, and especially to see to it that the voice of the people shall be expressed at the ballot box with absolute accuracy and devoid of opportunity for even suspicion of fraud. This ideal can be easily attained with a police force properly organized and placed beyond the reach of partisan oppression. Partisanship is entirely out of place in connection with the control of the police force in any city, and especially where there are so many ramifications of politics as in the City of New York.

"In amending the Charter of Greater New York I suggest that it be done with a view of reducing the current expenses of that great municipality. New York City's annual expenses are now four times those of the State of New York. In the business world great combinations are frequently made with the purpose and result of more economical administration, but in Greater New York the reverse has been the result. A great city is simply a great business corporation, whose citizens are the stockholders, and the officers whom they choose are the Directors.

"In the past few years we have had earlier adjournments of the Legislature than formerly, and I still hold to the belief, which I have often expressed, that it is as easy to complete all of the work required of us in three months as in four, with proper attention to business early in the session. Especially I urge every member to get in the bills affecting only his own locality as early as possible, and then attend the committee meetings and see that such bills are reported and go on the calendar promptly."

After the reading of the Governor's message and the Speaker's address and the transaction of some minor routine business, at 1:25 the House adjourned until Wednesday, Jan. 9, at 8:30 P. M. The Speaker announced the appointment of Louis J. McKinstry of Fredonia as his clerk.

The rules of the Assembly of 1900 were adopted to govern the session for 1901.

MR. WOODRUFF'S SPEECH.

The Senate convened at 11:10 o'clock, Lieut. Gov. Woodruff standing in a bower of floral tributes. Bishop Doane offered prayer, asking for divine guidance and imploring the Almighty to preserve the Senate from error and ignorance, prejudice, and partisanship. Thirteen newly elected Senators took the oath of office, standing in a row in front of the Lieutenant Governor, who read the oath.

Senator Timothy E. Ellsworth of Niagara County was elected President pro tem. of the Senate, the Democratic members voting for Senator Thomas F. Grady of New York. They thus become the leaders of their respective parties on the floor of the Senate.

Lieut. Gov. Woodruff, in opening the session of the Senate, said in part:

"In the commerce of the Union all roads lead to New York, which is the gateway of our Nation's commerce with the world. The supremacy of our metropolis, and of the State itself, depends upon the improvement of our great natural advantages, and on the use that is made of the waterways and water powers which enrich every portion of the Empire State.

"At this, the most prosperous period of our existence, the problem that confronts us is, what can we do to promote this prosperity by helping the farmer, encouraging the manufacturer, and facilitating the commerce of the merchant, as our contribution to the present unparalleled development of the United States? Let us keep abreast of the onward march of the Nation under the administration of President McKinley by supporting the able and economical government which will characterize the administration of Gov. Odell."

The message of Gov. Odell was received at 12 o'clock and was read by the Clerk. It occupied twenty-two minutes, and on motion of Senator Ellsworth it was laid on the table.

The Senate concurred in the Assembly resolution to adjourn until next Wednesday.

ANTI-RAMAPO BILLS.

Measures Introduced in the State Senate and Assembly.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Senator Slater, in the Senate, and Assemblyman Morgan, in the Assembly, introduced two anti-Ramapo bills this morning. Both measures are the same in text as prepared by the Merchants' Association of New York and printed several days ago. The first bill is very brief. It reads:

Chapter 985 of the Laws of 1895, entitled "An act to limit and define the powers of the Ramapo Water Company," is hereby repealed.

The provisions of the second bill are, in effect, that Section 472 of the Greater New York charter is amended so that the Commissioner of Water Supply shall not be authorized to designate lands for water supply which is in actual use by other cities or liable to be needed by other cities, or which, in the opinion of the proper court, may reasonably become necessary for use by other sections of the State. The text of the bill relating to the details of condemnation is as follows:

The City of New York is authorized to acquire by purchase, lease, or otherwise, lands or water in any other State, or rights in, interests or privileges in, to or over lands or water in any other State for the purpose of supplying water to the City of New York.

Nothing in this section contained shall be deemed in any manner to limit the rights, property rights, power, or jurisdiction now possessed by the City of New York in relation to the possession, maintenance, operation, or completion of its present water system.

It is expected that the Cities Committees of both houses, that have these bills in charge, will report upon them early, and that they will become law within the month.

FOR A MUNICIPAL GAS PLANT.

Senator Donnelly's Bill Provides Maximum Price of 75 Cents.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Senator Donnelly introduced to-day his bill of last year, authorizing New York City to establish a plant for the supply and distribution of gas in New York City at a maximum price of 75 cents per 1,000 feet. The city is empowered to acquire land under or above water and also to acquire existing gas systems or plants, subject to terms approved by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. Condemnation proceedings may be brought if title cannot be acquired any other way.

The Commissioner of Public Buildings, Lighting and Supplies is to establish the system. The Corporation Counsel is to institute proceedings to obtain all lands or other systems required. The Controller of the city is asked to issue corporate stock necessary to provide for the cost of establishing the plant.

To Regulate Telephone Tolls.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—Assemblyman Sanders of Manhattan will introduce a bill regulating telephone tolls in New York City. The exact figure for rentals has not been decided upon yet, but sweeping reductions may be anticipated from this statement of the Assemblyman: "I believe the people of New York have been too long robbed by the telephone monopolists and I intend to try and effect a radical change."

OTHER BILLS INTRODUCED.

ALBANY, Jan. 2.—The first bill of the session was introduced by Assemblyman Bedell of Orange County. It provides for the improvement of the water supply of the town of Goshen. Other measures were:

Mr. FANCHER—The Litchard bill of last year, providing for the inspection of premises where tuberculosis exists, and appropriating $10,000 therefor.

Mr. SCHNEIDER—Providing for semi-monthly payments of county officers and employes of Erie County.

Senator ELLSWORTH—Appropriating $27,500 for contingent expenses of the Legislature.

Senator WAGNER—Providing for the incorporation of associations for lending money on personal property and to forbid certain loans of money, property, or credit.

Senator HIGGINS—Authorizing the use of not more than $3,600 of the appropriation of $20,000 for adding books to the State Library for the services of binders in the State Library.

Senator WAGNER—Amending the Atlantic Avenue Improvement act so that the board in charge of such improvement shall have no option as to when the work is to be begun or whether it is feasible.

POLICEMAN'S 3-HOUR CHASE.

His Quarry Followed a Roof, Fire Escape, and Trolley Car Zigzag Runaway, but it Failed.

Policeman Rosenfeld of the East Eighty-eighth Street Station yesterday arraigned in the Harlem Police Court a prisoner whom he had captured during the early morning, after a three hours' chase over housetops, through back yards, over fire escapes and fences, around corners, in and out of cellars, arresting the man at One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street and Third Avenue after a final spurt on street cars from Ninety-seventh Street to One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street.

The prisoner was Thomas McGuire, who has lived in the Melrose lodging house, at One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street and Third Avenue. He was seen by Rosenfeld at 3 o'clock coming out of the hallway at 1,755 Third Avenue with a bundle in his arms. When he caught sight of the officer he ran, and the long chase was on. For over two hours it led over roofs and down stairways in Ninety-seventh and Ninety-eighth Streets. The tenants in these streets are nearly all negroes, and the street doors are always conveniently open.

McGuire would enter a hallway, dart up stairs to the roof, and then down the fire escape. Rosenfeld was not far behind, and, although he occasionally lost sight of the quarry, he would soon see him again. Presently the fleeing man abandoned the stairs, roof, and fire-escape system, and, running to Third Avenue, jumped on a north-bound car. Rosenfeld had lost sight of the man, but was told by a pedestrian that he had jumped on the car. By that time the car was two blocks away, but Rosenfeld jumped on the car following, and, climbing upon the front platform, ordered the motorman to catch the car ahead. The race between the two cars started, and, although several passengers on the rear one made frantic endeavors to get off, the motorman would not stop.

At One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street the cars had drawn close together, and McGuire jumped from his car and ran. Rosenfeld did the same, and soon captured his man. The prisoner was then triumphantly marched back to the house he was originally seen emerging from with the bundle. Mrs. Emma Lacke, who lives in the house, identified several of the articles in the bundle as her own.

The prisoner was held in $1,000 bail for trial.

MINUTES 100 YEARS OLD.

Read at Meeting of the Mechanics and Tradesmen's Society.

The one hundred and fifteenth annual meeting of the General Society of Mechanics and Tradesmen was held last night in the Mechanics' Institute, in West Forty-fourth Street. A feature of the meeting was the reading by the Secretary of the minutes of the fifteenth annual meeting of the society held on Jan. 7, 1800. The minutes were read from the original minute book. These stated that a letter had been received from Aaron Burr, regretting his inability to attend the annual dinner and meeting. The minutes also stated that at the dinner sixteen "moral" toasts were drunk.

At last evening's meeting President Frank E. Conover was re-elected. The other officers chosen were: First Vice President, William M. Oliver; Second Vice President, Charles W. Hoffman, and Treasurer and Secretary, Richard T. Davies.

POLICEMAN DEAD FROM FALL.

McNiece Found With Fractured Skull in the Hallway of His Home.

Policeman Patrick McNiece of the West Twentieth Street Station was found early yesterday morning lying at the foot of the stairs at his home at 428 West Thirty-third Street unconscious and with a fractured skull. He was found by his son Edward, and taken to Roosevelt Hospital, where he died yesterday evening.

McNiece had for some time been assigned to the New York Hospital to take care of the prisoners there. He was placed in this position because he was subject to vertigo. He left the hospital shortly after 6 o'clock yesterday morning and went home. It is supposed that while ascending the stairs he had an attack of vertigo and fell to the marble floor of the hallway. McNiece had been on the police force twenty-one years and was to have been retired very soon under the age limit. He was married twice and had eight children, all of whom are grown up.

FELL FROM BURNING BUILDING.

William Barrett Probably Fatally Injured in Hoboken.

A fire which will probably cost a life occurred in Hoboken yesterday. The victim is William Barrett, janitor of the City Hall, who fell from the roof of the burning building, a three-story frame structure, at 206 Washington Street, occupied by Max Driesen as a clothing store. It is near the City Hall, and when the alarm was given Barrett ran at once to the scene. Why he went to the roof and how he came to fall could not be learned.

The fire burned out the interior of the building and destroyed most of the stock. Driesen estimates his loss at $8,000, with $6,000 insurance. The cause of the fire could not be learned.

NOMINATED FOR GOVERNOR.

The Rev. Charles H. Vail to Head Socialist Ticket in New Jersey.

The Rev. Charles H. Vail, who on Monday resigned the pastorate of the First Universalist Church, Jersey City, was on Tuesday nominated for Governor of New Jersey by the Social Democratic Party at a convention held at Central Hall, Jersey City Heights. He accepted the nomination in a brief speech, setting forth his views on Socialism.

When seen yesterday Mr. Vail said he had not yet decided upon his plans regarding the ministry.

"I intend, however," he continued, "to make a vigorous canvass for the political campaign. I will stump the entire State, and you may say that we expect to roll up a larger vote than was ever cast by our party before."

DIED IN HER MOTHER'S ARMS.

Infant Daughter of Hoboken Woman Passed Away on a Ferryboat.

A girl, thirteen months old, died in the arms of her mother, Mrs. A. La Crew of 511 Lake Street, Hoboken, while the ferryboat Hackensack was in midstream at noon yesterday crossing to Fourteenth Street, New York.

The passengers and deckhands were startled by cries coming from the women's cabin, and a rush was made to the place. Mrs. La Crew could not speak, but pointed to the infant which lay dead in her arms. She took the next boat back to Hoboken.

The police of West Hoboken, to satisfy themselves that the child died from a natural cause, made an investigation and learned she had been suffering from croup.

CHINA AND THE TERMS OF PEACE.

If any benevolence, or any wisdom, presided over and directed the counsels of the allies in China, it ought not to be very difficult to arrive at a solution of the present problem there, which is only, after all, an acute phase of a chronic problem. No Chinaman who has been exposed to the aeration of Western civilization, no such Chinaman as WU-TING-FANG, for example, would be able or disposed, we suppose, to deny that China must conform to the demands and the requirements of Western civilization. What such a Chinaman would be apt to demand, and, so far as he could, to require, would probably be that this great change should be made so gradually and gently as to bring with it the minimum of disturbance to Chinese ways of thinking. In other words, it should be accomplished with the least possible friction.

It really seems to us that the Chinamen who think in this way have somehow obtained possession of the Chinese Government which is discussing the terms of peace with the representatives of the Western world. The Chinese Nation at large has not been much troubling itself, we may reasonably suppose, about the question of foreigners. It is not likely that more than one Chinaman in a hundred has ever seen a foreigner. The foreigners have managed to constitute a "question" at the treaty ports and at the capital. There, we may suppose, the advantages, on the one hand, of foreign trade, and the objectionableness, on the other, of the manners of foreigners in general, and of foreign missionaries in particular, have been a favorite theme of Chinese discourse. But then every educated Chinaman, every even Chinesely educated Chinaman, must have been made aware that little Japan has inflicted a crushing defeat on big China, and must have learned that she was enabled to do this by her prompt and intelligent adoption of the lessons the Western world had to teach her, and that China had simply and stolidly refused to learn. And the lesson of the Japanese war must have been strengthened and deepened, to reflective Chinamen, by the fact that a mere handful of European troops, brought into China by the murder of a few foreign missionaries and of one Foreign Minister, swept away the Chinese defenses like so much chaff, and penetrated to the capital, whence they proceeded to send out "punitive expeditions" and terms of peace.

The punitive expeditions must have given the Chinese an equal intellectual admiration and moral contempt for the people who had invaded their country under pretense of teaching it a higher standard of morals. Whatever the derelictions of the Boxers and of official China may have been, and without question they have been very serious, they have paled their comparatively ineffectual fires beside those kindled in China by the torch of Christianity and civilization, as brandished by Field Marshal the Count of WALDERSEE and the forces under his command.

That, even since the punitive expeditions, the Government of China continues to show a desire to gratify the demands of the Powers may be held to indicate its weakness, and doubtless does so. But it seems to us also to indicate a change of heart which denotes that the statesmen who advised the murder of missionaries and the siege of the legations are no longer in command. Certainly the objections brought by the Chinese Government to the "irrevocable" terms of peace are so moderate and reasonable as to indicate a sincere intention to enforce the terms accepted without reservation or remonstrance. It is simply decent and proper that the number of the legation guards should be limited, to make sure that an invading and intimidating army shall not be introduced, under cover of the permission to maintain them. The dismantlement of the forts on the Pei-Ho, instead of their demolition, is also a compromise by which the Chinese Government "saves face" without diminishing the real power of Europe to protect itself. The nature of the Chinese exceptions to the terms is the best guarantee that China really means to observe the terms, when they are reduced to the form of a treaty.

MAKING FUN OF THE CONSTITUTION.

"Now, in studying the questions whether the new possessions are part of the United States, and their free, civilized inhabitants citizens of the United States," writes ex-President HARRISON in his article in The North American Review, "the Constitution should naturally be examined first." The ex-President's examination of the Constitution has given him a new title to fame. In the view of the anti-imperialists he is at once raised to the first place among expounders of that instrument, and those who used to speak of him with anything but respect in the days when he was President now exalt his name.

Although not hitherto known as a humorist, Mr. HARRISON has conceived the idea that he can best set forth his opinions by turning the Constitution upside down and asking people to see how funny it looks in that unusual position. Burlesque and travesty seem to him to be the most effective means of making his meaning clear.

Mr. HARRISON, pursuing familiar tactics, assumes the right to state his adversary's position, always a great convenience in controversy, for you can thus make the fellow odious for things he never dreamed of asserting and set up doctrines intrinsically ridiculous, and therefore most easily open to your attack. Of the three views of the Constitution which may be offered, he attributes to the supporters of our present policy in the Philippines the third and last, and, of course, the worst, which he thus presents:

> That the government we exercise in the Territories is not a Constitutional government, but an absolute government, and that all or any of the things prohibited by the Constitution as to the States, in the interests of liberty, justice, and equality, may be done in the Territories; that, as to the Territories, we are under no restraint save such as our own interests or our own benevolence may impose.

Nobody in the Administration or in its behalf has ever propounded this doctrine of the Constitution, but as it is an integral part of Mr. HARRISON'S travesty, we must let it pass, and see what he will do next. He proceeds:

> Within the States, it is agreed that the powers of the several departments of the National Government are severely restrained. We read that Congress shall have power, and again that Congress shall not have power. But neither these grants nor these inhibitions have, it is said, any relation to the Territories. Against the laws enacted by the Congress, or the acts done by the Executive, there is no appeal, on behalf of the people of the Territories, to any written Constitution, or Bill of Rights, or charter of liberty. We offer them only this highly consolatory thought: A nation of free Americans can be trusted to deal benevolently with you. * * * As to the States, the legislative power of Congress is "all legislative powers herein granted." (Article I., Section 1.) As to the Territories, it is said to be all legislative power—all that any Parliament ever had or ever claimed to have, and as much more as we may claim—for there can be no excess of pretension where power is absolute. No law relating to the Territories, passed by Congress, can, it is said, be declared by the Supreme Court to be inoperative, though every section of it should contravene a provision of the Constitution.

Now comes the fun. Having prepared the way by imputing to the Administration and its supporters views they never held, Mr. HARRISON proceeds to "outline a possible law," to draw up such a bill as Congress might pass for the government of the Philippines. His idea of a Constitutional argument on the basis of comic opera may be understood from his own analysis of his "possible law":

> Section 1. Suspends permanently the writ of habeas corpus in Porto Rico.
> Sec. 2. Declares an attainder against all Porto Ricans who have displayed the Spanish flag since the treaty of peace.
>
> Sec. 3. Grants to the native Mayors of Ponce and San Juan the titles of Lord Dukes of Porto Rico, with appropriate crests.
>
> Sec. 4. Any Porto Rican who shall speak disrespectfully of the Congress shall be deemed guilty of treason. One witness shall be sufficient to prove the offense, and on conviction the offender shall have his tongue cut out, and the conviction shall work corruption of blood.
> Sec. 5. The Presbyterian Church shall be the Established Church of the island, and no one shall be permitted to worship GOD after any other form.

And so on, until the Bill of Rights is all reversed, hung up by the heels to split the sides of anti-imperialism. It is tremendously funny, of course. It is also novel, coming from a great Constitutional lawyer. We may add our expression of doubt whether it would convince the minds of the Judges of the Supreme Court.

Of course, if Congress has full powers, it may with equal ease do just the other thing from that outlined in Mr. HARRISON'S "possible law." Congress, being the judge of the admission of States, may immediately admit each one of the Philippine islands, Guam, and Porto Rico as a State. It may invite them to choose Legislatures, elect United States Senators, send Representatives to Congress, and establish fully organized State Governments with full-fledged executive, legislative, and judicial departments. If Congress can take everything away, it can also give everything.

Has this phantom ever troubled the dreams of ex-President HARRISON? He is shocked at the awful prospect that the Bill of Rights may be annulled according to his travesty. Is his "possible law" any more probable than a law creating a dozen or a score of new island States in a bunch? Is not the new State phantom distinctly less absurd, less wildly improbable, than his phantom? Yet it has never occurred to him to shiver with dread of the nearer danger—a pretty good proof that his shivering at the other is a manifestation of a curable nervous excitement, which has been communicated to him from the excessively septic literature of anti-imperialism. The policy of the Administration finds abundant support in theories of the Constitution many times put forth by the Supreme Court. The present question is before that tribunal. It may decide for the Administration; it may decide against it. It is just as well to refrain from being shocked and to refrain from travesties of the Constitution until the decision is handed down. What will the victims of shock do if the court decides that Congress has the power to determine the political status of the new possessions?

THE DOCTORS AND THE "INSTITUTIONS."

So much of the communication made by Dr. AUSTIN FLINT yesterday to the Medical Board of Bellevue Hospital as is in the nature of a personal vindication may perhaps be dismissed as, though conclusive, superfluous. It stands to reason that the city could not secure gratis the counsel of specialists if, in addition to these services they rendered gratuitously, they were compelled by accepting these honorary posts to make the sacrifice of abandoning their private practice so soon as one of their patients became, for any reason, the inmate of a public institution.

The main point of Dr. FLINT'S communication, so far as the public is concerned, seems to us to lie in the plan of reorganization of the insane pavilion which accompanies it, and which he explains that he submitted to the head of the Department of Charities in 1898. If that plan were to be submitted now, when a great scandal has broken out in the department, it would seem to have been suggested by the scandal and to aim to avert its repetition. Seeing that it was drawn up beforehand, it is seen, in the light of what has occurred since, to have been the result of a wise prevision of what might result from a faulty system.

The gist of this scheme was the introduction of the principle of direct and responsible professional supervision. Two resident physicians were provided for the insane pavilion, who should already have served on and through the house staff of the hospital, and one of whom should always be on duty. Over them was to be a visiting physician in charge, who should be appointed by the Commissioner on the nomination of the Medical Board, and who should have power to suspend summarily, and subject to the approval of the board, any person employed in the pavilion, the suspension of a trained nurse to be reported at once to the institution with which the nurse was connected. It seems to be quite impossible that, with such a system of fixed and concentrated responsibility, such a scandal as that which has occurred at Bellevue could have been brought about. It seems equally impossible that, in the absence of such a system, the unfortunate patients of the institution and the public can have any effective protection against the recurrence of the brutal and horrible proceedings which have disgraced the hospital and the city. Nobody seems disposed to treat Mr. KELLER personally with harshness; but it is plain that the system under which the insane pavilion is now conducted threatens a continuing crop of scandals. The Medical Board is not a complete public protection, for the reason that its members are all more or less interested in the great professional schools which have grown up around a municipal institution. They have been attracted by the opportunities for scientific investigation which such an institution affords, but which, under the present system, a Commissioner whom the Medical Board displeased could withdraw by a stroke of the pen.

The radical and permanent remedy seems to be that proposed by the Commission for the Revision of the Charter, namely, to adopt, for these public institutions, the same system of government by Trustees which has been found effective in the unofficial charities which seem to be in no danger at all of purveying any like scandals with those which have fixed the public attention on Bellevue.

THE AUSTRALIAN FEDERATION.

Last Tuesday the Commonwealth of Australia came into existence, and thereby were established new bonds of relationship between a sovereign and subjects occupying a remote colony. It is the third step in the development of the British Empire as a political institution. It is good to recall at this time that with the first step—the recognition of the rights of Crown colonies—the name of our own FRANKLIN is associated. In 1767, before the bar of the British House of Commons, he expounded the British Constitution in regard to the relations between sovereign and colony in a way which, although ignored at the time, formed ultimately the basis of future colonial administration. On that occasion he refuted the idea "that all the King's dominions make one State," and proved by analogy that English "Kings have ever had dominions not subject to the English Parliament." Just one hundred years later the soundness of FRANKLIN'S doctrine was still further demonstrated by the second step, the establishment of the Dominion of Canada. And now the Federation of Australia, which is the natural evolution of FRANKLIN'S idea, not only reveals with added force his knowledge of the British Constitution, but it shows how clearly the American understood of what the British Empire might at some future day be capable. Near the end of his speech he said:

> Here appears the excellency of the invention of colony government by separate, independent Legislatures. By this means the remotest parts of a great empire may be as well governed as the centre. By this means the power of a King may be extended without inconvenience over territories of any dimensions, how great soever.

The British North American act, from which the Dominion of Canada derives its powers, provides that the Constitution of that Government shall be "similar in principle to that of the United Kingdom," the executive authority being vested in the sovereign of Great Britain and Ireland acting through a Governor General. The legislative powers are vested in a Parliament of two houses, the Senate, the members of which are appointed for life by the Crown, and the House of Commons, the members of which are elected by the people. The Constitutionality of measures is decided by the Queen in Council. The Constitution of the Australian Commonwealth, as far as internal matters are concerned, is similar at many points to that of the United States, the supreme will of the people being regarded as the source of local power. The franchise for the election of both Senate and House are identical and popular, and the powers of the central Parliament are limited by the State bodies, and not vice versa, as in the Dominion Constitution. Questions of constitutionality may be presented before the Queen in Council, yet these questions are limited "to cases in which other than purely Australian interests are concerned." In questions that are purely Australian, an appeal may be made only with the consent of all the contending parties. The appeal of all other cases depends upon the will of the Federal Parliament.

The great inter-imperial point of divergence between the rights exercised by the Dominion and those by the new Commonwealth is found to be in the fact that while the Constitution of Canada must be interpreted by the Privy Council, the Constitution of Australia may be interpreted, with certain reservations, by the Supreme Court of the Commonwealth. A great advance has therefore been made since 1867 in regard to independent government under the sovereign of the British Empire. And what the next step will be was clearly indicated by the discussions that surrounded the adoption of the Commonwealth bill by the Imperial Parliament. The establishment of the Dominion and the Commonwealth has invested the Privy Council with powers which are clearly beyond the capacity of a mere advisatory board of the sovereign to execute at the present day with becoming dignity and justice. It requires but a small sense of foresight to perceive that before many years a Commonwealth of South Africa will demand autonomy, when still further abnormal duties must devolve upon the Queen in Council unless, in the meantime, some radical change shall be made in the mode of testing the Constitutionality of colonial laws. The obvious solution of the vexing problem is to be found in the establishment of an imperial Court of Appeal, which, with colonial representatives, shall do for the federations what the House of Lords, in its judicial capacity, does for the United Kingdom. With the creation of such a body, the imperial federation of Great Britain will become an actual fact, although the prerogative of the sovereign, which was not questioned by FRANKLIN, may suffer thereby.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—Doubtless every regular reader of our esteemed contemporary The World was much struck with the aspect of that amiable journal on the first day of the new century. If the reader happened to be of a cynical turn of mind, the new face of an old friend may have recalled to him the cheerful cynicism of old Bomba, when his son and successor changed the uniform of the Neapolitan army from the Austrian white to the British red: "As you will, mio caro. Dress them in white, dress them in red; they will always run away." Of course, the results of Mr. HARMSWORTH'S taking charge of The World, if only for a day, though of high interest to all the readers of that print, are of concern only to its proprietor. In the confusion of immediate comment this fact was distinctly recognized, and many were the deserved tributes to the owner of The World for the confidence and magnanimity he showed in handing over his property for twenty-four hours to a visiting journalist, who, however, did not "show his power" to the extent of excluding, or even of cutting down, his backer's personal and signed article. But, at a gathering of Raines law clubmen, discussing the unfamiliar face of their favorite or second favorite journal, one of them told a tale which seemed to have some pertinence. It was a tale, as he explained, that had been told by ANDREW LANG of, and on the authority of, Dr. JOWETT, the famous Master of Balliol. Dr. JOWETT, it seems, was once stranded in a small town in the North of England, and compelled to dine at its one hotel. There was but one other diner in the coffee room, and the great scholar began his dinner in a gloomy solitude, presently punctuated by the pop of a champagne cork. This did not startle him, but he was somewhat moved by the pop of another within a quarter of an hour. And when, after another quarter of an hour, a third cork popped, his dignity could not prevent his curiosity from turning him around. As he turned, his eye met that of an unmistakable Caledonian, in the act of raising a glass of champagne to his lips, who somewhat confusedly explained: "Sir, I would hae ye to know that I am na traveling at my ain expense."

—In none of the numberless current enumerations of the nineteenth century's achievements has there been much, if any, direct reference to one of its special and not least important glories—the printing press. Of course, there were printing presses before the nineteenth century, but so was there printing before the fifteenth, and yet the fifteenth century gets all credit for the art of taking impressions from movable type. That is just enough, but it is equally just to credit the last of the completed centuries with the only printing press really deserving the name, the only printing press that meets the demands of modern civilization, and to no inconsiderable degree makes that civilization possible. It was not until the very close of the eighteenth century that iron was used in the construction of printing presses, wood having supplied before that all desired strength and rigidity. For some thirty years, however, the iron press remained a hand press, and it was not until the power press appeared that the art preservative became the art creative which it now undoubtedly is. To the power press we owe cheap books, which is much the same as saying books without any qualifying adjective, and to it in a particular sense we owe the newspaper of to-day. Now, the newspaper of to-day, despite all criticism, deserved and undeserved, is the most influential, and therefore the most important, product of the time. Without the power press, the newspaper would have remained an utterly different, and practically another, thing, and what the reader of THE TIMES, for instance, gets this morning for a cent he could not get at any price. So, with appreciable accuracy, it may be asserted that the printing press, with all its innumerable and inestimable consequences, belongs as much to the nineteenth century as does the telegraph or the trolley car.

—Continued reflection on the absence of Mayor VAN WYCK from Monday night's celebration at the City Hall, instead of suggesting excuses for his non-participation, changes one's feeling in regard to it into something very much like horror. For he who, without any sufficient or avowable reason, refuses to do what he is under many and strong obligations to do, and the doing of which brings to the doer a really enviable elevation to prominence, shows a brutish indifference toward the opinion of his fellow-men that is distinctly and profoundly shocking. It is hard to believe that Mayor VAN WYCK has no care whether New York thinks well or ill of him, and yet his habitual behavior is such as almost to compel that belief. In the long list of previous Mayors there are not a few names the owners of which were no credit to the discrimination of the city, but we are sure that even the worst of the lot would have tried his poor best to honor himself and those who elected him had fortune favored him with an opportunity like that which came to Mayor VAN WYCK. And it is absolutely certain that the Mayors, ranging from indifferent to excellent, would have been eager to seize such an opportunity, and that each of them, in accordance with his ability, would have won for himself all the admiration and respect he could, deeming no efforts to that end beneath his dignity or unworth his while. Would ABRAM S. HEWITT have had nothing to say to the people at the parting of two centuries and the completion of two millenniums? How about WILLIAM R. GRACE, or EDWARD COOPER, or WILLIAM F. HAVEMEYER, or C. GODFREY GUNTHER, or AMBROSE C. KINGSLAND, or PHILIP HONE, or CADWALLADER D. COLDEN, or DE WITT CLINTON, to mention only a few and almost at random of those who held the great office in the century that brought Mayor VAN WYCK into it? They and many another all cared deeply for the good-will of the people who had trusted them; it was not all one to them whether they were praised or blamed, and they did not consider their duty done, their privileges exhausted, when they had earned their salary by the performance, personally or by deputy, of routine and unavoidable tasks.

—What is the matter with The Buffalo Courier? While most people and papers are expressing wishes which are the next thing to hopes for general happiness, The Courier gloomily asserts that, as a rule, the young Americans in charge of great industrial enterprises are men of inherited wealth, and from this remarkable result of its observations it draws the deduction that "there is probably as little chance for brains without capital in the America of to-day as there is in Europe." Now, we have no particular reason for pitying the man of brains, even in Europe, for lack of opportunity to use them to the profit of himself and others, and as for the American, young or old, whose cerebral equipment is above the average, we have much and convincing evidence on every hand that he is in great luck to be alive here and now. "The America of to-day," indeed! Was there ever so good an America as the America of to-day? The Buffalo Courier is too hard to please. If it will stop to think a moment it will realize that, of all utterly hackneyed things, first rank is taken by adverse comparisons between the present and the past. Good but grumpy folks have constantly been making such comparisons ever since the beginning of recorded history, and probably ever since there have been good but grumpy people in the world. They have always been wrong, and they are wrong now. All pessimists are plagiarists, and the stealers of mistakes at that. The only real prophets have been and are the optimists.

PRINCIPLES OF TRUE DEMOCRACY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. J. de L. Ver Planck, in your yesterday's issue, asks what are the principles of Democracy. I have always been a Democrat, was a "war Democrat" when the party forgot one of its foundation principles, and went for "peace at any price," even to the sundering of the Union; was an anti-Tweed Democrat when many good men strayed into the "Ring"; was an anti-Greenback Democrat when our leading United States Senator, who seemed a stalwart of true principles, was carried away by the craze for bad money, and I have lately opposed the wild project of paying for the world's silver in gold at a ratio double its commercial value. So I think I have been a consistent Democrat, and am one of those who don't have to be told what is Democracy, but know by instinct and feeling, not by argument or guesswork.

The first principle is broadly expressed as the "rights of man," equality in law and politics, liberty to accumulate and keep property, and to aspire to any public station, but neither to use wealth nor station to oppress the less fortunate brethren. There is no Socialism in this, for the Democratic was an aristocratic party, but from it follows the restriction of great moneyed monopolies, called trusts, so that they shall not injure the individual, and a just enforcement of the old adage, "Take care of the poor, the rich can take care of themselves."

The second great principle was elevation to our form of government, including almost a worship of the Supreme Court, which was spoken of as the "balance wheel of our Constitution." The manipulation of that court by the Republicans who had no such veneration to make greenbacks a legal tender somewhat weakened this feeling of reverence; but respect for law and for established things is still largely a Democratic principle.

Economy in public expenditures. This reads like a platitude, as both parties assume to be economical, but it is far otherwise. It is the "day of small things" as opposed to the year of big things. To give an extreme illustration, Democracy is satisfied if the President rides his nag to the Capitol, hitches him to the front railing while he steps inside, and takes the oath of office. Republicanism expects him to ride in a coach and four to the blare of trumpets and the sheen of helmets and the thunder of horses' hoofs. Democracy means moderation in public buildings, and in National, State, and local expenditures, liberal alone in wages and salaries, but no "fuss and feathers" in any public matters. It stands for a homely, plain, and simple Government as opposed to an extravagant and imposing one. Probably a day of reckoning, when, I don't know, but somebody will know when it comes, because they will lose some of their hard-earned millions.

Like a good many other lines of trade, the coal business is being run by brokers, bankers, railroad men, &c. They know all there is to learn, and more, too, about the business, as they do about all they go into, but results tell. Steel rail was forced up to $36 per ton, pig iron to $25, nails as far as they could be driven. They are selling at a slight reduction now of $10 to $15 per ton. The same thing will occur with coal. Push anything beyond its value and it gets back again, and all the millions in the world cannot hold it. In the meantime the consolidation is living on the necessities of the people and adding to its wealth by reason of it. It is time a halt was called, and as every man, woman, and child is affected by the price of fuel, a "coal" party would be a very formidable one. VIVE LES COALERS.

New York, Dec. 29, 1900.

From these follow that one party favors a tariff that helps the wealthy manufacturer to levy tribute on the poor industrial, that it would give subsidies to ship owners out of the pockets of farmers and mechanics, that it would encourage great aggregations of capital that destroy individual enterprise, and would give the former immunities and advantages as against the latter.

Democracy stands financially for a National Treasury as against a National bank, and above all, for the best money that can be had. It opposed bitterly the legal tender character of the Government notes, which has brought such uncounted and unending woes upon our country, destroying even the popular idea of what "money" truly is. It did its best to defeat the resurrection of silver when it was thrust into our currency by a Republican Congress in order to favor the millionaire owner of silver mines. It was for the gold unit of value when the discovery of enormously productive silver mines depreciated the value of the silver one. It was and is and always will be for the best dollar to pay all men, and especially the poor man, who is fated to be robbed with every change of currency.

Democracy believes in no prohibition or sympathy laws. The individual may regulate his own life so long as he respects the rights of others, and the proper sentiment of the community.

Your correspondent asks where are these principles to be found, and have all Democrats and all Democratic platforms been true to them at all times. They are ingrained in the Democratic conscience, sentiment, and instinct, and whenever the party does wander away from them it gets defeated. Whenever it returns to them it conquers. ROBERT B. ROOSEVELT.

THE SYNDICATE NEWSPAPER IDEA

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You ridicule Mr. Harmsworth's idea of the syndicate newspaper for the twentieth century. Are the newspapers averse to the ideas of absorption and consolidation? The reorganization of The Associated Press gives some assurance that no new paper can be successfully established in the large cities. The organization of local news organizations increases the difficulties and expenses of the coalescing of the following interests into a two hundred million corporation:

The International Paper Company, controlling 80 per cent. of newspaper production.

The American News Company, controlling 90 per cent. of newspaper distribution.

The Mergenthaler Linotype Company, controlling 95 per cent. of newspaper composition.

Robert Hoe & Co., controlling 90 per cent. of newspaper printing.

Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies, controlling 100 per cent. of newspaper telegraph news.

Please remember that one New York daily has a considerable ownership in an Atlantic cable; that another New York property controls one publication in San Francisco and another in Chicago, to which it sends colored covers and magazine features and news; that a St. Louis newspaper is vitalized by colored covers and features and news from its New York connection; that a fourth New York paper attempted eight years ago to establish a chain of papers throughout the country on the news exchange basis, and that no New York newspaper is now under nominal individual ownership. The tendency toward concentration will ultimately induce newspapers in various cities to pool their earnings on an agreed percentage, thereby enabling them to curtail expenses upon a theory that thereby they may increase profits, without impairing editorial individuality or independence.

One hundred and fifty-seven newspapers of the country have combined in the American Newspaper Publishers' Association for mutual protection. The Scripps-McRae League, owning five evening papers in various cities, has ramifications and indirect interests in twenty other newspaper properties. Many newspapers have combined to stop returns; others have combined to employ special agents for the solicitation of advertising; even advertisers have combined to control prices for advertising. Four iron combinations are to-day handling a business that one hundred and fifty mills formerly produced. One oil company controls a trade that three hundred individuals formerly conducted. Thirty paper mills are now run by one man. Why, then, should there be any improbability in a consolidation of, say, twenty large newspapers under a common ownership, or under a pooling arrangement which insures to each of them a given percentage of the advertising revenues of a given territory? Mr. Harmsworth has seen these things and has made natural deductions. The public that was expected to boycott department stores may be relied upon to buy and to use newspapers that give the best returns for their money regardless of any hostility to combinations. THE MONOPOLY IN COAL.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Some years since a party was started in the West called "Grangers," who went for and compelled the railroad companies to change their mode of doing business by electing members of Legislatures, Governors, and, I think, members of Congress, and passing laws which convinced the railroad companies that they could not do just as they pleased when the people called a halt. From the signs of the times, it is now time that another party was formed to be called the "Coalers." In the matter of coal, the lines are being drawn closer and closer. The army of coal handlers is being eliminated to an alarming extent. The individual producer is almost wiped out in the anthracite and preparations are progressing rapidly to the same end in bituminous coal. The entire coal trade in both coals will be controlled by two railroad concerns, the Pennsylvania and the Vanderbilt roads.

That they are making combinations to cheapen the product to the people is all nonsense; they are doing it for the dollars that are in it. As a matter of course, they propose to do away with all the help in offices, all the middle men, all the brokers, and every man they can possibly do without. Ask the employes of the Pennsylvania Coal Company what notice they have received since that company was bought out, and how many of them were fired out at short notice. These people who are working the consolidations do not need money. They could not carry out their plans if they did not have millions to back them, but what of the poor devils who are pushed out? Who cares? There will be a day of reckoning, when, I don't know, but somebody will know when it comes, because they will lose some of their hard-earned millions.

Like a good many other lines of trade, the coal business is being run by brokers, bankers, railroad men, &c. They know all there is to learn, and more, too, about the business, as they do about all they go into, but results tell. Steel rail was forced up to $36 per ton, pig iron to $25, nails as far as they could be driven. They are selling at a slight reduction now of $10 to $15 per ton. The same thing will occur with coal. The Egyptian Papyri.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As some errors exist in the statements being made respecting the distribution of the 118 papyri recently donated by the Egypt Exploration Fund, allow me to say officially that the following allotment has been made:

To Columbia University, 16 papyri; to Vassar, 4; to Hamilton College, 3; to Yale, 16; to Johns Hopkins, 16; to Princeton, 16; to Harvard, 19; to University of Pennsylvania, 29. Jacob H. Schiff of your city sent to this office $125, which accounts for the extra papyri of Harvard, where the Semitic Museum is, and a special donation of $750 from a Philadelphia gentleman increased the donation to his university.

We need funds to go on with our great work, and to send antiquities to our museums and universities. Each subscriber of but $5 receives the fine quarto volume of the season, and the "Archaeological Report," both fully illustrated. Circulars furnished.

Blasting on the Palisades.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I notice in your issue of the 30th ult. a communication signed "G" to the effect that blasting is still going on on the Palisades. "G" refers to blasting across the river from One Hundred and Third Street. Will you please inform him that the Palisades Commission has no jurisdiction south of Fort Lee, the territory over which we have jurisdiction extending from Fort Lee north to Sneden's Landing. In this territory blasting has been stopped and none is now being done.

AS FAR AS I KNOW.

Thomas F. Porter in The Boston Globe.

"As far as I know," said a person one night,
"There is naught in this world but what is just right;
I have all I want both to eat and to wear,
The flowers I gather are fragrant and fair,
The birds in the trees always sing a glad song,
And as far as I know there is nothing wrong.

"All the people I know are loyal and kind,
And I am contented in body and mind;
I read about folks who are awfully bad,
About souls that are weary and hearts that are sad,
About children that quarrel and people who fight,
But as far as I know everything is all right.

"I read there are people who do many things
That on them the worst kind of suffering brings,
That women are wicked and men are untrue,
And sinfulness runneth society thro',
But as far as I know—as far as I know—
I cannot affirm that these stories are so."

The person who said that, as far as she knew,
Was a child of six years, and to her it was true;
O what would we give could we all say to-night,
There is naught in the world but what is just right!
That we have all we want to eat and to wear,
And that justice and goodness abound everywhere.

DRAMATIC AND MUSICAL

Clara Morris's Cruel Words About Her Contemporaries.

Viola Allen's Energetic Acting in Her New Melodrama—Young Actors Who Have Made New Hits.

The graphic quality, the vitalizing touch in the chapter of "Reminiscences" signed with the name of Clara Morris in the January number of McClure's Magazine make it easy and entertaining reading. But to one who remembers well the first performance of "Man and Wife," and the first appearance of Clara Morris in the little rose-tinted Fifth Avenue Theatre, it is amazing reading, too. Here, he reflects, is Clara Morris, the heroine of that hour, writing bitterly of the theatre and her associates in her hour of victory. Surely she has no cause to envy any of her contemporaries. When one recalls her dominance in that first company of Augustin Daly until, after "Madeleine Morel," she insisted upon being a star; when one recalls her frequently impolite way of treating her public, and her "guying" of parts she did not like, her supposedly pathetic glance backward seems rather bathetic. Miss Morris was truly a favorite of fortune in the seventies. There is no actress prominently before the public now, excepting one, and she, thank goodness, is English instead of American, who seems to know so little of correct artistic usage and the rules and traditions as Clara Morris used to seem to know. But she had intuitive power, and she deserved a large share of the applause she received. It was a continuous savo of applause, however, and it echoed for many years. Why should she now so bitterly tell the new public that before she had made her first hit she was not proclaimed a genius by her associates? Why because Kate Newton and Agnes Ethel and Fanny Davenport did not kiss her when she first entered the greenroom of the little Fifth Avenue Theatre does she assume that her decent linen gown brought insult upon her? Why does she revile the dead?

She had her hours of malignus triumph, and not one of the associates she now abuses (and she has good words only for James Lewis and George Chophouse Browne) ever got nearly so much of the public favor. Is it because her hour on the stage has passed that she is now so cruel?

One fact that has its humorous side strikes the old stager who glances over these "Reminiscences." Even at the outset of her career Clara Morris was an interesting invalid. She could not eat the night she first acted Anne Sylvester. She had an interesting case of pleurisy that very day and was covered with blisters. It was not until after she had become a sure drawing star that she took her medicine nightly in sight of the spectators, but she had begun training for that stage of her career in the very beginning.

Viola Allen is a prosperous star now. She draws great audiences wherever she acts. The charm of her personality seems potent with a large part of the public. But she does not act as well as she used to. Her work in the Crawford-Stoddard melodrama at the Theatre Republic does not lack force, but it does lack delicacy and subtlety of expression, and is too persistently vehement and restless to command much respect from an observer who takes dramatic art seriously and remembers the good promise of Miss Allen's early work.

As for the play, it is a brave pictorial show, and it contains some stirring melodramatic situations. Its second episode, the return of Don John to Madrid and his reception in the royal palace, is effective both pictorially and dramatically. The two next scenes are turgid, overwrought, and commonplace. But through them some admirable stuff of its melodramatic kind is led up to. The pictures are superb, and there is some good acting in the support.

Eben Plympton, for instance, denotes with sustained power and ripe artistic intelligence the fiendish traits of the bogey man, otherwise the King of Spain. But there has already been sufficient comment for one week on this subject, and the play, presumably, will remain on exhibition all Winter. It may frequently be referred to again without offense. The youngsters will all like "In the Palace of the King."

Three members of the Empire Theatre company deserve more notice for their acting in "Mrs. Dane's Defence" than they have yet received. Miss Ethel Hornick, until lately of the company at Daly's, has a disagreeable rôle as the mischief-maker, one that is wholly "unsympathetic" and rather thankless. But she bears it with dignity and skill and an appreciable sense of humor. Guy Standing has a character that is not at all showy as the young diplomat, who inadvertently gets Mrs. Dane into trouble and tries his gentlemanly best to help her lie out of it, but his acting is tactful and he makes the man interesting and positively likeable. He has done more "effective" work, but nothing actually better. Joseph Wheelock, Jr., has had a long line of addlepated youths to portray. There was getting to be a certain sameness about his work. Now he has to impersonate a sensible youth in love and suffering more or less for the sake of his passion and its object. He seems that very youth. There are sincerity, sentiment, and force in his acting.

Two of the lesser rôles are not particularly well done, which is a pity in so good a play, especially as the acting is generally so competent. And it is a pity, too, that Mr. Crompton did not find it worth his while to differentiate his newest clerical study. The Canon in "Mrs. Dane's Defence" is merely the Dean of "Brother Officers" over again, and, for that matter, clearly a near relative of the Duke of Broncborough in "Lord and Lady Algie." But enough of carping. "Mrs. Dane's Defence" is a surprisingly good play to get from Henry Arthur Jones, and there is reason to believe that some hundreds of thousands of folks in this community know a good play when they see it. This one is artistic and veracious.

Suburban theatres and playhouses in the outlying parts of the metropolitan district continue to multiply in London. One of the newspapers prints a map showing about thirty-five playhouses in London away from the centre of things, and the list is growing.

This suburban or outlying theatre also seems to be good property as a general thing. But the "combination system" prevails, and local stock companies are unknown within the metropolitan district.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

Florence Reed, a daughter of Roland Reed, will make her first appearance on the stage at Proctor's Theatre next Monday afternoon, in a sketch written for her by Sydney Rosenfeld. Miss Reed is only seventeen years old and takes this step, her friends say, in order to help support her father, who has been compelled to leave the stage by serious illness.

Elizabeth Tyree and not Katharine Grey has finally been selected to "create" the rôle of Selma White in Leo Dietrichstein's dramatization of Judge Grant's "Unleavened Bread." The play will be produced by the Liebler Company at the Savoy Theatre, Jan. 28. Miss Tyree formally resigned her position in the company of Daly's yesterday. She transfers her services to the Liebler management, while still remaining on the best of terms with the manager under whose gonfalon she has served for some years, Daniel Frohman. He has no good part in sight for her. Selma White ought to be a good part. Eleanor Robson will play Flossie Williams; Genevra Ingersoll, Luella Bailey; Margaret Fuller, Pauline Littleton; Alice Fischer, Mrs. Earle; E. J. Morgan, Wilbur Littleton; George Fawcett, Governor Lyons; George Woodward, Silas Parsons, and Morton Selton, George Williams.

LARGE POST OFFIC

THE GARTER FOR ROBERTS

Highest British Order of Knighthood Conferred on Him.

HE IS ALSO MADE AN EARL

Cheered by Great Crowds on His Arrival at the Isle of Wight—Private Audience with the Queen.

COWES, Isle of Wight, Jan. 2.—The steamer Canada, having Field Marshal Lord Roberts on board, anchored off Osborne at 11:45 A. M. to-day. The ships in the roads were gayly dressed, the sea front was elaborately decorated with bunting, and Venetian masts with festoons adorned the route to Osborne House. At the entrance to the grounds of the royal residence was erected a unique tribute of the Queen's appreciation of the Field Marshal's work in the shape of an arch of laurel. This was the first time such an arch had ever appeared there in honor of any subject of her Majesty.

A large concourse of people awaited Lord Roberts's arrival at Trinity Pier and landing. The Field Marshal landed from the royal launch at 3:30 P. M., which was the signal for deafening shouts of welcome. Princess Beatrice, in her capacity as Governor of the Isle of Wight, and the Duke of Connaught, representing the Queen, awaited Lord Roberts, whose arm was still in a sling as the result of being thrown from his horse in South Africa. He was warmly greeted, and the party started in royal carriages for Osborne House. The route was lined with troops and thronged with cheering crowds.

Lord Roberts stopped on his way at the Town Hall of East Cowes, where eulogistic addresses of welcome were presented to him. In reply, he said he regretted that his return was not accompanied by immediate peace. But, he added, while he feared that hostilities would continue for some time, he had implicit confidence in Lord Kitchener, and had no fear regarding the outcome. He concluded with a eulogy of the magnificent army of Greater Britain, all the components of which, he pointed out, pulled together splendidly.

The Field Marshal then resumed his drive. He entered the grounds of Osborne House by the Prince of Wales's entrance, and proceeded up the noble, troop-lined avenue to her Majesty's Isle of Wight residence. After a hearty reception in the Council Chamber by a number of Princes and Princesses, Lord Roberts was ushered into the presence of the Queen. His audience with her Majesty was quite private.

The audience lasted a quarter of an hour. Lord Roberts was then taken to Southampton by the royal yacht, and went on board the Canada, where he will spend the night.

Later it was announced that the Queen has bestowed an earldom on Lord Roberts, with a special remainder for his daughters. He was also made a Knight of the Garter.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Lord Roberts figures largely in the papers this morning, and there is a chorus of eulogistic editorials.

All call attention, however, to the serious position in South Africa and to the need of patience and moderation, and all appeal to the public to avoid, in what is certain to be a tremendous ovation to-day, any misplaced exaltation, and, above all, any repetition of the indecorous scenes that have disgraced the capital on former occasions.

The conferring of the Order of the Garter on Lord Roberts is a far higher honor than his elevation to an earldom. The Garter is the most ancient and highly prized of all the British orders, and the number of persons who can hold it is strictly limited by law. The majority of the holders consist of reigning sovereigns and members of the English royal family. The rest of the orders are divided among the most prominent of the noblemen of the United Kingdom. The late Duke of Argyll and the late Duke of Westminster were both "K. G.," and it is one of the Garters made available by their deaths that has been conferred on Lord Roberts.

An earldom is the third highest of the British titles of nobility, Dukes and Marquises taking precedence of Earls. The provision that Lord Roberts's new peerage is "with remainder" to his daughters is very rarely made. The technical definition of a "remainder" is a provision for the passage of a patent of nobility to a special successor or line of succession in default of male issue on the decease of a present holder.

In this case the provision means that the title can descend through the female line, and it is evidently designed to mark Queen Victoria's sympathy with Lord Roberts over the loss of his only son, Lieutenant the Hon. F. H. S. Roberts, who was mortally wounded while gallantly attempting to save the guns at the Tugela River, and died on Dec. 17, 1899. Before he died Lieut. Roberts was recommended for the Victoria Cross, and the Queen, as a mark of appreciation of the young man's valor and the services rendered by Lord Roberts to his country, took the occasion, when Lady Roberts visited Windsor Castle a few days before she sailed for the Cape, to hand her a small parcel saying:

"Here is something I have tied up with my own hands, and that I beg you will not open till you get home."

Lady Roberts found that the parcel contained the Victoria Cross, won by her dead son.

Lord and Lady Roberts have two daughters, the Hon. Aileen Mary Roberts and the Hon. Ada Edwina Stewart Roberts.

German Reichsbank Celebration.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—The Reichsbank celebrated to-day its twenty-fifth anniversary. The Directors and Central Committee met in its large assembly room, which was splendidly decorated with flowers sent by the leading Berlin banks. In the evening there was a banquet at the Savoy Hotel, at which many distinguished persons were present. The papers comment enthusiastically upon the jubilee. "The Directors of the Reichsbank," says the National Zeitung, "may justly contemplate with satisfaction the brilliant development of the institution. In its short existence the bank has extended its activities in a way which no other note bank in Europe can parallel."

Accidents from Berlin Street Cars.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—Considerable discussion has been caused by the manner of the death of Lieut. Gen. Pochhammer, who was killed yesterday by a street car. There have been numerous fatal accidents of a similar nature of late in Berlin, and astonishment is expressed that the authorities have not long since compelled the electric roads to introduce the American system of a protective netting, or fender. The Klein Journal asserts that Gen. Pochhammer's death has led Emperor William to order the appointment of a commission of experts for the study of protective contrivances, particularly American.

The Russification of Finland.

STOCKHOLM, Jan. 2.—Gen. Borikoff, Governor General of Finland, will demand, in the Finnish Senate, a more stringent law to prevent the people from criticising the Government. THE VENEZUELAN REVOLUTION.

CARACAS, Venezuela, Jan. 2.—The revolution headed by ex-Secretary General Peraza is without an echo in the country. He is said to be, with fifty followers, in the mountain district.

SAN JUAN DE PORTO RICO, Jan. 2.—Passengers who arrived here to-day on the Red "D" Line steamer Philadelphia, from La Guayra Dec. 30, say a serious revolution has broken out in the Maracaibo district of Venezuela. They add that the Government troops have defeated the rebels and arrested twenty of the leaders.

Another rising is reported to have occurred in the vicinity of the Orinoco. The United States auxiliary cruiser Scorpion left here yesterday to join the Hartford at La Guayra.

NO MAYFLOWER TEAPOTS.

Mrs. Walt Gives Information About Early Puritan Tableware.

"There is no chance of making a mistake in a Mayflower teapot," Mrs. Horace C. Walt told the National Society of New England Women in a talk upon "New England China" yesterday afternoon at Delmonico's. "No one can ever make a mistake, for there were no Mayflower teapots, as the teapot did not become a household utensil until 1695. The Puritan's early tableware was of wood and pewter. They clung to the latter ware much longer than their ancestors on the other side of the water, and much fine English pewter was shipped to America.

"One of the most important varieties of the old pottery to be found now is the lustre. The silver lustre has a special value, for it cannot be duplicated. The copper can be, and much of it to be found in antique shops is of modern manufacture. The silver lustre was made to imitate the old Sheffield plate, which was too expensive for the average purse, and was made in many beautiful designs. It is now more highly valued than the genuine Sheffield.

On the 24th of this month the society will celebrate organization day with an evening reception, to which men will be invited.

MRS. C. VANDERBILT, JR., GIVES DINNER DANCE

Entertains Nearly Two Hundred Guests at Sherry's.

Cotillion Led by Craig Wadsworth and the Hostess—The Favors Unique and Beautiful.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., who was Miss Grace Wilson, youngest daughter of R. T. Wilson, gave last evening at Sherry's an unusually handsome and well appointed dinner dance. The affair was really the first notable private dance of the season, and the event in consequence was one of more than usual interest to the modish world. It was also the first large entertainment that Mrs. Vanderbilt has given since her marriage.

The guests numbered 166. Mrs. Vanderbilt had reserved the second and third floors of Sherry's large building for the entertainment. The dinner was served in the large ballroom, after which the guests descended to the small ballroom on the second floor, where the cotillion was danced.

Mrs. Vanderbilt, assisted by her sister, Mrs. Ogden Goelet, and her niece, Miss May Goelet, received the guests. The receiving party stood under the chandelier of the large reception room on the third floor. This room was beautifully decorated with palms, roses, and azaleas. Mrs. Vanderbilt was gowned in pale green panne velvet, trimmed with lace, and wore her emeralds and diamonds. Mrs. Goelet was in white satin, and Miss Goelet in pink, trimmed with chiffon.

After greeting their hostess the guests, who began arriving about 8 o'clock, passed into the large ballroom, which was decorated with large rose trees, covered with American Beauty roses, arranged along the walls. The corners of the room were cut off by tall palms and potted plants, and the tables were also decorated by Hodgeson with American Beauty roses. The dinner was served at fourteen tables, seating twelve each. In the gallery, concealed by greens, Sherry's orchestra played during the dinner.

The menu was as follows:

Huitres.
Consommé de tortue.
Les hors d'œuvres.
Bass rayée, sauce mousseline.
Concombres.
Selle d'Agneau.
Petits pois. Pommes Nouvelles.
Terrapene.
Chaufroid de Canetons.
Poussins Mignons.
Jambon Glacé.
Salade.
Babas au rhum.
Glacé aux marrons.
Petits fours. Fruits.
Café.
Champagne. Apollinaris.

The cotillion was led by Craig Wadsworth, who danced with Mrs. Vanderbilt. There were a number of favor figures, and the favors were extremely handsome. They included gauze fans in black, white, and colors, spangled in gold and silver, with fan cases of colored satin, embroidered with flowers, for the women and silver pencils for the men. Another set of favors was gauze butterflies for the hair, and for the men metallic flies, beetles, &c. There were also metal clocks, in jeweled settings, for the women, and collapsible cigarette holders, in gilt cases, for their partners. Other favors were ruffs of roses for the women and roses, tied with ribbons, for the men. There were also opera bags of brocaded silk for the women and toy musical instruments for the men; suede pocketbooks, with clasps of turquoise, sapphires, &c., for the women and stamp cases in leather mounted in silver, for the men; white satin muffs, with frillings of gauze, and clusters of red berries for the women, and for the men jeweled orders. In one figure two men in livery rolled in gilt stands with favors of American Beauty roses on gilt wands. Sherry's Austrian Military Orchestra, led by Adolph Schuster, played for the dancing. A buffet supper was served in the banqueting hall after the cotillion.

There were many handsome gowns worn, and the wraps that concealed them as the wearers left their carriages and automobiles were not less handsome and effective. Mrs. Astor, who was escorted by Harry Lehr, wore purple velvet, spangled, and diamonds; Mrs. R. T. Wilson was in green brocaded silk, her ornaments being pearls and diamonds; Mrs. John Jacob Astor wore pearl gray, covered with spangled net; Mrs. Ladenburg was in pink satin, frilled with chiffon; Mrs. Ogden Mills wore white satin; Mrs. W. P. Thompson was in white and her sister, Miss Blight, wore pearl gray, veiled with chiffon; Mrs. T. Suffern Taller wore white silk; Mrs. Sidney Smith was in mauve; Mrs. W. D. Sloane was in white satin, and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish wore white net over white, trimmed with silver; Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Jr., was in lightest pearl, spangled, and Mrs. Charles Oelrichs was in gray.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The Winter season proper has begun with a rush. Generally it is dull the first week of the new year, but people came pouring into town yesterday from the different country house parties, and what with the dinner dance given by Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt at Sherry's, the wedding of Dr. Alexander Clarke and Mrs. William Burden at the Astoria in the afternoon, and the numerous dinners in the evening, the opera, and a few dances, it was a very active day.

***

To-day, again, brings a number of entertainments. This evening will take place at Delmonico's the first of the dinner dances which have been arranged by Mrs. Frederic de Peyster and other matrons. This will be a débutantes' dance, as the affair last evening given by Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt was for the young married people. The second Cinderella dance takes place at Dodworth's, and dinners will be given by Col. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. George Crocker, Miss Elizabeth Remsen, and Mrs. J. R. Harris. Mrs. R. L. McCurdy gives a luncheon for women at the Metropolitan Club and theatre parties preceded by dinners will be given by Mrs. Henry Hollister and Mrs. Spotswood Schenck.

***

In addition to these affairs there will be also many "at homes." Mrs. Edward Corse Hoyt and Mrs. Walter Stiles Hoyt, 12 East Sixty-seventh Street, will hold a reception, and Mrs. Charles S. Abercrombie, 25 Madison Square North, will have one of a series of dinners.

***

Mrs. Nicholas Fish, who has been in mourning for some years, will give to-day a large luncheon at her residence, 52 Irving Place. As at all the entertainments given by Mrs. Fish, there will be some delightful music after luncheon by professionals and amateurs.

***

The first hearing of "The Daisy Chain," by Liza Lehmann, who wrote the beautiful "In a Persian Garden," in this city will take place this afternoon in the Astor Gallery of the Astoria under the direction of Victor Harris. "The Daisy Chain" is a cycle of child songs by such poets as Almas-Tadema and Robert Louis Stevenson, and the singers will be Miss Marguerite Hall, Mrs. Seabury C. Ford, Mackenzie Gordon, and Myron Whitney, Jr. David Mannes, the violinist, will play during the intermission between the two cycles.

***

Mrs. William Street of 43 Park Avenue will give a dinner on Monday next, Jan. 7, at her residence. Mrs. Street gave a large luncheon on Monday last.

***

Mrs. Clarence Mackay has chosen Feb. 1 as the date for her dinner dance at the Astoria, which event was announced in this column on Tuesday. Mrs. John W. Mackay sails on her return to Europe on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse to-day. She will go immediately to Rome on her arrival in Europe, where she will spend the Winter. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mackay will go abroad early next Spring, and will visit Mrs. Mackay, Sr., in London.

***

The engagement, announced in Washington, of George Woolsey, son of the late Edward Woolsey of Astoria, L. I., and Miss Esther Hunt, daughter of the late Richard M. Hunt, is of much interest to New Yorkers. Mr. Woolsey's mother was Miss Smythe. She is a sister of Mrs. William P. Jaffray. Some ten years ago Mrs. Woolsey secured a divorce from her husband and married Edward Padelford. Mr. Padelford was himself divorced, his wife having been Miss McPheeters of Baltimore. The first Mrs. Padelford (Miss McPheeters) is a well-known figure in London society, where she has just introduced her daughter. Edward Woolsey, after his divorce, married a Kentucky woman, who survives him. The Woolsey property at Astoria, which for many years was in a depressed condition, has greatly appreciated in value, and Mr. Woolsey's sons have become wealthy through it.

There is uncertainty as yet as to the name that will be given the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt at her christening. It had been decided to call her Virginia, after her mother, but it is understood that other councils advised one of two other names being selected, and that these prevailed, to the extent that final decision on the matter was postponed. The story that the infant was to be christened at a private house at Hempstead on New Year's Day was absurd on its face, as the rules of the Roman Catholic Church, to which Mrs. Vanderbilt belongs, forbid the christening of infants except in church. Sometimes a christening can be performed at home, through a dispensation, but this is only granted in cases of illness or necessity, and the child so christened must be afterward brought to church for a second ceremony. No dispensation was applied for by Mrs. Vanderbilt for her daughter's christening at Hempstead. The christening will take place in this city at an early day.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gray Park (Miss Elizabeth Sweitzer of Pittsburg) gave a dance for her daughter, Miss Mary S. Park, last evening at her residence, 47 Fifth Avenue. Miss Park, who is not yet out, will not be introduced for two years. There were at the dance, however, besides the younger set, a number of débutantes and older men. The guests, who numbered 150, were received by Mrs. Park, who was gowned in white satin draped with tulle and pailletted in silver. Miss Park, in pink crepe de chine, with yoke and sleeves of point d'esprit, the corsage finished by a fichu of lace, and Miss Krumbaar of Philadelphia, who was in white satin, trimmed with duchesse lace and pink roses. The immense parlor of the large, old-fashioned mansion was elaborately decorated with Christmas greens and holly. The chandeliers were masses of mistletoe, and garlands of greens and holly draped the mirrors and the large columns. The dancing, to the music of Brooks & Denton's quartette, was general, began about 9 o'clock and ended about 11, when a supper was served by Sherry. By 1 o'clock the young people had all gone. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Pease, the Misses Eleanor Morris, Beatrice Crosby, Gladys Crosby, Adeline Havemeyer, Helena Rutherfurd Ely, Helen White Stevens, Constance Pratt, Dorothy Hinckley, Nellie Hard, Molly Lefferts, Katherine Barney, Anita Bourne, White Peabody, Lulu Peters, Kate Richardson, Betty Auchincloss, Cornelia Harriman, Ruth Ashmore, and Anson W. The "Flight into Egypt," as the annual hegira of wealthy Americans to the Orient has been wittily dubbed, does not promise to be as large this Winter as it was last. The bookings for the Mediterranean boats during the next two months are, of course, large, but one hears of few well-known New Yorkers who are going to the land of the Pharaohs. Ex-Secretary Whitney is one of the few who will "do" the Nile this Winter. On the other hand, the American Winter resorts, and especially Florida and Aiken, will probably have the most prosperous season in their history. Just so soon as the January balls are over there will be a rush to the South, Jekyl Island in it, be especially favored this Winter. Accommodations at the clubhouse there are already in demand, and the cottages will all be occupied. Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gould will be in the King cottage, which Mr. Gould has purchased, and will entertain there a number of house parties.

Among others booked to sail to-day on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse for Cherbourg, Southampton, and Bremen are Mr. and Mrs. George Fales Baker, who were married on Tuesday in Philadelphia; James T. Du Bois, Howard M. Hartshorne, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Dyer, Jr., and Miss Swan, Capt. Fritz Grahm, Royal Swedish Navy; Mrs. John W. Mackay, Prof. Alexander Agassiz, Daniel Frohman, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Williams and family.

The New York, which sailed for Southampton yesterday, had booked among others the Earl of Clonmel, Paul Arthur, Mrs. William D. Kelly, Dr. E. S. Niles, Mrs. W. Palmer, and Frank T. Ryan.

MR. VANDERBILT AT NEWPORT.

Spends the Day with Miss French Completing Wedding Arrangements.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Jan. 2.—Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt arrived in Newport by the early morning train on a flying visit from New York. As usual, when in Newport, he staid at the Muenchinger King cottage. Early in the morning he went to Harborview, where he and Miss French spent a very busy day making final arrangements for their wedding. Mr. Vanderbilt also went to The Breakers, his mother's villa, to see what progress was being made in the work of opening the place.

Mr. Vanderbilt and Miss French visited the vault in the Aquidneck National Bank where their wedding gifts are deposited for safe keeping. They were alone and remained half an hour examining gifts already received. This evening they took a drive through Newport and into the country, after which Mr. Vanderbilt left for New York to complete arrangements for his bachelor dinner Saturday.

THE OPERA SEASON.

Wagner's "Flying Dutchman" Brought Forward Again.

Wagner's opera, "Der Fliegende Holländer," was brought forward at the Metropolitan Opera House last night. The work was sung last season, but has not figured extensively in the repertory of the institution. There was a time when this opera was regarded as one of the few works from the pen of Wagner acceptable to the general public, but this time has gone by, and it may fairly be said that "Der Fliegende Holländer" is more in danger of losing its place in the established list than any other work of its author. The reasons for this are not at all difficult to discern. The opera is extremely gloomy in its prevailing moods, the story is one of little conviction, and the fact that the leading male personage is a baritone instead of a tenor is decidedly against general favor. The taste of the local public is especially inclined to works in which a graceful or robust hero is associated with a fascinating heroine in the delivery of honeyed love duets, and these elements are wanting in "Der Fliegende Holländer."

Furthermore, most of the music is distinctly below the level to which the poet-composer's other operas have accustomed us, and the naïveté of much of the writing can in these times of advanced musical discrimination evoke only amiable smiles. It is possible that with some special effort to make much of the choral and scenic features of the opera it might still be made attractive, but in these matters the Metropolitan follows time-worn traditions, trusting to the powers of the principal singers to hold public attention. The singers heard last night were Mme. Gadski as Senta, Mr. Bertram as the Dutchman, Mr. Blass as Daland, Mr. Dippel as Eric, and Mr. Bars as the steersman. These singers are quite capable of discharging the duties imposed upon them. Mr. Bertram made his first appearance here last season as the Dutchman, and his interpretation was at that time praised in this place. The part is excellently suited to a display of the good qualities of his voice and style, and he sings and acts the rôle with understanding.

Mme. Gadski's Senta is altogether satisfactory. The music lies well for her, and her communication of its dramatic content is direct and unaffected. Her performance did not differ last night in any particulars from those which she has heretofore given, and it was received with evidence of favor by the audience. Mr. Robert Blass, the American basso, who has already demonstrated his right to a place in the Metropolitan company, added another to his list of creditable operatic impersonations as Daland, and Mr. Dippel, always a conscientious artist, sang Eric with spirit and feeling. It would not be strictly true to say that the chorus was satisfactory, but it was good as it generally is at the Metropolitan. The orchestra played with vigor, and Mr. Damrosch conducted with sympathy and authority.

GRAND OPERA NEXT WEEK.

Management Has Arranged an Unusually Interesting List.

The list of operas for next week at the Metropolitan Opera House promises to be very satisfactory to music lovers. Three of the performances scheduled are "Aïda" for Monday, "Lohengrin" for Wednesday, and "Faust" for Saturday matinée, all of which will have Jean de Reszke in the leading tenor rôles, while the operas in the order named will present Mme. Gadski as Aïda, and Signor Scotti will sing Amonasro. Wednesday evening's cast will be a repetition of last Monday's performance, except for a change in the rôle of Telramund, when David Bispham will make his first appearance this season with the company in New York.

Active rehearsals are daily being held for the first performance of "Le Cid," which Mr. Grau proposes to give on either Monday or Wednesday evening of the week beginning Jan. 14. It is at this performance Mlle. Breval, the new prima donna, who is expected to arrive here a passenger on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiserin Maria Theresa, Saturday, will make her first appearance, with Jean de Reszke in the tenor rôle.

Considerable speculation has been indulged in by those interested in musical affairs as to what will become of some of the principal members of the Metropolitan English Opera Company when that organization disbands in Washington on Jan. 25. Philip Brozel, the leading tenor of the company, who proved quite successful, holds a personal contract with Maurice Grau instead of with the company, and it was said that probably through this he will become identified with the Grau forces. It was also stated at the Opera House last evening that many requests have been made for "Carmen," which Mr. Grau would have been unable to give owing to the fact that he has no available soprano. It is more than likely, therefore, that Mlle. Zélie de Lussan will rejoin the company.

Another former member of the Grau forces who it was said was transferred to the English company for this season, and who will very likely return, is Lempriere Pringle, the basso.

TO WITHDRAW "MISTRESS NELL."

Managerial Difference at Savoy Leads to Change of Plans.

The successful engagement of Miss Henrietta Crossman as Nell Gwyn in "Mistress Nell" at the Savoy Theatre will terminate three weeks from next Saturday night. Manager Maurice Campbell desires to withdraw his star from New York, while she is playing to nearly the capacity of the theatre at every performance. He stated last night that he is influenced in this decision by a slight difference between Alfred Aarons, manager of the Savoy, and himself.

The final arrangements for Miss Crossman's tour of the important cities were completed as soon as Mr. Campbell's decision was reached. The one hundredth performance of the play took place last evening.

JUDGE FOSTER ON EXTORTION.

Refuses to Dismiss Indictments Against Policeman and Woman.

Judge Foster, in General Sessions yesterday, denied the motion to dismiss indictments now pending against Policeman William Spolasco, formerly attached to the General Sessions Court squad, and Mrs. Susie Greenwald, charging both with attempting to extort from Mrs. Elizabeth Fitzgerald, a Tombs prisoner, money which the two asserted would be used with Judge Newburger and District Attorney Gardiner to effect her release. This alleged attempt was made last Summer and the indictment was returned in September. Judge Foster, denying the motion, says:

"In my mind it is entirely clear that this case should be given the greatest possible publicity, to the end that the people of this community may know whether or not justice is on sale or whether an attaché of this court has represented it to be so. The people are entitled to the fullest possible knowledge as to whether or not their servants are discharging their duties according to law. The charge against these defendants should not, therefore, be disposed of on any mere technicality. Public interests and the furtherance of justice alike require the publicity of a trial, so that the whole truth as to these serious accusations may be known."

Spolasco is said to have told Mrs. Fitzgerald that for $2,000 he could effect her release. Five hundred dollars of this he represented was to go to Judge Newburger, $250 to District Attorney Gardiner, and $100 to John Carroll, a subpoena server.

LAWSON WANTS WATSON

Boston Yacht Owner Not Interested in a Centreboard Boat.

CAPT. HAFF IN COMMAND

Copper King Is Not In Syndicate to Build Another Yacht for America's Cup Races.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—The latest development in the cup-defending yacht line to-day was a statement of Thomas W. Lawson, issued this evening, giving prominence to two things; first, his desire to have Capt. Watson on the new boat; second, the repudiation of all claims that he is interested in the wooden centreboard craft that Hanley of Quincy Point wants to build. The statement in full:

"I have just made Capt. Watson an offer to become reserve and advisory Captain of the new boat. The offer was satisfactory to him, and he would have accepted it if he had not been under contract to command the Constellation next season. Mr. Skinner being abroad, nothing further can be done until his return. In the meantime I have agreed with Capt. Watson that my offer will hold good until such time as it can be definitely settled. Therefore, nothing can be done now in regard to an advisory and reserve skipper. All other matters in regard to the manning of the boat I have left in the hands of Capt. Haff.

"In regard to the story that I am to be one of the syndicate to build another boat, I know nothing whatever about this matter, have never seen any of the parties interested, and have not been in any way connected with the project, although I would be pleased to have one or more additional boats built, that we may be the surer of successfully defending the cup."

CUP DEFENDER'S PLANS.

Length and Beam of New Yacht Greater Than Two Previous Victors.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Jan. 2.—The Evening Telegram to-day printed illustrated plans of the new Herreshoff cup defender, and says in regard to them that the length and beam of the new boat will be greater than the Columbia's or the Defender's, while the draught will be less, the form easier, the power largely increased, and the speed estimated fully eight minutes better over a thirty-mile course than the Columbia's.

Experimenting with the broader beam in the seventies last June, Designer Nat Herreshoff found that it proved eminently satisfactory. In fact, the seventies covered the cup course in less time than the Columbia or the Shamrock I. in any of their trials.

This convinced Capt. Nat that the day of the wide-beam yacht had not gone forever, and in the new defender, while sticking to the fixed centreboard type he is planning return more reliance upon the beam and reduction of the hulbed fin than upon any other feature of the yacht's original lines.

The keel is not so deep by half a foot and no thicker than the Columbia's at the widest part, just abaft the forefoot. From a diameter of about 34 inches at the shoulder it sweeps back to where the sternpost will be fixed in easy lines to a width of 6 inches.

Its greatest diameter should be lower than the Columbia's and placed fully two feet forward of the point where the Columbia's keel shows greatest weight. The change is supposed to give even more sail-carrying power than quickness in stays, which is its principal object. From the top of the keel forward the bronze stem will rise gently outward to a bobstay, and then turn upward at a sharper angle than the Columbia's bow shows.

Shamrock II. to be Well Tried.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—British yachtsmen are preparing to give Sir Thomas Lipton every assistance in thoroughly testing the Shamrock II. Kenneth M. Clark of Paisley has purchased C. L. Rose's Distant Shore principally for the purpose of using her as a "trial horse" with the new challenger. Capt. Hogarth will be the skipper of this cutter, designed by Watson and built in 1900.

James Coats, with similar intent, has practically completed negotiations for the purchase of the Valkyrie III. With these two and with the additions of the Shamrock I., the Syburite, and the Meteor, the new cup challenger will be tested with a class of yachts such as no previous British competitor ever met.

Edward Kelly's New Yacht.

The order has been placed by Edward Kelly, and L. D. Huntington is building a new yacht, which, by Mr. Kelly's plans, will be a duplicate, on a larger scale, of the twenty-five-footer Rochelle, which Mr. Kelly sailed last season. The new boat's dimensions are to be 74 feet over all, 44 feet on the water line, 8 feet draught, and 15 feet beam, with a fin keel of bronze plate, tipped and weighted with lead. She is intended to spread about 3,300 square feet of sail. The new vessel is designed to race in the fifty-one-footer class, and is being built with a view to competing against the Herreshoff-built boats Altair and Shark, the yacht Herreshoff is to build for J. R. Maxwell, and Syce.

Knickerbocker Billiard Tourney.

Dr. A. B. Miller defeated Albro Atkin last night in the fourteen-inch balk line billiard championship tournament of the Knickerbocker Athletic Club. As Norris won the championship last week, the contestants are now playing for second and third honors. The game was the longest one thus far of the series, 87 innings being necessary for Miller's 300 points. He made one good run of 55. Atkin only scored 189 points. The scores:

Society on the Tanbark.

The weekly music ride of the Brooklyn Riding and Driving Club took place last night in the big clubhouse on the Park Circle, and some most excellent riding was seen. The formations of the mounted couples were well executed under command of Riding Master Harry Taylor, while a string orchestra in the gallery rendered appropriate selections.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Hubbs led the ride. Then followed a most amusing umbrella and pumpkin race, which John Pinkerton finally won, with C. Schwan second and J. Gilmore third.

ENTRIES FOR STATE RACES.

Events Closed Yesterday Promise Well —New Century Nominations.

Entries for the stakes and great handicaps, to be run at Spring and Fall meetings of the Brooklyn and Coney Island Jockey Clubs and the Brighton Beach Racing Association, closed yesterday, and nominations already have been received in such numbers that there is every promise for an unusually large number of horses in all the more important events. Early in the day entries had begun to come in, though the stakes remained open until midnight, and entries mailed anywhere in the world and postmarked before midnight of Jan. 2 will be received. For the great handicaps, the Brooklyn, Suburban, and Brighton Beach, all at one mile and a quarter, for three-year-olds and upward, with a guaranteed value of $10,000 each, the number of entries was about equal. It will require not less than a week for all to come in, as many horsemen who will race in New York this year are wintering and racing horses in San Francisco. Among the horses whose entries have already been sent in are most of the prominent ones of the handicap division of last year.

That the great old Ohio mare, Imp, is to be campaigned again, as was announced in THE NEW YORK TIMES several weeks ago, is established by the fact that she is among the horses early nominated for the classic races of the coming season. The entry again is in the name of Harness & Brossman, who raced her last season. It has been stated that Daniel Harness, breeder and part owner of Imp, was dissatisfied with the way she was handled by Trainer Brossman, and had arranged to have Peter Wimmer train her in 1901. As Trainer Wimmer already has a large stable to handle, however, it is not probable that he will make the mare, and at present it looks as if her old trainer, Charles Brossman, again will have charge of her. Kinley Mack, winner of the Brooklyn and Suburban last year, was reported broken down after he reached Kentucky on his retirement last season, but Eastin and Larabie evidently expect him to train on, for he again is in the handicaps.

The Coney Island Jockey Clubs yesterday announced the list of horses entered for the new $10,000 Century Stake, for three-year-old horses and upwards, weight for age, at one mile and a half, which closed earlier, and will be run at the Sheepshead Bay Autumn meeting. The nominations are as follows:

Perry Belmont's Ethelbert, 5 years; Easton & Larabie's Kinley Mack, 5; F. D. Beard's Prince of Melbourne, 4; A. L. Aste's Jack Point, 5; Harness & Brossman's Imp, aged; W. C. Whitney's Ballyhoo Boy, 3; and Star Bright, 4; J. F. Schorr's Alard Scheck, 3; Sam Phillips, 4; Tammany Chief, 3; Dangerline, 3, and Lady Schorr, 3; Richard Croker's Bellario, 3, and Beau Gallant, 3; W. M. Barrick's McMeekin, 4; Arkell & Elmar's Sarmation, 4; Delmel & Farrell's Ildrim, 4; S. S. Brown's Batten, 5; Patrick Dunne's Ilcedo, 4; Frank Farrell's Bonnibert, 3; J. E. Seagram's Far Rockaway, 3, and Basuto, 3; James R. Keene's Commando, 3, and Toddy, 4; J. R. & F. P. Keene's Conroy, 3; Tommy Atkins, 3; Militant, 3; Outlander, 3, and Choirmaster, 3; R. T. Wilson, Jr.'s, The Parader, 3; Arthur Featherstone's Martello, 3, and Black Fox, 3; W. T. Shafer's Terminus, 3; William Hendrie's Martimas, 5; C. Littlefield, Jr.'s, Watercolor, 3; Saint Elias, 3; Phasplar, 3, and Sweet Lavender, 3; Julius Fleischmann's Irritable, 3, and Blues, 3; J. D. Smith's His Lordship, 5; Thompson Brothers' Sidney Lucas, 4; J. P. Kramer's Demurrer, 3; "Fred" Gebhard's Zeus, 4; James Galway's Belvino, 3; W. L. Kilpatrick's Doctor Barlow, 3; W. Showalter's Box, 7; A. H. & D. H. Morris's Smile, 3; F. H. Smith's Garry Herrmann, 3; G. R. Morris's Bedrock, 3; Janice, 2, and Vitellus, 3; C. H. Mackay's Banastar, 6; S. Sanford & Son's Duaro, 4; Chuctanunda, 3, and Rackton, 4; Mrs. R. Roche Co.'s Standing, 4; W. O'B. McDonough's Beau Ormonde, 3, and J. H. McAvoy & Co.'s Prince McClurg, 5.

Charley Herr Will Not Be Sold.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Jan. 2.—David Cahill, who advertised extensively that he would sell his trotting stallion Charley Herr, 2:07, and would accept sealed bids, will not part with the great horse. Only a few bids were received, and Mr. Cahill did not think that enough money has been offered. He refused to tell the amounts of the bids received.

Oratorio, 2:13, together with thirty brood mares and from forty to fifty youngsters, will be shipped to Lexington early in February, and be placed on a farm just leased by W. A. Hadfield and Joseph Chambers; the Allegheny (Penn.) breeders. They have leased the place for five years, and Sheriff Henry Bosworth of this county will be put in charge. Oratorio is regarded as the most valuable young stallion in America. He sired Alice Mapes, 2:14¾; Gordon Prince, that sold for $4,000 as a weanling, and other high-priced ones. Messrs. Hadfield and Chambers paid only $1,800 for the horse.

Race Track Results.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 2.—The Stewards to-day recommended to the management of the Crescent City Jockey Club that W. Miller, who had the mount on the latter, for five days. Dominick, who rode Essence to-day, was also given five days for rough riding. Both suspensions go into effect after to-morrow. NO BASEBALL ORGANIZATION.

Promoters Absent from the Meeting Called to Launch the League.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—Nothing was done today regarding the permanent organization of the Western Baseball Association. A temporary organization was formed last week with the understanding that a conference would be held here to-day, to launch the new league. None of the promoters put in an appearance, except Mr. Burnham of Detroit, who was appointed temporary President, and Mr. Manning of Kansas City.

The meeting was postponed until such time as a full attendance of the prospective magnates can be secured. Mr. Burnham returned to Detroit to-night with President Johnson of the American League, for the purpose of looking over the situation there and helping decide on the advisability of placing a second team in that city. The American League will have the same team there which represented the league last season, and if the outlook is propitious the Western Association will also locate a club there.

President Johnson, before leaving for Detroit, stated that he would not call the meeting for the American League before the middle of January. The meeting will be held in Chicago instead of Philadelphia, as planned.

SHOOTERS DIVIDE THE MONEY.

Daniells and Fanning Win the Shoot-Off at Inter-State Park.

Special to The New York Times.

QUEENS, L. I., Jan. 2.—Splendid birds and close shooting served to make the thrice postponed inter-State handicap shoot off here to-day at the Inter-State Park grounds an excellent contest. John P. Daniells of New York; Harold Money of Oakland, N. J.; John S. Fanning of San Francisco, Cal., and Stephen M. Van Allen of Jamaica, N. Y., who had won previous events, were eligible.

Daniells missed his eighteenth bird and killed all the rest, making the top score of twenty-four kills out of a possible twenty-five. "Jack" Fanning hit his nineteenth bird. It was a left-quarterer, and got away. He tied Daniells with a total of twenty-four kills. Harold Money gathered a lot of screaming flyers, two of which, his seventeenth and twenty-first, he failed to drop, and he was out at twenty-three. This left Daniells and Fanning tied, and they agreed to divide the money.

Then followed the second series of the inter-State handicap, same conditions. Harold Money did some excellent work in this event. Bird after bird of all directions of flight and speed left the traps, and the young man from Oakland at the end of the twenty-fifth round had grassed them all.

Money, Morfey, Daniells, Griffiths, and Van Allen got most of the money with Fanning in the sweepstakes miss and out events that followed. The summary:

BOSTON'S BICYCLE RACE.

Kaser In the Lead—Harry Elkes Rides a Fast Exhibition Mile.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—Ten men started in the six-day bicycle race at Park Square Garden to-day, the pistol shot being given at 1:03 P. M. Among the riders was Gougoltz, who it was said last night had given up.

The five-hundred-mile mark was passed in 25 hours 31 minutes 42 seconds, Kaser leading.

Early this evening a physician announced to the referee that Gougoltz had ruptured the left kneepan ligament, and that it would be impossible for him to ride any longer. His leg will have to go into splints for a week or more.

At 10 o'clock the motor tandem came out, and while the six-day men loafed on the pole, Harry Elkea went an exhibition mile. He made the quarter in 0:25 4-5, the half in 0:52, the three-quarters in 1:17, and the mile in 1:42 2-5, two-fifths of a second ahead of his Tuesday night performance. He is riding under the colors of the Metropolitan Wheelmen, and each night during the week will try for the record.

The scores at the end of the twenty-ninth hour were as follows, with Downey in the lead:

The thirtieth hour scores and finish of the third day were as follows: Kaser, Walthour, McLean, McEachern, Stinson, Downey, and Fischer, 582 miles 4 laps each; Babcock, 581 miles 7 laps; Muller, 572 miles 2 laps.

BRITISH STEAMER ASHORE.

Ivydene's Crew Reach Newfoundland Shore After Fearful Experience.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Jan. 2.—The British steamer Ivydene, Capt. Millburn, from Hamburg, Dec. 15, for Wilmington, N. C., went ashore in a snowstorm last night at La Manche, and is likely to become a total loss.

The crew are safe, but they met with a frightful experience in the open boats. They were adrift until this forenoon, trying to reach the land, amid a blinding snowstorm and in a freezing wind. All were thoroughly exhausted, and some frostbitten.

The steamers Ingraham and Ethie have gone to the wreck, which is about eight miles from a telegraph line.

The steamer Ivydene is of 1,797 tons net register. She is 310 feet long, has 39 feet 2 inches beam, and is 19 feet 4 inches deep. She was built at Newcastle in 1885, and is owned by J. T. Lunn & Co. of Newcastle.

La Manche is a mining village in the District of Placentia, Newfoundland, on the Avalon Isthmus, twelve miles north of Little Placentia.

FLURRY IN CHICAGO WHEAT.

Touches 79, High Point for the Season, but Closes Weak.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—Wheat scored the highest price of the season to-day on heavy general buying, but broke sharply later on profit-taking, and closed weak, May ½c. lower. Trading was irregular, excited, and imposing in volume. A rough estimate, based on the reports of two leading commission houses, placed the quantity of wheat to change during the session at 15,000,000 bushels. May opened unchanged to ¾c. lower, at 77¾c. to 77c. The depressing factor was to be found in the delivery of 1,500,000 bushels on January contracts. There were no Liverpool quotations for futures, but the spot article on that market was strong.

The initial selling met with a good demand, and within thirty minutes the weakness had turned to strength. Early sellers reinstated their lines, and there was investment buying on a large scale from quarters hitherto out of the market. The rally was helped along by a decrease in the world's visible supply of 1,715,000 bushels, by an advance of 6d. in flour at Liverpool, and by a Minneapolis report of heavy flour sales.

May soared during the forenoon to 79, and at this point the dem

UNION PICKETS ROUTED.

Many Fights with the Non-Union Bakers on the East Side—Some Arrests.

The fight between the Hebrew Bakers' Union and the boss bakers changed into a struggle of physical force yesterday, and the non-union bakers bruised many of the strike pickets.

The principal fight was at the bakery of "Boss" Gottfried, 146 Essex Street, who had a number of non-union bakers at work. The union pickets, headed by Harris Goodman of 109 Goerck Street, invaded Gottfried's shop and a general mix-up followed, in which the invaders were driven out. Goodman was arrested on the charge of disorderly conduct and fined $3 in Essex Market Court. Hyman Aufang and another picket were worsted at Schonstein's bakery, 196 Clinton Street, where they went to "pershade" the bakers to quit work.

Samuel Fuchs, a strike picket of 136 Norfolk Street, got into a fight with one Wolf, a non-union baker, in Allen Street, and was arrested, but afterward discharged. Selig Rabler, another picket got into trouble at "Boss" Pechtor's bakery, Pitt und Rivington Streets. He was arrested and held for examination in Essex Market Court.

A committee of thirty-nine striking bakers submitted to the Board of Health a list of the shops they wanted to have inspected, saying they were not complying with the health laws. President Murphy sent inspectors, but said: "The condition in the bakeries are as much the fault of the bakers themselves as the employers."

Rabbi Bernard Drachman has promised the assistance of the Hebrew Church Association in securing the ten-hour workday to the strikers if they will agitate to get off on Saturdays.

Bridge Traffic Interrupted.

Traffic will be suspended during these hours, it was said yesterday, for probably ten days, that time being required in which to complete the work of paving. Passengers will be transferred to the Bridge cars from the surface cars at the Brooklyn terminal.

Mr. Ratz was formerly a saloon keeper.

SOL. BECHER.—A petition in involuntary bankruptcy was filed yesterday against Sol Becher, manufacturer of women's waists at 506 Broadway, by Blumenstiel & Hirsch, for the following creditors: F. Victor & Achells, $1,117; Abegg & Rusch, $561, and C. A. Auffmordt, $515. It was alleged that Mr. Becher is insolvent and recently conveyed, concealed, or removed some of his property. Before the petition was filed the Sheriff received a writ of replevin for $1,117 in favor of F. Victor & Achells, and went to 506 Broadway, but found no stock to levy upon and the fixtures were being removed. It was stated that a City Marshal had sold out what little was left on Monday. Mr. Becher has been in business about five years, and in June last claimed a capital of $12,000. His liabilities are reported to be over $15,000.

Attachments.

The Sheriff has received an attachment against Charles Rubens & Co., dealers in tailors' trimmings at Chicago, for $3,364. In favor of the Adler Brothers' Manufacturing Company for balance claimed to be due for merchandise, and it was served on four merchants here.

Discharges in Bankruptcy.

Judge Brown of the United States District Court yesterday granted discharges to thirteen bankrupts, among whom were Charles Beers, formerly partner of F. Bianchi & Co., importers of flowers and feathers at 657 Broadway, with liabilities of $136,500. Emil Guillanden of 156 West Seventy-fourth Street, formerly of W. B. Wheeler & Co., stock brokers of 66 Broadway, liabilities, $4,000. Max Flegman, actor, of 89 West Eighty-third Street, liabilities, $1,282. C. F. Boge A. Salkin, F. W. Jones, and I. Kaufman

TEN-CENT STORE ASSIGNS.

Did Business on Fourteenth Street, with a Branch in Syracuse.

The Great American Five and Ten Cent Store Company at 10 West Fourteenth Street with a branch store at 323 South Salina Street, Syracuse, made an assignment here yesterday to John Gruenberg. Michael Levi is President and Morris Stecow Treasurer and Secretary. The company was incorporated under New York laws, with a capital stock of $100,000 in April, last. Ten per cent. of the capital stock was paid in and the first store was opened in September last.

It is said by Gruenberg that the failure was due to poor business and strong competition, for since the company has been in business on Fourteenth Street two other stores had opened in the vicinity. The concern was going to dissolve, and it was thought the best way for dissolution was to make an assignment. The liabilities are $21,000 and assets $18,000 making the stock [illegible]

PRICES OF SUGAR REDUCED.

Coffee Advanced and Indications Point to an End of the Trade War.

The American Sugar Refining Company yesterday reduced the price of granulated sugar to 5¼ cents per pound, and the National Sugar Refining Company, which is made up of a number of independent companies, reduced its price so as to bring it down to the same as that of the trust. Arbuckle Brothers also announced that they had met the cut, thereby putting all refiners on the same basis. At about the same time the Woolson Spice Company, the Sugar Trust's coffee adjunct, advanced the price of its "Lion" brand half a cent a pound, to 11½ cents gross. All these things were taken in the trade as an indication that an agreement between the trust and the Arbuckles would soon be ratified.

The advance in the price of "Lion" brand coffee was considered significant, in that while the old price was half a cent less than the Arbuckle's "Ariosa" brand, it was difficult for the Woolson Company to meet the competition, and their advance of the price was said to be practically throwing the coffee trade to the Arbuckles. It is also significant that the Arbuckles adjusted their sugar prices, conforming with those of the trust, which would seem to indicate that the sugar trade will go to the latter.

President J. H. Post of the National Sugar Refining Company said yesterday that, although people might interpret the developments as an indication of the end of the trade war, he

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Jan. 2.—Money was much wanted to-day in connection with the repayment of loans to the Bank of England, and was easier, the release of dividends increasing the supply. Discounts were firm. The local loans issue is believed to have reduced the likelihood of an advance of the Bank rate to-morrow. Outside quotations are practically prohibited, which sends most of the business to the Bank.

The Stock Exchange has not fully recovered from the holiday dullness. High class securities were depressed to-day, owing to the new local loans issued. Consols weakened. Americans opened firm, but afterward were irregular. Milwaukees were dull on realizations. The feature was the advance in Eries, after fluctuations. At the close prices were easier, with a good undertone. Grand Trunks were firm, the statement being better than expected. Rio Tintos were dull. Kafirs were weak and mostly lower. West Australians improved.

Consols for money, 97⅝; consols for the account, 97⅝; Atchison, 49¼; Canadian Pacific, preferred, 95¼; St. Paul, 151⅝; Illinois Central, 136; Louisville, 91⅝; Union Pacific, preferred, 87; New York Central, 130; Erie, 27⅞; Pennsylvania, 57¾; Reading, 13⅝; Erie, first preferred, 65⅜; Northern Pacific, preferred, 90¼; Grand Trunk, 7⅝; Anaconda, 10; Rand Mines, 3⅜.

Bar silver steady at 29 9-16d. per ounce.

Money, 3½ per cent. The rate of discount in the open market for short bills is 4@4¼ per cent.; three months' bills, 4¼ per cent.

Spanish Fours closed at 69 ex-interest.

The amount of bullion withdrawn from the Bank of England on balance to-day was £80,000. Gold premiums: Buenos Ayres, 150.10; Madrid, 34.17; Lisbon, 38; Rome, 5x.47½.

There was only an unimportant failure on the Stock Exchange to-day, that of G. R. L. Ogilvie.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Jan. 2.—Prices on the Bourse today were firm, the China news favorably affecting internationals. Spanish 4s were in strong demand. Brazilians were in good demand. Rentes were neglected. Some industrials were very firm, notably Suez. Rio Tintos rose sharply on the strength of copper. Kafirs were steady on purchases for London account.

Three per cent. rentes, 100f 77½c for the account. Exchange on London, 25f 8c for checks.

Spanish 4s closed at 71.

BERLIN, Jan. 2.—Internationals were firm on the Boerse to-day. Spanish securities were animated. Chinese were in demand on expectation of the near conclusion of peace. Iron opened firm, but eased later owing to unsatisfactory Upper Silesia reports. Coals were firm on account of the cold weather. Banks were in good demand, and home funds were firm on the easiness of discounts. Americans were animated on rumors of large consolidations and amalgamations.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 42½ pfennigs for checks. Discount rates: Short bills, 5½ per cent.; three months' bills, 3¾ per cent.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 2.—Philadelphia Electric and the coal stocks were the leading stocks in to-day's market. There was an enormous demand for Pennsylvania Railroad, one block of 1,000 shares at 75 being dealt in. The buying of the Readings was persistent all day, emanating almost entirely from New York. The feature was second preferred. The Street has heard of prospective favorable developments regarding this stock, and is backing its belief with purchases. In sympathy, all the coal stocks advanced. Lehigh Navigation rising 1¾ and Lehigh Valley ¾, but the most pronounced strength was in Pennsylvania Railroad. The success of the Quay faction in electing a Speaker at Harrisburg was used to advance Philadelphia Electric, but the stock failed to maintain the improvement.

In contrast to the general trend was the heaviness of Union Traction, which in the last five minutes receded ½, to 36½, on small trading.

The market closed firm at the following bid and asked prices:

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 2.—Boston had a big market to-day, and in some respects it was the best market of the present movement. Copper stocks increased in activity and strength. Forty-two issues were represented in the morning dealings. Osceola was conspicuous, advancing 7 to 86; Baltic rose 1¾ to 36; Atlantic, 1 to 29; Bingham, ½ to 17; Boston Quicksilver, 1⅜ to 7¾; Centennial, 1¼ to 25½; Cochiti, 1¼ to 12¾; Copper Range, 2⅛ to 87; Franklin, 1½ to 17½; Mohawk, ¾ to 27¼; Parrot, ⅝ to 51; Quincy, 2 to 172; Trimountain, 1 to 23; United States Oil, ½ to 15½; Dominion Coal, ¾ to 39⅜; Winona, ¾ to 6; Wolverine, 1½ to 50, and Old Dominion, ⅝ to 32⅝. There was some recession in spots, but the copper stocks generally were very firm, save for notable quiet in the Standard Oil group. Planters' Compress rose 1½ to 24½; Gas and Coke 58, 1 to 71½. Massachusetts Electric was ½ lower at 26. Home railroad shares were in good demand.

Money loaned at the Clearing House at 3 and 2½ per cent., and New York funds sold at 8, 10, and 12½ cents' discount.

Money on call ranges from 4½ to 6 per cent. Some National banks are not quoted under 5 per cent., and loans solely on Coppers are quoted as high as 5½ to 6 per cent. Time money, on the very choicest grade of collateral, loans as low as 4 per cent. on four to six months' time. On mixed collateral the going quotation is 4½@5 per cent. Year money ranges from 4 to 4½ per cent.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Conditions in the outside market yesterday were practically those which prevailed on the closing days of the year, and the same dullness continued in most stocks on the list. The issues that were actively traded in were exceptions. Prices, however, were fairly well maintained, and most of the day's net changes were on the side of advances. There was little news to affect prices, and the movements of the day were not based on any special developments.

***

AMERICAN BRIDGE was not only the most active of the steel stocks, but was also more active than any of the other higher-priced stocks, and the transactions were accompanied by substantial advances. The common stock sold up to 48½, and showed a net gain of three-quarters of a point, and the preferred sold at 95½ and closed there, showing a net gain of half a point.

***

SHEET STEEL preferred advanced to 79, a gain of 1 point over Monday's final quotation, but subsequently reacted a point. It closed unchanged at 78 bid. Trading in the stock was light.

***

DISTILLING OF AMERICA preferred, on transactions in about 1,000 shares, sold up to 31. Later, however, the price receded somewhat, and the best bid at the close was 30½, a net gain of 1 point. The common stock advanced with the preferred, but scored a much smaller net gain.

***

FLEMINGTON COAL AND COKE was active for the first time in a good while. It sold up to 25, but subsequently was offered down to 22, and closed, as on Monday, at 21 bid. The trading in the stock amounted to about 1,000 shares.

***

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER crossed 22 and established a new high price at 22½. At the close 22¼ was bid, a net gain of half a point.

***

UNION COPPER sold to the extent of a few hundred shares between 5¼ and 5. It closed unchanged at 5 bid.

***

BAY STATE GAS continued to show considerable activity and advanced a small fraction. It sold up to 1¼ and closed at 1¼ bid.

***

WHITE KNOB COPPER, which has not been traded in on the Curb for some time, sold yesterday at 12¾. Only 100 shares changed hands.

***

UNITED RAILWAYS OF ST. LOUIS, preferred, which was offered down on Monday, developed considerable strength. After selling to the extent of several hundred shares at 69, it closed at 69 bid, a net gain of one point. Fractional advances occurred in the bonds and in St. Louis Transit.

***

UNION TYPEWRITER was more than usually active. The common stock sold to the extent of 500 shares, and there was trading in a considerable amount of the preferred stocks. The prices of all these issues have advanced substantially within the last few days.

***

Closing quotations yesterday, compared with those of Monday, were as follows:

IMPROVEMENTS ON THE WATER FRONT

New Piers from Bloomfield Street to West 23d Street.

ROOM FOR BIGGEST STEAMER

Marginal Street 250 Feet Wide—Transatlantic Vessels Can Coal While Unloading Their Cargoes.

The Dock Department will start this week the largest improvement to the water front ever planned. Funds are available from the proceeds of a bond sale of over $1,000,000 issued for building docks on the water front of the Hudson River. The section to be improved is from Bloomfield Street to Twenty-third Street on the North River.

Chief Engineer Bensel said of the work yesterday: "This improvement involves the dredging and removal of a considerable extent of solid land and a portion of Eleventh Avenue and Thirteenth Avenue, and a portion of the abutting streets from Bloomfield Street to Twenty-third Street, the removal of the small existing piers between Bloomfield and West Twenty-third Street, building of the granite sea wall from Bloomfield to West Twenty-third Street, about 3,000 feet, and the building of ten new piers abutting on this 3,000 feet of bulkhead wall.

"The new piers will be approximately 800 feet in length by 125 feet in width, with slips in between of about 250 feet. Piers of this size will accommodate the largest ships now operating in this port, and will give them ample facilities for loading and unloading at the same time, besides facilities for taking on coal while the cargo is being discharged or taken aboard."

A marginal street will be built in the rear of the bulkhead 250 feet wide, all of which will be under the control of the Department of Docks. When the improvement is finished there will be one continuous stretch of comparatively new piers on the Hudson River water front stretching from Thirty-fourth Street to Cortlandt Street. The new sheds over these piers will contain the most improved methods for handling freight. The capacity of the sheds will be at least double those constructed by the Dock Department for the transatlantic steamship purposes six years ago.

When the Government completes the work of dredging a straight channel 2,000 feet wide from the inner channel to Sandy Hook with an average depth of 40 feet, also the improvements to the Buttermilk Channel and the removal of rocks near Blackwell's Island, New York will have a harbor better fitted for commercial purposes than any other in the world.

Chief Engineer Bensel, in a statement made yesterday, said:

"Between Montgomery Street and Whitehall Street, East River, the development has been along the line of making the water front suitable for the accommodation of small steamships of the coasting trade of this country, and there is now under way on the East River improvements which will involve the building of piers and the bulkhead wall between Whitehall Street and Montgomery Street, a distance of about one and three-quarter miles. This improvement is being actively pushed from the Brooklyn Bridge north to Montgomery Street and from Whitehall to Wall Street at the present time.

"The transatlantic trade, however, uses almost exclusively the North River between Cortlandt Street and Thirty-fourth Street; from Twenty-third to Thirty-fourth Street has been in use for the transatlantic trade for some time, and a large improvement was made in 1897 during the years 1897 and 1898 between West Eleventh Street and Gansevoort Street, which approximately clearly than any other improvement undertaken by the city on the water front to the improvement now contemplated between Bloomfield and West Twenty-third Streets. This latter improvement, however, will more than double the transatlantic facilities of the port, and, so far as may be seen at the present time, will more than fill the requirements."

PRINCIPAL FELTER'S VICTORY.

Long Controversy for Salary Due Settled Out of Court.

A long controversy between the Brooklyn School Board and Superintendent of Schools Maxwell over the validity of the certificates issued to teachers and Principals before consolidation and the vitalizing powers of the McCarren act has been settled by the payment by the Treasurer of the Board of Education on Tuesday of the salary of Dr. William L. Felter as Principal of the Commercial High School, Brooklyn.

Dr. Felter was Associate Superintendent of Schools in Brooklyn, holding a Principal's certificate. He was selected by the local board for the Principalship of the Commercial High School when it was organized, but Superintendent Maxwell objected to his appointment, citing the requirements of the Central Board of Education as a bar. It was asserted that he ignored the McCarren act, passed subsequent to consolidation, and having for its object the vitalizing of all school certificates in force prior to consolidation.

To bring the question to a head, the Brooklyn School Board regularly appointed Dr. Felter to the Principalship, and sent his name to Manhattan on the November pay roll. His name was promptly stricken off, and President O'Brien has since held up his money. Suit was brought under the provisions of the McCarren law to compel the Treasurer to pay the check. The case, however, was not brought to trial, other counsel prevailing.

FUNERAL OF HIRAM HITCHCOCK.

Many Prominent People Attend Services at Dr. Parkhurst's Church.

Funeral services for Hiram Hitchcock, one of the proprietors of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, were held yesterday morning, first privately in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, and later in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, and were attended by many persons prominent in public life.

As the casket containing the body was carried into the church shortly after 10 o'clock it was met at the head of the aisle by the Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, who read the burial service. The pallbearers were Gen. Di Cesnola, President of the Museum of Art; ex-Justice William Cohen, Third Assistant Secretary of State Thomas W. Cridler, H. H. Brockway, Gardner Weatherbee, John Atkins, A. T. Mason, and Capt. Jacob W. Miller. The casket rested beneath two huge bunches of flowers, one from Mrs. Joseph Jefferson and the other from the office staff of the hotel. The pulpit, at the foot of which the casket lay, was literally buried beneath floral tributes from employes and friends. Representatives from nearly every prominent hotel in the city were present at the services.

At noon the body was taken to the Grand Central Station and placed on board a special car en route for Hanover, N. H., where the interment will take place.

THE MEREDITHS RECONCILED.

Differences of the Brothers Over Church Matters at Last Settled.

Members of the Tompkins Avenue Congregational Church, Brooklyn, and the Park Avenue branch of that church, were pleased yesterday to learn that the Rev. Dr. Robert R. Meredith and his brother, the Rev. Richard Meredith, had buried their differences and become reconciled.

Dr. Robert Meredith is pastor of the Tompkins Avenue Church, and his brother was for three years his assistant in charge of the Park Avenue branch. About six months ago there occurred a disagreement between the brothers over Church matters, and Richard resigned his pastorate, asserting that he had been forced out.

Dr. Robert Meredith remained silent about the trouble. The Rev. Richard Meredith, after resigning, made a trip around the world, returning only recently. The brothers met on Monday evening at the home of Robert, and a reconciliation took place.

Dr. Robert Meredith has been ill for several days with a severe cold.

ARTIST SEWELL'S COMPLAINT.

Alleges Favoritism Is Practiced in the Rejection of His Panels for Columbia University.

The rejection of Artist Robert V. V. Sewell's gift of two decorative panels of his own design to Columbia University by the Committee on Architecture, Sculpture, and Painting, for the new university buildings, is now alleged by the disappointed donor to have been inspired by a motive other than that of forwarding the best interests of the university. The members of the Columbia committee are Charles F. McKim, Chairman; Edwin H. Blashfield, and Daniel C. French. In a letter to the editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES, Mr. Sewell, quoting a remark attributed to Mr. McKim, the architect of the committee, to the effect that he was "out with a shotgun to guard the integrity of the university building, and to keep out unworthy decorative works," writes in part:

It is customary for people who use guns to satisfy themselves in regard to the nature of the object they are going to shoot at. My proposed gift to the university did not receive even this short and summary examination. It was (to drop the simile) refused unseen by a committee formed to pass upon the merits of works of architecture, painting, and sculpture which might be donated to the university. As an alumnus as well as an artist, it may be assumed that I have the dignity of Columbia's site also at heart, to as much a degree as Mr. McKim has the preservation of the artistic effect of its corridors.

Continuing, Mr. Sewell says:

Does the committee actually pass on works offered by alumni in a spirit of affection for Alma Mater with care, deliberation, and respect? In this instance a proposed gift was unceremoniously refused without a jury.

The sculptor member of the committee, who has executed practically all the sculpture, is now laboring over a heroic group for the façade of the library representing "Alma Mater" extending the hand of affectionate encouragement to her children. This is undoubtedly a most excellent arrangement for architecture, sculpture, and painting as represented in the persons of the gentlemen of the committee, but an alumnus who loves his university may well ask, "Who is looking out for its interests while these gentlemen are so busily engaged?"

The decision of the committee as regards Mr. Sewell's proffered gift is final, and the artist has accepted it as such, but he has declared his intention of at least making an effort to learn what are the feelings of the alumni of Columbia University on the subject, and protesting further against the favoritism which he alleges is practiced by the Committee on Art.

WOMEN SAW MAN KILLED.

Fainted in the Bridge Terminal at Rush Hour as Train Crushed Him.

When travel on the Brooklyn Bridge was at its heaviest at 6 o'clock last evening a man, hurrying from the last car of a train that had just unloaded its passengers on the Brooklyn side, started at a run on the narrow platform between two lines of track used for incoming trains. He crossed the platform diagonally and was unable to stop. He fell over just as an incoming train pulled in. The motor car was on him in an instant and ground him to death before the motorman could check the train's speed. Almost instantly several women in the crowd on the platform fainted and there was much excitement for a few moments. The platform was cleared quickly and the body taken to the Brooklyn City Morgue. William R. Clayton, motorman of the train, was arrested and paroled. The victim has not been identified. He was apparently about fifty-five years old, 5 feet 7 inches in height, of light complexion, and wore a blue overcoat, dark clothing, and a striped vest. There were no papers or letters in his pockets.

J. HANNA ADMITS BLACKMAIL.

Held for Special Sessions for Trying to Extort Money from Mr. Stutz.

Seventeen-year-old John Hanna of Brooklyn was held yesterday for Special Sessions for attempting to extort $15,000 from Louis Stutz, a wholesale butcher, by threatening to circulate scandalous stories about Stutz's twenty-year-old daughter, Augusta. Hanna admitted having written letters, but did not think he was doing any harm. Lawyer Obernier showed the Magistrate a number of postal cards and letters which Mr. Stutz had received during the past six months. They were signed William Jensen, J. Baker, and A. Gerswvitz. Lawyer Obernier stated that he believed that these men were implicated with young Hanna in the alleged plot to get money from Stutz. Hanna denied that any one had put him up to send the letters. He said that two days before Christmas he was reading his Bible. He remembered a story he had heard that Mr. Stutz was willing to give $25,000 to any man who would marry his daughter. As he was out of employment he thought this would be an excellent opportunity to improve his condition, so he wrote to Mr. Stutz that he would marry the girl for $20,000. Failing to get an answer, he wrote another letter, agreeing to take the responsibility for $15,000. Mr. Stutz then wrote to Hanna making an appointment, which caused the young man's arrest.

WANDERINGS OF A 4-TON ROCK.

It Moves Up and Down Newark Bay, but Only During the Winter.

A rock that is believed to weigh four tons, and which is big enough to be visible at high tide, has caused much speculation among the residents of the Newark Bay shore, in Jersey City, by shifting its position. It is situated about 200 feet from the shore.

William Armbruster, who has made the rock a subject of study, says it is now in about the same position it occupied in 1881, when he first noticed that it had moved. Since then it has shifted its position several times and has moved 150 feet, having traveled 75 feet up the bay and the same distance back again. The rock moves only in Winter, when it is embedded in ice.

Mr. Armbruster's theory is that the rock becomes frozen fast, and when the rising tide lifts the surface ice the rock is carried with the ice until its weight causes it to break loose, when it settles down to await another removal by the glacial leverage.

$6,000,000 ESTATE CONTROVERSY.

Guardian Ad Litem Appointed in the Whitewright Will Case.

Percy S. Dudley was appointed guardian ad litem of Amy L. Duncan by Justice Leventritt in the Supreme Court yesterday. The appointment was due to the action brought by William Whitewright Stuart and Susan W. Duncan against the Union Trust Company as trustee under the will of the late William Whitewright. There are numerous beneficiaries, including Miss Duncan, who is not yet of age.

There is a trust fund of about $6,000,000, the income from which is to be paid to the different beneficiaries. The plaintiffs in the present action contend that all of the income from the trust should be paid each year. They contend that there is no authority under the will to set aside a portion of this income for the purpose of forming a sinking fund to have in reserve in case the value of the original securities should depreciate. This plan has been followed for some time, and the plaintiffs want the courts to determine whether it is proper or not.

MURRAY SAYS IT WAS A FAKE.

But He Is Held for Writing Blackmailing Letter to Mrs. McDonnell.

Mrs. Miles McDonnell of City Island, whose husband is awaiting trial for the shooting of Edward Courtney recently in a fight in the Oanwa Café, at Park Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street, appeared in the Harlem Police Court yesterday against Henry Murray of City Island, who, under the name of "August Oleson," wrote a letter to Mrs. McDonnell, saying he had been wounded during the shooting affray and demanding money to keep quiet.

Murray admitted that he had written the letter, and said it was all a fake. He was held until McDonnell and his attorneys could be communicated with. As illustrating Murray's ingratitude, Mrs. McDonnell told the Magistrate that when Murray was sent to the Island for six months for beating his wife she had headed a subscription list with $50 for the benefit of the wife.

CITY'S LAW CASES IN 1900

Corporation Counsel Whalen's Report of His Department.

More than 3,700 Actions Under the Prevailing Rate of Wages Law—$4,180,093 Saved in Damage Cases.

Corporation Counsel Whalen submitted to Mayor Van Wyck yesterday a report of the transactions of the Law Department for 1900. It shows the enormous litigation in which the city has become involved since consolidation. The City of New York is defendant in 3,719 actions brought to force the city to pay what the Legislature termed "the prevailing rate of wages," and there are now pending in all 11,145 cases against the city.

There are 1,166 actions the city has to defend on account of injuries to persons and property.

There were 4,150 law suits begun against the city in reference to contracts. The total number of actions and proceedings begun against the city in 1900 numbered 5,961.

During the year Corporation Counsel Whalen terminated 2,005 actions. Not a single court order has been carried out on the books of the Controller vacating or reducing an assessment for a local improvement during the year. This is something which it is claimed did not happen in the old City of New York for thirty-five years or more.

In the condemnation proceedings to acquire title to lands in Westchester and Putnam Counties $6,384,994 was demanded of the city for lands taken, and the total awards were $2,214,900, which represents a saving to the city of $4,180,093.

Corporation Counsel Whalen writes: "There are now pending 3,722 suits against the city to recover under the Prevailing Rate of Wages Acts. These actions embrace every conceivable case under the statutes, and seek to recover amounts ranging from $25 to $20,000."

The claims against the city in negligence actions amount to $476,311, and the aggregate sum recovered in sixteen of the forty-seven suits amounted to $19,700, or 4 per cent. of the claims.

The amount involved in the litigation carried on by the Corporation Counsel's office amounted to $116,469,887.

Corporation Counsel Whalen tells of the litigation started by James Sweeney, Joseph Sweeney, and Anna Sweeney to recover $106,083 for work done on the ruins of the Windsor Hotel fire. A decision of the referee in this matter is expected in a week, and will, it is said, result in a saving of many thousands of dollars to the city.

In concluding his report Corporation Counsel Whalen writes: "I have avoided making comparisons with previous years, because I believe it to be a very unfair and misleading way of making a report of the sort of business transacted by this office. It is no real indication of the amount of work done in such an office as this to show that there were a larger number of cases tried, or more actions begun or closed, than during the previous year. I believe there never has been a year in which so much of a substantial character has been accomplished by the department."

UNDONE BY HIS VANITY.

Handerhoff Displayed His Handsome Coat When Calling and Came to Grief.

If James Handerhoff had hung his handsome new overcoat on the hat rack in the hall when he made a New Year's call on Miss Frances Golden, at 654 East One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Street on Tuesday night, instead of wearing it in to the parlor and carelessly flinging it across the back of a chair where the lining would show to best advantage, he would have saved himself a lot of trouble. He might have saved himself the overcoat as well.

Handerhoff had barely seated himself comfortably in the Golden parlor after divesting himself of the overcoat, and had scarcely carried the conversation beyond the weather stage when another caller, Morris Cohen, a clothier, of 3,645 Third Avenue, was announced.

Each of the callers tried to appear to advantage before the hostess, and the conversation fairly scintillated with epigram and repartee.

Handerhoff and Cohen, as conversationalists ran along neck and neck for a time until finally Cohen's eye lighted upon the Handerhoff overcoat lying with all its brilliancy of lining across the chair. Then the clothier's lively demeanor changed, and he became constrained. His expression took on a far-away appearance, and he seemed to be lost in thought. The triumphant Handerhoff rapidly drew away from him in the conversation, and soon had a practical monopoly of the hostess's attention, while Cohen did not seem to be able to take his eye off the overcoat.

The clothier bade adieu to his hostess and to his style. He returned to the Golden home just as Handerhoff was taking his leave.

"Where did you get the nice coat, Mr. Handerhoff?" he inquired.

"Oh, I bought it," returned the other easily.

"You took it from my store," said the clothier, and he seized Handerhoff by the collar of the new coat and shook him, at the same time placing one or two blows on the nose of his fellow-caller.

Miss Golden screamed and a policeman appeared. Cohen was first arrested for assault, but when he explained that he had only been claiming his overcoat Handerhoff was arrested as a suspicious character.

In the Morrisania Police Court yesterday Handerhoff could not explain matters to the satisfaction of the Magistrate, and was held in $500 bail.

DR. HERMAN KNAPP'S GIFT.

Conveys to the New York Eye and Ear Institute Its Present Quarters.

The buildings 44 and 46 East Twelfth Street, now occupied by the New York Ophthalmic and Aural Institute, were conveyed yesterday as a gift to that institution by Dr. Herman Knapp, who is its executive surgeon. The property is situated on the south side of Twelfth Street, 133 feet west of Broadway, and consists of two four-story dwellings, which have been remodeled for the uses of the institution.

Dr. Knapp said last evening that he did not care to say anything regarding his gift. William Salomon, the Treasurer of the institute, said that he was not familiar with the circumstances or conditions under which the gift had been made, and in any event would not care to discuss the transfer without having first consulted with the donor. Mr. Salomon added that so far as he knew no change in the property is contemplated.

The New York Ophthalmic and Aural Institute has been in existence since 1869. Besides being a hospital and dispensary for the treatment of diseases of the eye and ear, it also maintains a school of ophthalmology and otology. It is supported largely by voluntary contributions. Recent statistics show that 8,000 patients were treated in the dispensary during a year and over 400 in the hospital. The officers of the institute are: President—William A. Wheelock; Treasurer—William Salomon; Secretary—William P. Howe.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY MEETING.

Dean Hoffman Becomes the Sixteenth President of the Institution.

About fifty members of the New York Historical Society met last night in annual meeting. No reply was received from the Trustees of the New York Public Library regarding the use of the Lenox Library Building by the historical society in the near future. Most of the members are against affiliation with the Public Library. The society's building fund amounts now to $42,043, and the society hopes that a wing of the new building may soon be begun on the property in Central Park West.

The Rev. Dr. Eugene A. Hoffman, Dean of the General Theological Seminary, was elected President of the society, to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of John Alsop King. Dr. Hoffman is the sixteenth President of the society, which will be 100 years old in 1904. The other officers chosen were: First Vice President—J. Pierpont Morgan; Second Vice President—John S. Kennedy; Foreign Corresponding Secretary—Nicholas Fish; Domestic Corresponding Secretary—Frederic Wendell Jackson; Recording Secretary—Sydney H. Carney, M. D.; Treasurer—Charles A. Sherman; Librarian—Robert H. Kelby.

Among the new members elected last night was John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

MONEY FOR FRENCH HOSPITAL.

Consul General Bruwaert May Get $50,000 from His Government for Its Enlargement.

Edmond Bruwaert, the French Consul General, who arrived here on La Gascogne on Sunday, after a sojourn of seven months in Europe, announced yesterday that one of his objects in going to Paris was to make an effort to secure an appropriation of $50,000 for the French Hospital at 322 West Thirty-fourth Street, in this city. This hospital is operated by the French Benevolent Association, of which a great many prominent Frenchmen in this city are members. The French Government has been paying a certain amount annually toward the support of the hospital, and the application for an additional appropriation is prompted by a decision made recently by the association to increase the size of the hospital.

The changes contemplated in the hospital will cost in the neighborhood of $200,000. It has not been decided as yet whether the present hospital building is to be sold and a new site for the hospital selected, or whether the proposed improvements are to be made by purchasing land adjacent to the present building and remodeling and increasing the size of the hospital. The plans will not be fully decided upon until enough money to go to work on the changes has been collected. The French Hospital will now accommodate sixty patients.

Up to the present time the Benevolent Association has succeeded in collecting $50,000, and if the result of the Consul General's efforts are favorable, the fund will be increased to $100,000. Mr. Bruwaert said yesterday:

"I made an application for the appropriation, and I have reason to suppose that it will be granted.

"The French population here is increasing with the size of the city, and it is only right that there should be some hospital where a sick Frenchman may be received by people who speak his own language. The present size of the hospital is altogether inadequate."

MR. COOGAN'S SALARY HELD.

Controller Awaits a Decision on His Right to Hold His Office.

President Coogan is not worrying about his salary of $5,000 a year, but he wants to hold on to his office as President of the Borough of Manhattan. Some people want President Coogan to get out because he voted for two years in Southampton, L. I., and the claim has been made that under the law President Coogan is ineligible to hold the office. Controller Coler has held up his salary for December with calm composure.

"Will you continue to hold office without salary," Mr. Coogan was asked.

"What do I care for the salary? I give my salary every year to charity."

"Will you resign now," was asked.

President Coogan declared he did not care a "tuppence ha'penny" whether he got $416.66 2-3 each month for holding his official job or not.

"What if the courts declare you ineligible to hold office?"

"That's another story,' as my friend Kipling would say."

No legal action has as yet been begun to oust President Coogan. Corporation Counsel Whalen will not give an opinion on the case, as he thinks it should be passed upon by the courts in a taxpayers' action.

Controller Coler announced yesterday that he would hold up President Coogan's salary until he received word from Corporation Counsel Whalen that he was empowered to pay the salary and that the official was entitled to the office.

The President of the borough must vouch for the pay rolls and for his clerks, and if he is not legally in office he has no authority to sign the pay rolls. Controller Coler said yesterday that this phase of the question would receive his attention at once.

FIREMAN RISKED HIS LIFE.

Engine Driver Ferguson Lost a Horse to Save Trolley Passengers.

Driving at a gallop to a fire early yesterday morning, Franklin Ferguson, driver of Engine No. 105 of Pierrepont Street, Brooklyn, had the choice presented to him of smashing into a trolley car on Fulton Street or taking to the sidewalk. There were a dozen passengers in the car, and Ferguson chose the sidewalk. He gave a quick pull at the reins and drove his three galloping horses up on the walk.

When the forward wheels of the engine struck the curb Ferguson was thrown off by the shock, and the horses plunged across the sidewalk and into the window of the grocery store of Henry Wolf, at 186 Fulton Street, near Orange Street.

One of the horses had a leg broken and had to be shot. Another horse was so badly cut that it had to be taken away in an ambulance of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Driver Ferguson was slightly cut and bruised.

LEGAL NOTES.

CONTROVERSY OVER STOCK OF A BREWING COMPANY.—Frederick A. Ringler yesterday obtained from Justice Fitzgerald of the Supreme Court a temporary injunction restraining J. Edward Jetter and others from disposing of 2,000 shares of stock of the George Ringler Brewing Company. The business was formerly a partnership conducted by George Ringler and Christian Hachemeister, but after Mr. Ringler's death was incorporated, with Frederick A. Ringler as President. In April, 1896, when Mr. Hachemeister died, he owned 2,000 shares, which he bequeathed to his widow, Caroline Hachemeister. The plaintiff says that in May, 1899, he obtained from Mrs. Hachemeister on payment of $250 an option to purchase within twenty-eight months the 2,000 shares held by her for $200,000. The following December Mrs. Hachemeister transferred this stock to her son, Henry Hachemeister, and her daughter, Elizabeth Jetter, giving each 1,000 shares. The daughter assigned her shares to her husband, J. Edward Jetter. Mr. Ringler says that before the expiration of the option he made a tender of the amount to the widow and demanded the stock from her. The motion was opposed by J. Edward Jetter only. He asserts that Mrs. Hachemeister was imposed upon, and induced to sign the option without any knowledge whatever of its contents. Justice Fitzgerald says that Mrs. Hachemeister's silence leaves Mr. Ringler's allegations practically uncontradicted.

MISS WENDEL'S LUNACY NOT ESTABLISHED.—Justice Fitzgerald yesterday refused the application made on behalf of John G. Wendel, to confirm the findings of the Sheriff's jury that Mr. Wendel's sister, Georgiana G. R. Wendel, was incompetent, and was, in consequence, "unable to manage herself or her affairs." The proceedings were instituted upon Mr. Wendel's petition, last September. The jury found Miss Wendel to be about forty-eight years old, unmarried, with one brother and five sisters as her next of kin. Her real estate was found to be worth $236,042, from which a yearly rental of $10,333 was derived. She had also the income for life of the premises 711 Broadway, the rental of which is $3,750, and her personal estate amounted to $196,169. The main objection to the confirmation of the proceedings Justice Fitzgerald concludes to be the failure of the jury to find that Miss Wendel was "incompetent by reason of lunacy." While the jury found she was incompetent, they failed to find that that incompetency was the result of lunacy or of an unsound mind. The Court holds that in order to permit confirmation of the proceedings, the jury should have found either in the words of the statute or their equivalent.

Nurse McBride Gets Her Salary.

The Justices of the Appellate Division in the Second Department, sitting in Brooklyn, have handed down a decision which will affect a number of nurses employed at the Randall Island Asylum. Maria McBride was apointed a nurse without having passed a civil service examination and her pay was held up. At the time of her appointment last Summer the Civil Service Commission had no eligible list of nurses, and as a result Miss McBride and twenty others were appointed without examination. The Court holds that an emergency existed which required the appointment of nurses at the time, and that Miss McBride shall receive her salary.

Seattle's Public Library Burned.

SEATTLE, Wash., Jan. 2.—The Public Library of Seattle was burned to the ground last night. The fire originated in the basement, possibly from the furnaces. The total stock of books, numbering 25,000 volumes, and valued at at least $30,000, are a total loss. The building was built about ten years ago by Henry Yesler, Seattle's most famous pioneer, and cost him nearly $60,000. It is understood that a new building will be built at once.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg." stands for mortgage and "R S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyances should therefore show the true consideration.

RECORD FOR CLEARANCES

The Transactions for Yesterday Amounted to $427,903,000.

Carts and Messenger Would Be Needed for Distribution but for Clearing House Facilities—Long Lines at All Banks.

All records were broken for Clearing House exchange yesterday, and as a result of the heaviest dividend and interest payments of recent years the clearances reached $427,903,000. The previous high record was on Thursday last, when the day's exchanges aggregated $361,013,290.

The phenomenal exchanges of yesterday were financed with the transfer of only $16,344,000 in actual cash balances. Had it not been for Clearing House facilities the money would have had to be distributed among the various banks by carts and messenger at much risk and labor. Under the present system most of the indebtedness was discharged by the payment of $5,000 and $10,000 Clearing House and gold certificates.

All the large banks and trust companies did a rushing business yesterday, paying out January dividends and interest, and there were long lines of messengers and runners before the paying teller's windows as soon as the banks opened. Many institutions had an extra force of clerks at work, and in a number of them the clerks were busy all New Year's Day preparing for the expected large demands. Several large shareholders at points distant from New York had arranged to have New York banks collect their coupons direct without having them pass through interior banks. This saves almost a week's delay in effecting the transfers and gives out-of-town shareholders good balances that New York banks can be drawn against at will from interior points.

It was estimated yesterday that 75 per cent of the periodical disbursements would remain in this city after the usual shifting about process had been accomplished. Conservative estimates place the amounts of disbursements at $140,000,000, although some estimates run as high as $160,000,000. It is said in the financial circles that the sum is so large and distributed by so many hundred corporations that the designation of any specific amount is little better than guesswork.

Interest was also paid out yesterday to millions of savings bank depositors, and as the larger part of this money was paid in New York the savings institutions were kept busy.

LINSEED OIL COMPANY WINS.

Federal Court Refuses to Appoint Receiver for So-Called Trust.

CHICAGO, Jan. 2.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals to-day handed down a decision sustaining the decision of the lower court, denying a petition for a receiver for the National Linseed Oil Company.

The suit was brought in 1898 by James Clark "and others," owners of 4,600 shares out of a total of 180,000 shares of stock of the so-called trust. The petition for a receivership alleged negligence and bad management on the part of the Directors and officers of the company, by which, it was alleged, the assets of the company, consisting of over forty mills in various parts of the country, and valued at $7,000,000, were dissipated. Judge Grosscup, in rendering the decision affirming the action of the lower court, said it was apparently the plain purpose of those bringing the suit to get control through a receivership of the company's right of action against the Directors, so that suit could be prosecuted in the name of the company and at its expense.

No certain proof, according to Judge Grosscup, was shown of bad management or negligence on the part of officials of the company, nor was it shown with certainty that the Directors and officials had speculated.

TALE OF A 75-CENT SHIRT.

Court Says D. O. Mills Shall Not Pay for Condon's Undergarment.

Justices Truax, Dugro, and O'Gorman, sitting as the Appellate Term of the Supreme Court, have decided that William H. Condon, the Chicago lawyer and writer, cannot recover 75 cents from D. O. Mills, the amount of money representing the value of one woolen undershirt.

Condon lived for a time at Mills Hotel No. 1, and he asserts that while there the undershirt was lost by the man who had charge of the laundry. Condon brought suit in the Third District Municipal Court against Mr. Mills. The action went against Condon and he appealed.

The defense to the action was that Condon had no laundry ticket to show that he had the undershirt in the laundry.

The legal expenses involved amount to more than the price of several hundred undershirts similar to the one Condon says he lost.

COTTON.—The bull forces expressed themselves as thoroughly satisfied with the opening of the new year and century, so far as the cotton market was concerned, and freely predicted a succession of advantageous movements in values on legitimate conditions. The early market was decidedly more active than for some time, while the session as a whole reflected a return of old-time investment speculation. Sentiment in general was of a friendly character, and Wall Street displayed more interest of a substantial sort than since election day. Later in the forenoon bull speculation on a more generous line came to the front, with the result that by midday a net rise of 10@14 points was apparent, with the market at that time decidedly firmer in tone. The market closed steady, with prices net 19@20 points higher. Spot cotton closed dull, with quotations 1-16c higher on the basis of 10¼c for middling upland and 10¾c for middling Gulf. No sales. BREADSTUFFS.—WHEAT—The first business day of the new year resulted in honors in the wheat market being about evenly divided between the bull and bear contingents. Each had a good swing at the market during the session, bearishness predominating at the immediate opening and close, while bulls controlled things at midday, pushing values higher than they ruled at any time on Monday. The close, however, after a period of late realizing, was quite weak at ⅛@⅝c net decline, and about 1⅝c under the best point of the day. ARMY BILL IN THE SENATE

Subsidy Bill Is Set Aside Without Debate or Comment.

OPPOSITION LINE OF ATTACK.

Mr. Bacon of Georgia Suggests a Special Philippine Army—Mr. Hawley Hints at Trouble Abroad.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Without a murmur of dissent and without a word of comment, the Senate to-day displaced the shipping subsidy bill from its privileged position as "unfinished business," and substituted for it the Army Reorganization bill. Since the second day of the present session the shipping bill had been the unfinished business with the understanding that it should not interfere with the consideration of the Army Reorganization bill or of appropriation bills.

When the Senate convened to-day the Army bill was taken up with a view to pressing it to a final vote as soon as possible. Its consideration proceeded until 2 o'clock—the end of the morning hour—when the subsidy bill was laid before the Senate. Mr. Pettigrew of South Dakota then objected to a request for unanimous consent to continue the discussion of the Army bill. By a vote of the Senate the military measure was continued for consideration, thus making it the unfinished business and sending the subsidy bill back to the calendar.

During the discussion of the army measure the opposition Senators indicated that their line of attack upon the bill would be against the creation of a large permanent standing army. There was an intimation that objection would not be offered to a temporary measure to provide a adequate force to maintain the authority of the United States in the Philippines. Beyond this point to-day's proceedings developed nothing.

When, at the conclusion of morning business, Mr. Hawley, (Rep., Conn.) Chairman of the Committee on Military Affairs, asked unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the Army Reorganization bill, Mr. Morgan (Dem., Ala.,) inquired if the consideration proposed was to be limited to the morning hours, (the time before 2 o'clock.) "Oh, certainly," replied Mr. Hawley. No objection being offered, the bill was laid before the Senate.

Mr. Bacon (Dem., Ga.,) inquired if it was the purpose of the committee to act upon the Senate amendments to-day in the course of the reading of the measure. If so he would object to taking up the measure.

After some discussion as to the status of the bill and the amendments made by the Senate committee, the bill having originated in the Senate, been amended by the House, which offered a substitute for it, and returned to the Senate practically as a new bill, Mr. Pettigrew (Sil., S. D.) demanded the reading of the measure in full. The bill was read, although Chairman Hawley appealed to Mr. Pettigrew to withdraw his demand.

During the reading of the bill Mr. Teller (Sil., Rep., Col.,) interrupted to inquire as to the increase of the army provided by the Senate bill as originally passed. Mr. Proctor, (Rep., Vt.,) a member of the Military Committee, replied that the original Senate measure had increased only the artillery arm. The amendment adopted by the House as to the artillery arm was equivalent to five regiments in the form of a corps. The Senate committee proposed to change the corps into five regiments. The bill provided in brief, Mr. Proctor explained, for an army of 58,000 minimum strength and 68,000 maximum strength.

Mr. Bacon inquired who would have discretion in the fixing of the strength of the army.

"The President of the United States," replied Mr. Proctor.

"Aguinaldo will have something to say about it," interjected Mr. Hawley.

To Mr. Hawley's remark Mr. Bacon retorted hotly. He said the Senate was here to discuss this great question of the army reorganization seriously and with a due sense of its gravity. He had, he said, asked his question in good faith, and resented therefore the jocular interjection of Mr. Hawley. The Senate, he said, was engaged in a most serious discussion—whether there should be an increase in the size of the army of the United States, and how it should be increased. It involved the more serious question whether it should be the recognized policy of the Government that the Chief Executive should have unlimited, uncontrolled, unbridled power—the absolute power, to increase at his will the army of the United States.

Mr. Hawley disclaimed any intention of being uncivil to Mr. Bacon in interjecting his remark about Aguinaldo. He had meant to convey the idea that the cause of the Filipino insurgents might be a determining factor in the size of the army.

Mr. Bacon inquired why the discretionary power of fixing the size of the army should be taken from Congress and conferred upon the President.

Mr. Allison (Rep., Iowa,) maintained that it was not the purpose of the Military Committee or the idea of the bill that the discretionary power of Congress should be taken away and conferred upon the President. He held that the strength of the army from year to year would be determined by the appropriations for the army made by Congress. Thus Congress at all times would determine finally the size of the army. This year, he said, appropriations would be made for an army of the maximum strength.

In the course of the discussion Mr. Hawley referred to the opening of the civil war, the firing upon Fort Sumter—possibly in the presence of Mr. Bacon—and President Lincoln's subsequent call for 75,000 men without action by Congress.

Mr. Bacon replied that he was not at that exact point when Sumter was fired upon. "I hope," said he, "that in this discussion we shall limit ourselves to the conditions as they are now, and that the conditions of forty years ago will not be brought into the matter. The time has come when the statute of limitations ought to bar such discussion."

SHIPPING BILL IS DISPLACED.

At 2 o'clock Mr. Frye, the President pro tem., stopped the debate and laid before the Senate the unfinished business—the Shipping Subsidy bill. Mr. Hawley asked for unanimous consent that the Shipping bill be laid aside temporarily, and that the consideration of the Army bill proceed.

"I object," shouted Mr. Pettigrew.

"I expected that," said Mr. Hawley sarcastically.

Mr. Hawley then moved that the Senate proceed with the consideration of the Army bill.

"Will that motion, if carried, have the effect of displacing the Subsidy bill as the unfinished business?" inquired Mr. Bacon.

"It will," replied the Chair.

Without division the motion prevailed, and the Army bill became the unfinished business.

After Mr. Froraker (Rep., Ohio,) had commented briefly upon the authority conferred upon the President by the bill, warmly commending it, the reading of the measure was resumed.

At the conclusion of the reading of the bill, Mr. Hawley proposed that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the amendments.

Mr. Pettigrew protested that some explanation of the measure ought to be made by somebody. The necessity of an army of 100,000, he said, had not been pointed out. He did not think it existed.

Mr. Sewell (Rep., N. J.) said the United States had had as high as 79,000 troops in the Philippines, and even now had about 76,000 men there. These were divided among many posts." If we are to hold the Philippines," he continued, "we will have to keep a large army there this year, next year, and, perhaps, for several years to come. We are now withdrawing our volunteers from the Philippines in compliance with the law. It will take all the time between now and the 30th of June to bring back these men. The question of transportation is a great one to deal with. There is urgent necessity for the passage of this bill, as troops must be provided to takes the places of the volunteers in the Philippines.

"I think no Senator is in favor of abandoning our flag in the Philippines, or anywhere else, unless it be the Senator from South Dakota. [Pettigrew.] There is a war going on there. There may not be any great shock of battle, but the conditions demand the presence of a very considerable army. The country must face this question boldly. It will require a large army in the Philippines for several years to come. No matter how we got there. We are there. And we ought to stay there."

A SPECIAL PHILIPPINE ARMY.

Mr. Bacon said he was ready now to vote for a bill providing an adequate army for the present needs of the Government, but limited as to the time of its operation. He was irrevocably opposed, he declared, to the present bill, because it fastened upon the country for all time an immense standing army. He expressed his perfect willingness to support the Administration in its maintenance of its authority in the Philippines. He differed from the controlling powers in their Philippine policy, but he was always willing to support the authority of the United States.

As he viewed it, Mr. Bacon added, the danger was that the army would be increased eventually to one of several hundreds of thousands—to an army that would dominate the country. In conclusion, he suggested that the Military Affairs Committee ought to prepare a bill providing for a special Philippine army. That, he thought, would relieve the country of the menace of a great standing army.

Mr. Hoar (Rep., Mass.,) inquired of Mr. Sewell with reference to his statement that a force of 60,000 was needed in the Philippines, whether there had been any change in the situation in the Islands since the message of the President was sent to Congress.

"They have changed very materially," replied Mr. Sewell. "We now have more skirmishes there than at any time almost since the beginning of the war."

Mr. Tillman (Dem., S. C.,) inquired whether any provision of the bill required that enlisted men should be returned to this country when their services no longer were required. He said he understood that a young man in whom he was interested had been court-martialed for some trivial offense, and at the expiration of his sentence had been discharged, without friends or funds. The War Department had no trace of him. He declared that no matter what the charge against the soldier was, he ought to have been returned to this country.

Mr. Hawley said the necessity for an adequate army was evident to all. In addition to conditions in the Philippines known to all, he said that the United States might at any time come within the pale of war with some European power. He added: "We are not altogether out of sight of some possibility of war with some European power. We do not know. They are in a great deal of trouble there, and I understand they look with very great jealousy upon our taking of a Danish island and talk about acquiring other territory."

Continuing, Mr. Hawley said that all that is possible is being done to win the hearts of the Filipinos, but that with some of them progress is necessarily slow, because of the past experience of the people with their rulers. He said the Senate Military Committee was unanimously of the opinion that a strong army should be kept in the Philippines.

Mr. Carter (Rep., Mont.,) defended the proposed increase of the permanent army in view of the temper of the Philippine people. It would be necessary to continue to police the islands for an indefinite time. He thought fully 60,000 men would be necessary for that purpose. At present more American soldiers would be needed than later, when there were better telegraph and mail facilities.

Mr. Bacon asked how long a time it would be necessary to keep so large an army in the Philippines, to which Mr. Carter replied, "That remains to be seen."

Mr. Bacon—In the opinion of the Senator how long?

Mr. Carter—I have not sufficient information to fix a definite time.

Mr. Bacon—Then the Senator recognizes that the time may be indefinite?

Mr. Carter—That word "indefinite" fits the situation very well.

The Filipinos, he said, should be made to understand once for all that it is the purpose of the United States to maintain law and order in the Philippines, and he thought the most effective way in which to do that was to increase the army permanently.

ARMY BILL AMENDMENTS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The Senate Committee on Military Affairs held a meeting to-day and decided upon some further amendments to the Army Reorganization bill. None of these changes is of general importance.

The committee agreed to accept the amendment suggested by Senator Daniel for the retirement of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee and Gen. James H. Wilson as Brigadier Generals, and also agreed to an amendment for the retirement of Gen. Shafter as a Major General.

The committee also decided to press the Army bill with all possible speed.

Senator Pettigrew, (Sil., S. D.,) introduced a resolution in the Senate calling on the President to inform the Senate what necessity, if any, exists for increasing the army at this time; what are the conditions in the Philippines, and how many men are required there. The President is also requested to send to the Senate copies of all communications received from officers in the Philippines showing the conditions in that country and the number of men required now and in the future.

REFUSED TO RAISE PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—It is stated on excellent authority that it is due to the Reading and Lehigh Valley Railroads, and especially the former, that anthracite coal prices were not advanced 25 cents a ton Jan. 1. The New York companies were anxious, and almost persistent, that another advance be made of 25 cents; but the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company flatly refused to make any increase, and they were joined by the Lehigh Valley.

The Reading Company wanted to advance the prices of anthracite after the big strike, but the New York companies declined. Since then all of the companies have scored an advance of 50 cents. The officials of the Reading contend that present prices are sufficiently high, and that they can be maintained until April at least, when of necessity they will have to be reduced.

Owing to the scarcity of anthracite in New England, and the urgent demand from that quarter, the Reading may advance the price to New England points 25 cents per ton, making the price alongside at Boston $5.25.

Steel Company's President Resigns.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—At a meeting here to-day of the Directors of the Tidewater Steel Company, the resignation of President George H. Stickney was accepted, and Charles B. Houston of Cheater was unanimously chosen his successor. Since the organization of the Tidewater Company Mr. Houston has been a member of the Board of Directors, and, aside from that, his ability to fill the position was recognized, and the other members have had him under consideration for some time. That there will be some changes at the plant is not denied.

COMMITTEE OF FIVE IGNORE POLICE BOARD

Arrange to Submit All Evidence to District Attorney Philbin.

Grounds on Which Chief Devery Can Apply to Be Retired on a Pension —Commissioner Hess's Views.

Lewis M. Nixon and Warley Platzek of the Tammany Hall Investigating Committee called on District Attorney Philbin and Assistant District Attorney Schurman yesterday to arrange for the submission of evidence in the committee's hands against disorderly houses and gambling resorts in the "red light" district and elsewhere. District Attorney Philbin assured them that any evidence submitted would be acted on promptly, and persons indicted vigorously prosecuted. The first meeting between Messrs Nixon and Platzek and Assistant District Attorney Schurman, when the evidence will be gone over, will be held perhaps some time next week. The evidence will be submitted to the January Grand Jury, which will be sworn in Monday.

Mr. Platzek, after the visit to the District Attorney, stated that the committee would furnish no more information to the Police Department, as it had decided that the suggestions made to Chief Devery and Deputy Chief Cortright had not received proper attention.

"We have," continued Mr. Platzek, "collected evidence which we are about to submit to District Attorney Philbin, and expect satisfactory results. We would welcome the appointment of a new Chief of Police. Chief Devery has disappointed us."

Col. Joel B. Erhardt of the Committee of Fifteen denied yesterday that he had been appointed Chairman of a sub-committee to select a chief agent and choose a body of detectives to hunt for evidence of official wrongdoing and vicious conditions.

Deputy Comptroller Whalen, who, in serious matters, is regarded as the personal representative of Richard Croker, laughed yesterday at a story which made Devery confer with him in regard to his status and receive information that he had to go and had better get out.

"Not a word of truth in it," said Mr. Whalen. "I have not spoken to the Chief for six months or given him any information or advice. And there have not been, directly or indirectly, any messages between me and Mr. Croker. Mr. Croker does not send messages. I do not know that he knows of the police situation. And I have no opinion to give on Chief Devery's status."

Another story, that Commissioners York, Sexton, and Hess are agreed on a plan to end the Chief career, was denied by each of them.

Chief Devery has, if precedents are followed, ample grounds on which to base an application to be retired on a pension of $1,000 a year, and if the Police Commissioners do not by a majority vote grant the application they will act as no board has acted in such circumstances. There is official authority on which the board relies for such statement. It is true that the New York City charter provides that an applicant for a pension must have served twenty years and be fifty-five years old. But in former cases of the kind, that of John McCullagh, for instance, it has been held that the charter does not apply to those who entered the police service before it became law, and that such members of the force entered into a contract which made them beneficiaries of the pension fund as the law governing it existed at the time of their appointment.

Chief Devery was born Jan. 9, 1854, so that he is in his forty-eighth year. But he became a patrolman June 19, 1878, and so has rights under the law of June 4, 1878, which provides that after twenty years of service he has the privilege of applying to be retired on a pension. The board, however, has discretion in the matter of granting the pension. The law was not mandatory. Before the board could act in his case he would have, as already stated, to remove a disability created by his securing a temporary stay against disciplinary proceedings by the board, instituted by Commissioner Avery D. Andrews. It is generally conceded that the board would not interpose obstacles to his application for retirement were the stay vacated.

"I have not," said Commissioner Hess, "talked with any member of the board on the subject of Chief Devery in any way, and have no opinion on the subject, except that as a matter of Constitutional right and the law existing when he was appointed a policeman, he can apply to be retired and pensioned, and the board can grant the application. His rights are not affected by the Charter. Nevertheless, my personal opinion is that if he stays and is removed by the Legislature, he would go out without a pension. No step has yet been taken to rehabilitate him in the matter of the old charges, so that the road is not clear for his application to be pensioned."

Chief Devery was at Police Headquarters yesterday. He would not in any way entertain any question regarding his status or intentions.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 3.—The statement was made here to-night on excellent authority that the alleged Tammany plan to remove Chief of Police Devery of New York at once would not be put into force because of the suggestions in Gov. Odell's message. It is urged that there would be no sense and nothing gained in removing Devery now and appointing a new man to an office that might be abolished within a month. So it is considered, so the story goes, good policy to allow Devery to remain until his office is abolished by the Republican Legislature.

ABELL AFTER CAPT. THOMAS.

Commissioner Called at Station and Waited in Vain for Him to Appear.

Police Commissioner Abell, accompanied by his son, visited the West Thirtieth Street Police Station late last evening and inquired for Capt. Thomas. Sergt. Burns said he was out. Mr. Abell waited three-quarters of an hour for the Captain, and left saying he would call again. The Captain's absence did not please Mr. Abell, and he evinced some show of feeling when he departed.

Mr. Abell was asked if he had been through the Tenderloin, but he refused to reply to the question, saying he had merely called to see Capt. Thomas, and that he was on his way to his home in Brooklyn. The impression prevailed in the precinct that Mr. Abell had made a tour of the Tenderloin, and that Capt. Thomas will "hear" from him to-day.

PACKING COMPANY LOSES SUIT.

Creditors of Old Concern Combined with A. Lester Heyer Plant Win.

Special to The New York Times.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Jan. 3.—The Circuit Court here to-day rendered a decision in the case of Charles S. Carr, receiver, against the A. Lester Heyer Packing Company, which secured control of the packing plant of the Northwest Packing Company of this city April 5, 1899. The new company was composed of New York, Fitchburg, (Mass.,) and Sioux Falls capitalists, A. Lester Heyer of New York being elected President and the capital stock being placed at $4,000,000. Of this, $3,000,000 was taken by Mr. Heyer and other New York capitalists. Charles T. Crocker of Fitchburg was a heavy stockholder.

A few weeks after the transfer the creditors of the old company brought suit on the ground that the transfer was made for the purpose of defrauding the creditors of the old concern. On the petition of A. J. Pettingill of Sioux Falls, who had claims for over $100,000 against the former company, the matter was taken into the Bankruptcy Court, where he got a verdict of $10,000 as a preliminary step toward compelling the payment of this and other claims. To-day's decision in the Circuit Court was a victory for the creditors of the old company.

Le Journal of Paris Prints an Unconfirmed Report That the Allies' Commander in China Is Dead.

PARIS, Jan. 4.—Le Journal reports, under reserve, the death of Count von Waldersee, the rumor being that he was killed by an officer of the allied troops, the circumstances not being related.

It is said that the rumor is current in Berlin, where it is not confirmed.

SUGAR WAR SETTLEMENT.

Havemeyers to Get Sugar Plants, Arbuckles Get Coffee Business, It Is Said.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—The Tribune will print the following story to-morrow:

"Private advices have reached Chicago that the war between the great sugar and coffee trusts—a battle which has been stubbornly fought for more than three years between Henry O. Havemeyer on one side and John Arbuckle on the other, and which has cost these trade rivals approximately $25,000,000—is to be brought to a close.

"Negotiations have been closed in New York and Chicago whereby the Arbuckles will nominally give up sugar refining and become dictators in the coffee trade; Henry O. Havemeyer and the Sugar Trust will practically give up the coffee roasting plants, with which an effort was made to crush out John Arbuckle, and handle only the sugar business.

"Each will, however, continue in the business of his rival in a small way, compared to their holdings of the last three years. To this end the big coffee roasting establishment of W. F. McLaughlin & Co. of this city—the one important 'independent' house in the coffee world—is to pass into the control of the Arbuckles through the hands of the Havemeyers. Plans for this transfer have been most secretly carried on, but those on the 'inside' declare that negotiations were fully completed last Monday morning. The money for the purchase is now in Chicago banks, and the transfer papers have been drafted.

"The Arbuckles also are to get the Woolson Spice Company, with its mills at Toledo. This company has been the coffee branch of the American Sugar Refining Company. In exchange the Arbuckle Brothers' sugar refinery passes to the Havemeyers. The National Sugar Refining Company is held to be now practically controlled by the American Sugar Refining Company, and therefore, with the acquisition of the Arbuckle plant, the trust will have stamped out all competitors.

"The Arbuckles, it is asserted, insisted that a similar post in the coffee market should be provided them before they would consent to the ending of hostilities. With the big McLaughlin plant in the field as an independent competitor it was argued that the coffee trust would not have affairs its own way.

"Herman Selicken, head of the Havemeyer coffee interests, reached Chicago last Sunday. He held a long conference with W. F. McLaughlin, head of the 'independent' company, and on Monday morning left for New York. Three weeks before Mr. McLaughlin had made a trip to the East and conferred with both Mr. Arbuckle and Mr. Havemeyer. Yesterday came the news that the purchase money for the McLaughlin plant has been deposited in Chicago banks. Mr. McLaughlin denied that any transfer had been made, though he smilingly declined to deny that negotiations were under way.

"'I believe, though,' he admitted, 'that the war between the Arbuckles and the Havemeyer Company will soon be brought to a close. I have argued with John Arbuckle and Mr. Havemeyer again and again that the battle should end. But of one thing you may be certain—Mr. Arbuckle will not give up the refining of sugar, nor will Mr. Havemeyer get out of the coffee business.'

"'How could a truce be brought about, then?' he was asked.

"'Only by an agreement, I believe,' was the reply. 'The output of the refining plant would be limited to a stipulated amount.'"

MANY CATFISH SENT NORTH.

Denial of the Story That They Are Converted Into Canned Salmon Amuses Fishermen.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 3.—The desire of the salmon canners to secure, through the aid of the United States Fish Commission, a denial of published statements to the effect that catfish are shipped from the waters of Louisiana to Northern points and converted into a substitute for canned salmon, has created more or less amusement among the Louisiana fishermen, who are credited with being familiar with the facts.

The catfish fishing industry of this State appears to centre around Concordia Parish, where the fishing squads are now to be found in all the waters and along the river. Nineteen barrels of catfish were shipped North from Lake St. John by the Burton squad alone. If they were served as catfish, there is said to be no market in the North that would justify such shipments. Seining privileges will, it is expected, be granted in Concordia Parish in a few days.

PORTO RICO ATTORNEY GENERAL

James S. Harlan Is Nominated by the President.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—James Shanklin Harlan was nominated by the President to-day to be Attorney General of Porto Rico.

He was born in Louisville, Ky., in 1861, and received his preliminary education in the public schools, the High School of Louisville, and from private tutoring. He then entered Princeton. He received college honors in Greek and Latin, and was graduated with the class of 1883.

After graduation Harlan spent six months in Europe, and then entered the Columbian Law School here. When Mr. Fuller was appointed Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, in 1889, Harlan accompanied him as his private law clerk. Later he went to Chicago and formed the law firms of Gregory, Booth & Harlan, which succeeded to the practice of Mr. Fuller. In 1893 Harlan began practicing for himself.

SILVER SCARCITY IN MEXICO.

Bankers Appeal for an Export Duty—Premium on Silver Deposits.

Special to The New York Times.

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan. 3.—A dispatch from Monterey, Mexico, says that the scarcity of silver in Mexico is so great that many banks in the principal cities of the country are paying 1 per cent. interest per month on silver deposits. The continued and unprecedented exportation of Mexican silver dollars to China, the Philippines, and the Far East, together with the heavy shipments of silver bullion from Mexico to England and the United States, is apparently bringing this country to the verge of a financial crisis.

Business men and bankers throughout the country are appealing to President Diaz and Minister of Finance Limantour to have an export duty placed on silver immediately. The Consular representatives of the United States, England, France, and Germany in Mexico have called the attention of their respective Governments to the financial situation in this country. It is asserted that many banks of issue are short of the silver reserve they are required to have by law, and that the moment they are unable to respond to the demand of their customers for silver a general financial panic with distressing results will occur throughout the country.

RODE ASTRIDE A BOLTING CAB HORSE

Jules Formel, Jr., Pluckily Stops a Runaway on Broadway.

Climbed from Vehicle After Warning Frightened Miss Gonzales to Sit Still—Driver Had Fallen Off.

Jules Formel, Jr., stood on the curb by a wheezing and panting cab horse, in front of the Hotel Normandie last evening, hailed as a hero by a vociferous crowd of men and women, who swarmed about him and wanted to shake his hand, pat him on the back, and even kiss him. Inside the cab Miss Anita Gonzales of Havana, to whom he is soon to be married, sat frightened nearly out of her senses and almost in hysterics. She had just been in a wild and sudden dash up Broadway, during which Mr. Formel occupied a startling position on the back of the old horse, to the amazement of hundreds of persons who trailed behind, not knowing whether they were witnessing a circus or tragedy, or just a plain belated election wager.

But it was none of these; it was an accident which might have been serious, but turned out happily and in time to allow Mr. Formel and Miss Gonzales to go to the Broadway Theatre, where they were bound, none the worse for the ride.

Earlier in the evening Mr. Formel and Miss Gonzales, who is visiting at the Hotel Majestic with some friends from Havana, dined at the Hotel Martin. After dinner they took a cab for the theatre, driving up Fifth Avenue. As the cab was turning into Broadway, at Thirty-fourth Street, one of the reins broke off at the bit, and the driver promptly complicated matters by falling off the box. The driver yelled, "Hi, there, whoa!" but instead of stopping the horse broke into a run up Broadway. Faster he went, and his speed was accelerated by shouts from the sidewalks.

Mr. Formel took in the situation without delay. He instructed his companion not to move. Then he threw open the cab door, and, catching hold of the top, made a sudden spring and reached the driver's seat. Inside, Miss Gonzales sat still, too frightened to utter a sound. During these few seconds, the cab narrowly missed running into several other vehicles, and more well-meaning but misplaced yells only served to make the beast's course more erratic. Mr. Formel had difficulty in keeping his seat. He looked for the reins, and then saw that one was broken. Gathering himself for a jump, he sprang forward and landed on the horse's back. The frightened animal let out another link of speed, and Mr. Formel, working himself forward, grasped the bridle with one hand. With the other, he seized thre horse by the nose and brought it to a stanostill in front of the Normandie.

In a few minutes, when Miss Gonzales had regained her composure and the cab had been taken care of, the couple went to the theatre just as though nothing had happened.

Mr. Formel is a commission merchant at 10 Barclay Street. Miss Gonzales's family is said to be a prominent one in Cuba.

DROP IN CHICAGO WHEAT.

May Option Falls Nearly 3 Cents—Gates Said to Have Sold Out.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Leaders in wheat were at sea to-day. There was a see-saw market, such as is seldom seen. From 76⅞ cents the May price went to 77¾ cents. Then there was a 1¼-cent break to 76½ cents. This was followed by a sharp advance to 77½ cents. Later there was a third break to 76¼ cents, and the close was at 76⅝ cents. This put the market nearly 3 cents under the top point of yesterday.

It was argued to-day that the Gates following had sold out wheat bought on the advance, and that Counselman buying for several days has been for a bigger and older speculator than even the Steel and Wire man.

UNIVERSITY WILL OWN STOCKS.

Chicago Institution to Receive Part of Rockefeller's Gift in Securities.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—When John D. Rockefeller gave $1,300,000 to the University of Chicago a few weeks ago as a Christmas gift, he told Dr. Harper that the Trustees could have the money in cold cash or in any kind of securities that the oil magnate had on his account books.

It took the university magnates a long time to decide the matter. To-day Dr. T. W. Goodspeed, Secretary of the Board of Trustees, wired Mr. Rockefeller that the university would like to have $500,000 of Baltimore and Ohio Railroad stock and the same amount from Mr. Rockefeller's holdings in the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Road.

Mr. Rockefeller answered that nothing would suit him better, and now the University of Chicago is interested in railroads as well as Standard Oil. These securities, chosen by the university, will yield an annual income at the rate of 6 per cent.

Dr. Goodspeed's communication requested that Mr. Rockefeller permit the university to draw on him for the other $500,000 whenever the Trustees needed it. All of this third, which is in cash, will be spent in the construction of new buildings for the university. President Harper and the Trustees are much pleased that they have so much good railroad stock.

FIRE AT DR. WM. EVERETT'S.

Nearly a Thousand Books at His Quincy Home Burned.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—Fire swept through Dr. William Everett's house in Quincy this afternoon while both he and his housekeeper were away. The fire broke out near the fireplace in the sitting room, and that room and the hall adjoining it were the worst burned parts of the house.

The loss is hardly estimable in dollars and cents, as many of Dr. Everett's books cannot be replaced at any price. It is also hard to number the burned volumes, but they range very close to 1,000. Those in the sitting room are a mass of burned leaves, three feet deep over the entire floor. The bindings of most of the books on the shelves were burned entirely off and the edges of the leaves were charred. In Dr. Everett's sleeping room, directly over the sitting room, the books were as badly burned.

There are some books in the third story, in cases, in a little hall in the rear of the house, and these were scorched badly, but not destroyed. In that story the fire went toward the rear of the house, hardly touching an unfurnished garret in front, where hangs from a peg the gold-laced, swallow-tailed coat which was the official dress of Edward Everett at the Court of St. James's.

The large stable which stands in the rear of the dwelling, in which are by far the larger number of Dr. Everett's books, was not burned.

Dr. Everett is at present acting as head master of the Adams Academy, having again taken up that position after the death of his friend, Prof. Tyler.

Ex-Confederate Leader Dies in Mexico.

CITY OF MEXICO, Jan. 3.—Major Gen. James E. Slaughter, the ex-Confederate leader, died here yesterday from pneumonia, aged eighty-seven years. He was a West Point graduate, and commanded the Confederate forces at the last fight between the States at Bonas San Jago, Texas. He was also a veteran of the Mexican War, having accompanied Gen. Scott's army to this city as Lieutenant. He first made known to the Mexican Government the fraudulent character of the Weil and Latre claims.

POPULATION IN A. D. 2001.

May Be 300,000,000, R. P. Porter Says, but No Estimate Can Be Accurate, He Adds.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Robert P. Porter, who was Census Commissioner when the eleventh census was taken, and who has just visited Washington after an absence of several months, manifests a natural interest in the work of his successor in the Census Office. He has been looking over the returns, and makes some deductions therefrom. "Taking all past records as a basis," said Mr. Porter, "the population of the United States at the close of this century ought to be at least 300,000,000, but no one can prophesy this with any particle of hope that it will be approximately correct. At the beginning of the nineteenth century—100 years ago—all the statisticians of prominence estimated that the population of the United States at this time would be 100,000,000. These predictions were based on the increase prior to that time.

"The natural increment of a healthy country like England is 1½ per cent. a year, or about 15 per cent. a decade. By that is meant the augmentation by birth, giving no consideration to the growth by immigration. If we should increase at the rate of 1½ per cent. a year by natural means and continue along these lines for the next 100 years, the population would be 300,000,000, not counting the increase by immigration, but there is much in the census statistics of ten years ago and now to cast doubt upon the anticipated heavy increase.

"In the larger cities of the country, for instance, the tendency is apparently to smaller families. In some of the large cities the size of the families has decreased from five to four children. Suppose that in the next thirty, forty, or fifty years the decrease in the number of children to the family is from four to three, the effect will be great. Later, if the decrease should be to two children, as is the tendency in France, the increase in population would almost stop.

"There is no doubt that as the population of a country increases the fight for life becomes more bitter and more serious. In France, as is well known, the population practically stands still. Each family is satisfied with two children—a boy and a girl. The French people go on the theory that the battle for existence is too terrible an affair now without adding to its terrors by more people to share what there is to be divided. Nobody can tell now whether such an idea will attain growth in this country in the future.

"The truth is that the best actuary cannot predict with any accuracy for a period of more than ten or twenty years. In the course of a few more years the young people of this country may conclude, by reason of a desire to evade responsibility in family affairs, that they will not marry until they are several years older than the average period for marriage now. The effect of this on the population would be great. Let us suppose that the marriageable age for young men is now twenty-five. I do not remember the exact figure. They decide not to marry until they are older, say, twenty-six. The decrease here alone would be an enormous number."

BURGLAR ESCAPES FROM JAIL.

Second Inmate of White Plains Prison to Get Out Since New Year's Day.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Jan. 3.—Jacob Benedict, alias John McGarry, an ex-convict and burglar, who was awaiting trial on seven indictments by the Westchester Grand Jury, has escaped from the county jail at White Plains and Deputy Sheriffs and detectives are scouring the country for him.

Samuel Miller had hardly begun his duties as the new Sheriff of Westchester on Jan. 1, when Gus De Well, another daring burglar, impersonated a tramp and calmly walked out of the jail with a gang of released hoboes. He was chased half a mile and was finally captured after a fight. This morning Jailer John Fye received a report from Louis Reynolds, a guard, that the cell occupied by Benedict, on the top tier, was empty. How he got away is not known. He was one of the prisoners who took part in the attempt to escape on Dec. 29, when all the straw bedticks were taken from the cells on the lower tier and set afire.

Prisoners in the White Plains jail say they can open any cell door with a piece of wire. The automatic locking system is practically worthless, as the levers fail to lock the doors properly.

HUDSON RIVER ICE IS POOR.

Large Fields Spoiled by Drifting Grass and Sand.

Special to The New York Times.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Jan. 3.—The Hudson River is covered with ice and tightly closed from Kingston northward to Albany. The freezing has not been as good as usual because of a strong wind which blew from the northeast for several days before the ice stopped forming, in consequence of which the water was full of drifting grass and weeds blown from the shoals. This debris has become frozen into many of the fields, making them worthless for harvesting.

Many icemen will be compelled to go long distances to get a supply of marketable ice with which to fill their houses on account of these dirty fields. In past years anything that could be termed ice was thought to be good enough to store and send to market, but now the dealers are making every effort to get a quality of ice that will be perfectly clean, and as clear as crystal.

The fact that there has been no snow on the ground has been another drawback to getting a good crop. The ground being dry and uncovered, the strong Winter winds in some cases have blown the dirt and sand far out on the fields along the river shores. The ice harvesters are now praying for a snowstorm that will protect them from the dust and dirt. There is complaint at Catskill that the shale brick works have been the means of destroying most of the ice in the creek at that place, the smoke, cinders, and dust from the works being blown on it and destroying the quality of the ice. This trouble is more apparent in the upper and narrower part of the river, but below Hudson there is very little trouble to be met with.

The water in the river since the freeze-up has settled and is now clear and clean. With a few days of zero weather the ice will "make" very fast. The thickness in most of the fields is from three to five inches, although back of some of the islands in the upper Hudson there are fields which measure over six inches.

R. H. Fitzhugh Killed in the Klondike.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Jan. 3.—News has been received here of the death of Robert Hunter Fitzhugh in the Klondike Nov. 4. He was killed in a snowslide. Fitzhugh was one of the foremost men in the new gold country, and one of the founders of the Episcopal Church at Rampart City. In 1897 he accepted the position of Chief Engineer for a large Chicago mining company in the Klondike, but after a year's service with that concern he began prospecting for himself. Seated at their New Year's dinner the members of the Fitzhugh family were happy celebrating the good fortune of the successful son and brother, and had just finished reading a thrilling letter from him, of Klondike life, when the telegram announcing his death was received. Fitzhugh was thirty years old, and had many friends in New York.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 3.—The Oliver H. Bair Company of Philadelphia was chartered at Dover to-day, with a capital of $500,000, to conduct funerals. The company is to work on a plan by which a person can make all arrangements for his own funeral and pay expenses in installments before death.

CAPE TOWN CITIZENS ENLISTING RAPIDLY

Five Hundred Volunteer for Service the First Day.

PRISONERS WILL BE MOVED

To Be Transferred to Transports—Boer Invaders of Cape Colony Active—Kitchener Promises Lenity.

CAPE TOWN, Jan. 3.—The military authorities are preparing for all contingencies. It has been decided to transfer the Boer prisoners from the camps to transports.

The enrollment of volunteers for the defense of the Colony was started this morning with the utmost enthusiasm. The members of the Civil Service enlisted in a body, and millionaires and beggars enlisted with equal ardor. Such business men as are unable to get away are organizing a town guard composed of the leading citizens.

Five hundred citizens enlisted to-day. It is hoped that the first batch of mounted men will start within three days for Worcester. They are to hold the passes of the Hex River Mountains and to protect the railway tunnel. The organization is rough and ready, and not troubled with much drill or special uniform. Horses are scarce.

Six thousand five hundred South African irregulars have been recruited during the last eight weeks.

Lord Kitchener has sent a dispatch to Gen. Forestier-Walker, (in command of the British forces at Cape Town,) saying:

"I am glad to hear of the Ministers' action, the calling on the loyalists in twenty-seven districts, including the District of Cape Town, to assist the military by the formation of a paid defense force.] Give them all the assistance in your power. Use trains to get these colonists South of the enemy. Ask the Premier to inform me if I can help in any way. Inform him that the enemy are few but very mobile. Well-mounted men are most required to surround them or drive them north."

Farmers coming in to Carnarvon describe the Boers as traveling in parallel columns, with numerous thanking parties, sweeping the country on horses, plundering loyalists, and carrying off everything eatable. It appears that they are accompanied by strings of pack horses ligatly loaded.

Colesberg telegraphs that Kritzinger's commando is crossing the Middleburg district, but is getting few if any recruits. A commando is supposed to be in the mountains dividing Middelburg and Graaf Reinet, but cannot be exactly located.

The invaders in the west, who were expected at Fra

He asserted that it was imperative to clear the country of inhabitants and of food, because so long as food remained the commandoes would be able to continue in the field. He could not be responsible for stock unless it was brought in, adding that he hoped at the end of the war to be able to divide the remaining stock among the various sufferers.

No one, he promised, would be sent out of the country, but all who had fought fairly, including the leaders, would receive the consideration due their rank. He advised the formation of local sub-committees to send out agents to the Boer commandoes, explaining that they could communicate through the central committee and the military Governor, and could also come to see him. (Lord Kitchener.)

Lord Kitchener bade his hearers tell their friends what they had heard him say, and assured them that they could place the most absolute reliance on his giving effect to it.

The Committee, which included Gen. Cronje's brother, cordially thanked Lord Kitchener, and promised to print the speech in Dutch and to circulate it everywhere.

Since the meeting, orders have been issued against burning farm houses unless it should be proved that the actual inhabitants have committed misdeeds.

The first districts cleared under Lord Kitchener's plan were Jägersfontein and Fauresmith, whose inhabitants were laagered at Fauresmith.

Mr. Krueger Better.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 3.—Mr. Krüger was disturbed during the night as a result of the attack of bronchitis, but he was better this morning. The bronchitis is following the normal course.

The Cape-to-Cairo Expedition.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The Daily Telegraph's Cape-to-Cairo expedition has arrived at Khartoum. Its members highly praise the promising work of the British South Africa Chartered Company and of the Soudan administration. "The British African empire now arising," says The Daily Telegraph, "will shortly stand as the crowning monument of a glorious reign."

Anti-British Sentiment in Germany.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—The jingo papers continue to attack the Government for what they call its Anglophile policy. The Deutsche Tages Zeitung, discussing the Anglo-Portuguese relations, remarks: "England has acquired two allies at a very cheap price. One is Portugal and the other is Germany."

Son of Don Carlos Ill.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 3.—Prince Jaime de Bourbon, son of Don Carlos, the Spanish pretender, who is a Lieutenant in the Russian Imperial Hussars and on the staff of Vice Admiral Alexieff, has been sent to Nagasaki suffering from typhoid fever.

JOHN S. BERRY DEAD.

Was a Well-Known Citizen and Business Man of Baltimore.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 3.—John Summerfield Berry, prominent in Methodist Church circles, and for over half a century one of the most earnest workers for the good of the city and State, died this morning at the age of seventy-nine. For many years he was a lay delegate from the Baltimore Conference to the Quadrennial General Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and he served as the Treasurer of the Board of Stewards of the Baltimore Annual Conference for many years. He was also President of the Board of Managers of the Home of the Aged of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and interested in many charities.

For some years Mr. Berry was engaged with his brother-in-law, John Hurst, in the wholesale dry goods trade. In 1857 he was Speaker of the House of the State General Assembly. In 1862 Gov. Bradford appointed him Adjutant General of the State, and he retained the office for eight years. In 1864 he was elected a member of the conference to frame a new Constitution for the State, and was the only slaveholder in Maryland who advocated the insertion of the article abolishing slavery. The General was three times elected Grand Master of the Masonic Order in this State.

The General became famous the country over a few years ago, when, as head of the Park Commission, he imposed strict regulations upon bicycling and made stringent rules imposing a penalty for kissing and courting in the public parks. He was published in papers everywhere as the author of the "Anti-Billing and Cooing regulation" in the Baltimore parks.

WRONG MRS. SMITH WAS DEAD.

Woman Went to Funeral, Then Found Her Sister, Mrs. Smith, Alive.

Special to The New York Times.

ASHTABULA, Ohio, Jan. 3.—Mrs. Edward Loftus of Ashtabula yesterday heard that her sister, Mrs. Frank Smith of Conneaut, had died from the effects of severe burns. She thought that if such was the case it was strange that she had not heard it from some member of the family. She decided to go at once to Conneaut. Arriving there shortly before 2 o'clock P. M. she arranged to go at once to Mrs. Smith's home. She inquired if there was a Mrs. Frank Smith dead, and was told that there was, and that the funeral was to take place at that hour.

The driver of the carriage thought she wanted to go to the home of the Mrs. Frank Smith who had died, and started in that direction. As they neared the house the funeral procession was seen leaving the church. Mrs. Loftus went at once to the undertaker and asked if she could see the body. He told her she could. She then noticed, however, that among the mourners there was no one whom she had ever seen before, and upon inquiry found that it was another Mrs. Frank Smith who had been burned, and who had died, and who was about to be buried.

Then Mrs. Loftus was driven to the home of her sister, where she found her alive and well

INVESTIGATION AT ANNAPOLIS.

Charges Made That a Marine Died on the Santee from Ill-Treatment.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The Navy Department has called upon the Superintendent of the Naval Academy for a report upon a charge submitted by Representative Rixey of Virginia to the effect that a marine named Hobart Green of Virginia had died at Annapolis from ill-treatment while sick. It was alleged that Green was obliged to march while ill from pneumonia and that the decks were washed beneath him while he lay in his hammock on the Santee.

The medical record shows that Grsen died Dec. 14 from quick pneumonia. His father is a special pension examiner credited to Sandusky, Ohio.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 3.—The order of the Navy Department to investigate the conditions and causes of the death of Private Marine Hobart Green, who died on the Santee on Dec. 14, have been received at the Naval Academy. Superintendent Wainwright has not yet appointed the Board of Investigation, but will probably do so in a few days.

The charges preferred by the friends of Private Green embrace two items—that the Santee, on which the marine guard is quartered, is overcrowded, and that Green received improper treatment, the specific charge in this connection being that the deck of the Santee was washed with a hose while he lay in his hammock ill with pneumonia.

There are now 120 marines quartered on the Santee, because the barracks were demolished to make room for the new armory in course of erection at the Naval Academy. One hundred and fifty cadets have been quartered at a time on board the vessel.

The medical treatment of Green will also be investigated. The charges do not specify any particular officer or officers as culpable, so the board will probably sit in the nature of a court of inquiry. The findings will first be referred to Washington and be made public by the Navy Department.

LONDON WELCOMES "BOBS"

Lord Roberts Enthusiastically Cheered by Big Crowds.

MANY ROYALTIES MEET HIM

Brilliant Scene at Paddington Station—West End Gayly Decorated and Illuminated at Night.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Lord Roberts yesterday received a right royal welcome on his return to London after a year's absence in South Africa. The crowds were not so dense nor so demonstrative as during the recent war celebrations, but people paid from 3 to 10 guineas for seats in Piccadilly and St. James's Street balconies. Stately mansions like Apsley House, Lord Rothschild's, and the Duke of Devonshire's were crowded with notabilities, but there prevailed on all sides a feeling that the progress of the campaign did not warrant triumphal ovations.

However, this in no respect detracted from the affection with which the little Field Marshal was greeted. It was as a man, rather than as a General, that London welcomed "Bobs." The reception proved that there is no more beloved figure in public life in the United Kingdom than the present Commander in Chief. He was everywhere greeted with real affection. His modest bearing and the care with which he saluted on all sides along the route further endeared him to the people.

Crowds of people flocked to points of vantage along the route to be followed by Lord Roberts, from Paddington Station to Buckingham Palace, during the early hours of the morning, but the numbers in no way compared with those present on the occasion of the demonstration in honor of the return of the City Imperial Volunteers from South Africa. Fears of a repetition of the riotous behavior and disasters on that occasion deterred many persons from joining in the public welcome. Warned by the occurrences at the time of the Volunteers' return, the authorities furnished barriers to prevent crushing, and 15,000 regular troops, in addition to thousands of police, lined the route, blocked the side streets, and were concentrated in the wide spaces to guard against dangerous rushes.

LORD ROBERTS'S ARRIVAL.

Lord Roberts reached Paddington Station only 20 minutes behind the schedule time. As he descended from his saloon carriage to the platform of the elaborately decorated railroad station he was greeted by the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of York, the Duke of Connaught, and the Duke of Cambridge. Such an array of royalties has seldom turned out to do honor to a subject. The members of the royal family shook hands heartily with the Field Marshal, while the bands played the national anthem. The Princess of Wales engaged Lord Roberts in a conversation of some length.

The scene was altogether brilliant. Everywhere were masses of bunting, troops, women in bright costumes, Cabinet Ministers, and staff officers. The people on the stand opposite the carpeted platform could see little but cocked hats and bonnets. "Bobs," 5 feet 2 inches high, was invisible except from the front of the circle.

After congratulations had been exchanged, Lord Roberts walked with the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, and the Adjutant General, (Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood,) and reviewed the Guard of Honor. The veteran Field Marshal, who appeared to be in perfect health, with pink cheeks, bore himself jauntily and with evident enjoyment. He walked down each rank, saluting with his left hand, as his right hand is still in a sling, (as a result of his fall from his horse in South Africa,) speaking to the Sergeants, and occasionally picking out a private for a few words recalling previous service together.

After the inspection, Lord Roberts had a few minutes' conversation with his old comrades before he went out to meet London's multitude. The Prince of Wales, with Lady Roberts, meanwhile left the station in a royal carriage drawn by six horses, and escorted by Life Guards, preceding Lord Roberts to Buckingham Palace. To the retuning Field Marshal was then presented an address from the municipality of Paddington. After Lord Roberts had replied, the procession was formed, the headquarters staff, in six carriages, following immediately behind the Field Marshal, who occupied a state carriage, escorted by Indian cavalry. The Secretary of State for War (the Right Hon. William St. John Brodrick) and the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs (the Marquis of Lansdowne, late Secretary for War,) were seated in another carriage. Lord Roberts was in full uniform, but behind his carriage his staff followed in khaki. They and the six Indian orderlies in magnificent semi-barbaric uniforms were the only picturesque features of the little procession.

The fact that Lord Roberts's personal escort consisted of the Tenth Hussars, which regiment Lord Rossiyn and others have accused of cowardice at Sanna's Post, was taken to indicate Lord Roberts's desire to exculpate these Hussars from any blame, and at the same time to pay a tribute to the Prince of Wales, who is their honorary Colonel.

The party proceeded to Buckingham Palace by way of Hyde Park and Piccadilly. The journey was made without a hitch, notwithstanding the fog. Deafening cheers greeted the Field Marshal and new Commander in Chief of the Forces along all parts of the route. Clubland was ablaze with color, and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. Women admitted to the hallowed club precincts thronged the windows and balconies. The hotels and other buildings were all lavishly bedecked and all crowded from top to bottom with cheering spectators.

The roar of welcome continued unceasingly until the veteran commander entered the gates of the palace. A few distinguished people were waiting wearily within the sombre palace quadrangle, in which the gas lamps vainly tried to disperse the foggy gloom. The Foot Guards on duty, wearing their overcoats, were drawn up within, while without some fifty thousand persons were packed together in an effort to get a view of the hero of the hour.

The royal party arrived half an hour before Lord Roberts, who was driven into the quadrangle amid a salvo of cheering from the crowds and a dignified waving of handkerchiefs on the part of the bare-headed nobility. Within, the Prince of Wales again warmly greeted the Field Marshal.

Everybody by that time, 2:30 P. M., was very hungry, but Lord Roberts would not go to luncheon until he had inspected the Guards. Accompanied by one or two officers he walked between the lines of men, who towered over the tiny Commander in Chief, making him appear smaller than ever, almost over-weighted by the immense plumes of his Field Marshal's hat.

LUNCHEON AT BUCKINGHAM PALACE.

When the inspection was over, Lord Roberts, the members of the royal family, and the Generals went into the palace and had luncheon, whereupon the crowds dispersed. Those present at the luncheon consisted of fifty persons, about twenty of whom were royalties and thirty were of the nobility.

All the royal ladies were in half mourning, and most of the guests in neutral or sombre tints, very few appearing in bright shades. The Princess of Wales wore black, with a cream vest. Princess Louise had a costume of black velvet, with touches of mauve, and Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain was in black.

The five tables were gorgeous with gold plate and flower decorations, chiefly begonias. In the centre of each was a big gold cup. At the high table in the centre Lord Roberts, looking fatigued but triumphant, sat between the Princess of Wales and Princess Victoria of Wales. The Prince of Wales sat between Lady Roberts and the Duchess of Argyll. At the same table sat the Duchess of York, the Duke of Connaught, the Duke of Cambridge, Lord Salisbury, Lord Wolseley, and Lord Selborne. The second table, headed by the Duke of York, included Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain.

There were only two toasts, one to the Queen and the other to Lord Roberts. The Prince of Wales, proposing the health of the Field Marshal, said:

"It is my pleasure, on behalf of the Princess and of all the members of the royal family, in the Queen's name to welcome Lord Roberts home from the distant country where he has commanded our gallant army in very difficult and trying circumstances.

"I am glad to think the war is now nearly approaching conclusion. We congratulate Lord Roberts upon the great success he has achieved, and upon seeing him safe back. In the name of all present I wish to express our delight at finding Lord Roberts accompanied by his wife and two daughters, especially the one whose health recently caused so much anxiety."

After felicitating Lord Roberts upon the reception accorded to him by the citizens and the soldiers, the Prince went on to say:

"It was such a reception as will be extended to all Englishmen who do their duty. His Lordship and I have known each other so long that it fills my heart with joy to see the gallant soldier home again. No one could offer him heartier congratulations than those which, on behalf of the assembled company, it is my privilege to extend to him in proposing his good health."

SPEECH BY THE FIELD MARSHAL.

The whole company rose to honor the toast. Lord Roberts, replying, said:

"Your Royal Highnesses, My Lords, Ladies, and Gentlemen:

"I am deeply sensible of the honor your royal Highness, with the Princess, and the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, paid me in coming to see me at Paddington Station, and I appreciate very highly the kind and flattering words in which your royal Highness has proposed my health. My heart is full of joy at the unexpected and magnificent honor with which her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to reward my endeavors in South Africa, and at the splendid welcome the public of England have given me.

"The only drawback to my happiness is that circumstances in South Africa have prevented more of my comrades from being with me—the comrades to whose valor and military skill I owe any success that may have been achieved in South Africa. I much wished that some of the representatives of the great colonies could have accompanied me here—the colonies which have given their bravest and their best to fight for the mother country, in signal proof of the unity of the empire under one flag and one sovereign.

"Your gracious words, Sir, and the kindness of this distinguished company in responding to them, will, I assure you, never be forgotten by me." [Loud applause.]

Lord Roberts went from Buckingham Palace to the War Office, where he formally took over the work of Commander in Chief of the Forces. He will begin attending the War Office at regular hours today.

The War Office, the West End clubs, and the public buildings were illuminated last evening. The thoroughfares were unusually crowded, the holiday spirit was evident, but there was little of the disorder and drunkenness of the previous war celebrations.

The Right Hon. William St. John Brodrick, Secretary of State for War, gave a dinner last evening in honor of Lord Roberts, at which the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Connaught, the Duke of Cambridge, Prince Edward of Saxe-Weimar, Lord Wolseley, the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, and other notable persons, were present. The Field Marshal had another popular ovation in the early evening when proceeding to Portland Place to dine with Mr. Brodrick.

After midnight the streets cleared rapidly, and the newspapers this morning are able to congratulate the capital upon a worthy reception of a hero unmarred by disreputable scenes.

RECEPTION AT SOUTHAMPTON.

SOUTHAMPTON, Jan. 3.—A dense fog this morning disarranged the programme here for the reception of Field Marshal Lord Roberts; and it was an hour after the appointed time when he arrived.

The enthusiasm of the large concourse of people, however, was in no way damped by the thick pall of mist, and amid scenes of great jubilation, commingled with cheering and the singing of patriotic airs, Lord Roberts landed and drove through the richly decorated streets to the Hartley Institute. There the Mayor, surrounded by the Members of the Corporation in full robes of office, presented to Lord Roberts the Freedom of the City in a gold casket. The Institute was crowded to its capacity, and there was a remarkable demonstration as the Field Marshal, in the uniform of his rank, stepped on a raised platform.

The proceedings were most brief. Lord Roberts, in a few words of thanks, referred to the war in terms similar to those which he used yesterday. On returning to the railroad station he was greeted with continuous plaudits from the assembled throngs.

At 11:30 A. M. the Field Marshal's train started for London.

DUKE HENRY IN A TEMPER.

Said to Have Left The Hague Owing to Parliamentary Discussion Regarding His Future Position.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—A special dispatch from Berlin reports that Duke Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, whose marriage to Queen Wilhelmina of Holland has been announced for Feb. 7, has left The Hague, indignant at the tone of the Parliamentary discussion on the subject of his future position.

Whether this is true or not, there is no doubt there has been endless trouble connected with the projected marriage. Queen Wilhelmina has contrived to get up as much fuss about the style of precedence as that experienced in England in 1840. She wished Duke Henry to be created King Consort and have precedence over her mother, but she was overruled on both points.

On the other hand, the Queen's solicitude for her future husband's pecuniary comfort has by no means been equal to her solicitude for his dignity. She has given up her original proposition to settle a large sum on him out of her private fortune, and now proposes that Parliament settle £16,000 a year on him, payable if he survives her Majesty. While the latter is alive Duke Henry will get nothing, according to this plan.

However, there is a very strong feeling in Holland that no allowance for the Duke should be asked from the country, considering the vast property at the disposal of Queen Wilhelmina. Duke Henry's private fortune is inadequate for his position as Prince Consort, and he will, practically, be dependent on his spouse.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 3.—The Second Chamber to-day adopted, without amendment, various articles approving the Queen's marriage to Duke Henry of Mecklenburg-Schwerin by 79 to 10 votes.

The Socialists objected to the £16,000 grant to Duke Henry. Others regretted that an annual allowance was not made.

Decision in a French Clerical Case.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—The Conseil d'Etat to-day rendered its decision in the caseof the Bishop of Annecy, who had sustained the action of a curate of his diocese in refusing to officiate at a funeral where Free Masons appeared with their insignia. This was considered offensive to the Government, and the Bishop's stipend was suspended. The decision warns the Bishop that his course was not warranted, but it allows his stipend to continue. The result is unquestionably unsatisfactory to the Government.

German Paper Fears "Australianismus."

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—In a leading article devoted to the Australian Commonwealth, the Kreuz Zeitung to-day says: "Some apprehension is natural lest what Germans stigmatize as 'Americanismus,' namely a contempt for historically established international and treaty law, as well as the encroachment of capitalism upon politics, may be displaced by 'Australianismus,' namely a more intense form of the same things."

The Russo-American Seal Controversy.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 3.—Herbert H. D. Peirce, Secretary of the United States Embassy, has gone to The Hague to deliver to the United States Minister to the Netherlands, Stanford Newel, the voluminous documents composing the American case in the Russo-American seal controversy, the preparation of which has engrossed Mr. Peirce's attention for several months.

French Warships in Collision.

BREST, Jan. 3.—The French gunboat Menhir collided in a fog this morning with the French torpedo cruiser Fleurus, at the entrance of the bay. The Fleurus was badly injured, having two deep rents in her port side. The use of collision mats made it possible for her to be towed into the harbor, where she was docked.

Herr Krupp Gives Away $375,000.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—In addition to a donation of 500,000 marks to the Workmen's Invalid Fund of the Krupp Works, Herr Krupp has given 500,000 marks each to the Officials' Pension Fund and the fund for building laborers' houses, making a total of 1,500,000 marks.

Russian Paper Denounces Waldersee.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 3.—Most of the papers emphasize what they regard as evidences of the dissension regarding China among the powers, an extract from one of Dr. Morrison's dispatches from Peking to The Times (London) supplying the text. The Novoe Vremya calls Count von Waldersee "a brutal old man."

VON WALDERSEE HOPEFUL

Cables to His Wife That "Peace Is in Sight at Last."

FOREIGN ENVOYS ARE EXIGENT

Demand That the Chinese Plenipotentiaries Sign the Joint Note Before a Meeting Is Held.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—Count von Waldersee cabled to the Countess on New Year's Day:

"Peace is in sight at last. Hurrah!"

It is understood in official circles here that the final peace negotiations will not begin until not only the note of the powers but also the Chinese acceptance of the preliminaries shall have become a formal international agreement on the part of the powers at present engaged in this matter.

PEKING, Jan. 3.—The foreign envoys, with the exception of the British Minister, Sir Ernest Mason Satow, met yesterday to consider the time and place for the acceptance and signing of the joint note. Nothing definite was decided. It is, however, announced to-day that Li-Hung-Chang and Prince Ching are prepared to sign an agreement as soon as it is ready for signature.

It seems to be the opinion of some of the envoys that the acceptance of the terms of the note by the Chinese is not explicit enough. The Chinese request for consultations regarding the razing of the forts and the number of the legation guards is open to misinterpretation and liable to lead to long and continuous arguments, which might, in the opinion of some of the Ministers, simply mean sparring for time on the part of the Chinese. Consequently the Chinese plenipotentiaries were notified that they must sign the note before the meeting between them and the foreign envoys can be held.

Sir Ernest Satow, who has been suffering from chills and fever, is better.

The military engineers of the allies have agreed upon a plan for the future defenses of the legations.

Li-Hung-Chang desires to conduct the peace negotiations to a conclusion, and the physicians attending him think he may be taken to the Spanish Legation, where the conferences have been held, if the weather is favorable.

The Germans are reported to be returning to San-Ho with a number of prisoners.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 3.—The Chinese newspaper Chung-Wei-Yei-Pao makes the following statement:

"The Imperial rescript accepting the peace conditions instructs the Chinese Commissioners, when discussing points not specified, to gain as many concessions as possible. The conditions involve 200 debatable questions."

MISSIONARIES AGAIN ACCUSED.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The Daily Mail publishes a severe arraignment from Mr. Willard, a correspondent in Peking, of the European and American missionaries in China. He accuses them of urging the military to send expeditions to different points of the country, ostensibly to protect native converts, but really to get an opportunity for wholesale looting.

Mr. Willard declares that the missionaries have had their share in all the phases of loot, and gives the evidence of American officers, whose names he withholds, in support of his charges, the whole going to show that in several cases American officers declined to sanction the urgings of the missionaries.

AMERICAN MERCHANTS' VIEWS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—A committee from the American Asiatic Association, with headquarters in New York, called on the President to-day and presented a memorial expressing emphatic approval of the efforts made to hasten a settlement of the questions at issue between the powers and the Government of China.

The memorialists single out for special approval the demand made upon China that in future the diplomatic representatives of foreign Governments have direct access to the Emperor. The belief is expressed that the good of all concerned required the resumption of authority by Emperor Kwang-Su. The hope is expressed that the integrity of the Chinese Empire may be a condition of any settlement to which the United States is a party, and also that the great province of Manchuria shall continue to be regarded as inseparable from the eighteen provinces of the Middle Kingdom. As to the negotiations of a new treaty of trade and navigation the memorialists urge the necessity of insisting upon full heed being paid both by the imperial and provincial Governments to the treaties in respect to the transit passes issued in return for stipulated payment, which are intended to clear imported merchandise from all further taxation on its way to the inland markets.

One of the principal objects of the association is to foster and safeguard the trade and commercial interests of citizens of the United States and others associated therewith in the Empire of China, Japan, and Korea, and in the Philippine Islands. The delegation which called upon the President to-day consisted of Joseph R. Patterson, Clarence Carey, Silas D. Webb, John Foord, and S. G. Hopkins, all of New York; A. T. Leftwich of Baltimore, and D. A. Tompkins of Charlotte, N. C.

AN EXPLANATION BY CHAFFEE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Gen. Chaffee has cleared himself of any suspicion of participating in any of the looting expeditions which are said in some quarters to be going on in China under the disguise of punitive expeditions. His report of the conditions under which an excursion was made from Peking has been received at the War Department by cable.

The officials here were surprised when they saw the press reports stating that the American troops in Peking, which were distinctly designated as legation guards, and as such were to have no part in ordinary military operations, had gone out into the country to co-operate with a German expeditionary force.

From the nature of Gen. Chaffee's cablegram it would appear that the officials had communicated with him on this subject, and invited the explanation which is afforded in the following, dated Peking, Jan. 2:

"Col. Theodore J. Wint returned. Movement simply to verify report Christians had been murdered and secure arrest guilty parties if allegation found true. * * * Germans from Tien-Tsin had been in country. Take no part in offensive operations; patrol country between Peking, Ho-si-Wu, and Chang-Kiang occasionally for the purpose of order."

THE SHAN-HAI-KWAN RAILWAY.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—Dr. Morrison, wiring from Peking to The Times, says:

"Russia is negotiating with Germany a convention aiming to restore the railway from Tien-Tsin to Shan-hai-Kwan to Great Britain, saddled with the following conditions:

"Russia retains half the rolling stock for the section from Shan-hai-Kwan to Niuw-Chwang, and holds a lien on the railway for expenses incurred in repairs. She also appropriates the workshops at Shan-hai-Kwan, with all their contents.

"Great Britain is trying to modify these onerous conditions, which will probably be agreed to by Count von Waldersee, as no German interests are involved."

SET HIS CHILD ON HOT STOVE.

Infuriated Father Then Bit the Little One's Ear Off.

CAMDEN, N. J., Jan. 3.—Sylvanus Grace, an oysterman of Bridgeton, had a dispute to-day with his wife over some matter not yet explained. Becoming infuriated the father snatched up their two-year-old child and set it down on top of the hot stove over which the wife was cooking. When the mother rushed forward and tried to tear the screaming child from its father the man seized one of the child's ears between his teeth and bit it off. Then he ran from the house and made his escape in a boat.

The child is horribly burned, and there is no hope for its recovery. The citizens of Bridgeton are greatly excited over the affair, and there is talk of lynching Grace should he be captured.

THE 20TH CENTURY FUND

Mass Meeting of Presbyterians Discuss the Duty of Giving.

The Clergy and Laymen Unite in Urging Generous Donations to Church Work.

A mass meeting under the auspices of the Presbytery's committee in the interest of the twentieth century fund was held last night in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church. The object of the meeting was to stimulate interest in the extension of all Church work with the opening of the twentieth century.

The Rev. Dr. Purvis presided. After he had opened the meeting with prayer he made a brief address, outlining in detail the purpose of the Twentieth Century Fund. Incidentally he announced that although it had not been expected that the movement would take a practical turn until after the initial meeting of last night had been held, that up to noon yesterday the committee reported having received $200,000 in subscriptions, to be applied to various needs and church purposes. Later, during the meeting, he announced a further increase of $175,000 which had been given to a church in Dover, N. J., by a man who presented the church with the fund in memory of his wife. He then introduced the Rev. Dr. Brownson of the Tenth Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia.

Dr. Brownson said that work for the fund had already been organized in 175 Presbyterys. He intimated, as Chairman of the committee, that a number of princely contributions had been promised the movement, and dwelt upon the necessity of money.

The Rev. Dr. F. T. Ellenwood, Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, was the next speaker. He contrasted the Presbyterian Church of to-day with that of thirty years ago. "Paying a debt," he said, "and it is a peculiarly American trait, is looked upon ordinarily as paying for a dead horse. Yet there is no nobler duty that confronts the man in the business world than just this. We have to learn in this respect from the Chinese. Their New Year's Day is about Feb. 1. As the end of the year approaches all old debts are paid in order to begin the fresh year anew; and if it is necessary to sell property in order to clear the debt, the property is sold, but the debt is paid. We missionaries have learned this, and buy property about the time the market is overrun with it by owners who wish to sell in order to clear their accounts."

Dr. Charles A. Dickey of Philadelphia, the next speaker, rehearsed the situation from a semi-practical standpoint, to pave the way for the Elders who were to talk on the purely business aspect of the movement.

Elder William E. Dodge was the first of the laymen to speak. He said:

"As has been remarked here several times to-night, there is a splendid sentiment behind this movement. But while gazing on the situation from this point of view, it is necessary not to forget that there are practical features, common sense features, that ought to appeal to all. During the last 100 years the condition of the Church has changed wonderfully. Exactly as in mercantile business, action and plan must be altered to suit conditions. But there is every reason to be hopeful of the success of the Church of Christ in the near future. All we need is concerted effort and enthusiasm, though never before, as now, have the faithful worked and prayed more earnestly.

"I hope for a change in the churches throughout this city. Millions of dollars are invested in them; still they are open to service just three hours during the week, and dead closed the rest of the time, while evil stalks abroad at all times." The speaker then said he hoped when churches reached a practical business basis they would be open at all times for services. He said we were living more than ever in a complex civilization. Men with hordes of wealth were living about the city, and their number, making money out of projects which a century ago seemed impossible, was increasing. He concluded:

"It is the duty of every Christian father to lay by money for his children, but as much is it the duty to give liberally to the Church. The giving on the impulse or the gift with a grudging hand is not the gift that God exacts.

"It is the Catholic Church that has the wisest method. Everybody gives something, and the giving has become a habit. The sooner we follow that system the sooner will we be on a sounder footing. If every Christian householder would apportion an amount to be set aside from his income a constant stream of contributions would pour into our churches, and God would see that we are appreciative of the wonderful gifts He has given us."

Dr. Purves then introduced John H. Converse of Philadelphia. Mr. Converse drew even a closer parallel than the preceding speaker between the Church and mercantile propositions, comparing the closing of the books of a mercantile house to the closing of the books of the Church, and seeing whether the balance sufficed for contemplated plans. The demands on the Church, he said, were greater than ever before. He then outlined some of the plans intended:

"Giving," he said, "is part of every man's church duty, but it is human nature to lose interest in perfunctory giving. It is the specific object of the Twentieth Century Fund to furnish a specific object for a donor. The committee does not presume to say where or how the money shall be given. The donor keeps his own counsel, and, following the dictates of his heart, gives where he thinks most good is done, to a church, to a hospital, or wherever he may wish.

"As the Hon. Abram S. Hewitt said, 'it is not how much we ought to give, but how little we may retain.' We are face to face with this problem, and as we turn into the new century there is a fitting occasion to make the Church in truth, the Bride of Christ."

Mr. John E. Parsons was the next elder who spoke. He counselled those present to look back at the centuries and to learn from them the lessons taught. The problem, he said, was how to make the time notable for the betterment of the service to man. He referred to the Church itself as illustrative of the generosity of the faithful.

The Rev. Dr. Babcock concluded the meeting with a brief address.

JUNIOR REPUBLIC WANTS AID.

The Woman's Aid of the George Junior Republic is grateful for the encouraging support which made the Sembrich concert on Saturday, Dec. 22, such a success. More than $1,000 were cleared, and a part of this will go toward the completion of the New York Cottage on the Republic grounds at Freeville, Tompkins County, N. Y.

The George Junior Association, as well as the Woman's Aid, is anxious to increase its membership, both on account of the financial assistance which is greatly needed for current expenses and from the desire to have more people keep in touch with this interesting work. Members of the George Junior Association pay $5 per annum, which may be sent to the Treasurer, Mr. A. G. Agnew, 45 Wall Street, while membership in the Woman's Aid costs only $2 per annum, that amount being payable to Miss Edith H. White, Secretary and Treasurer, 210 West Fifty-ninth Street.

The other officers of the New York Woman's Aid are as follows: President—Mrs. Charles S. Fairchild; Vice Presidents—Mrs. L. P. Morton, Mrs. L. D. Buckley, Mrs. Henry Burden, Miss Damon, Mrs. John Wells, Mrs. Edward Oothout, Miss C. H. Patterson, and Miss Van Santvoord.

The Junior Republic Citizen, printed monthly by the boys, is sent to each member of the Woman's Aid and George Junior Association, and gives a most interesting account, written by the citizens themselves, of all the main events in the life of the Republic.

Russian Ambassador Offends France?

PARIS, Jan. 4.—Le Siecle asserts that the Russian Ambassador, Prince Ouroussoff, will shortly leave Paris for an unlimited holiday. A mysteriously worded note leaves it to be understood that the Ambassador has been lacking in some way in tact toward the French Government. "He is at perfect liberty to exercise his critical faculties on the subject of France," says Le Siecle, "but the Government he reperesents has the exclusive right to know the result of his observations."

$45,000 for Michigan Indians.

HARTFORD, Mich., Jan. 3.—The Pokagon Pottowattomie tribe of Indians residing in this vicinity was notified by letter to-day that the $45,000 promised them for a quitclaim deed to certain Chicago lands on the lake front is now ready for payment. This is the first notice the tribe members have had that they will get their money. It will be divided equally among three hundred men, women, and children, who are survivors of the once famous tribe.

DENIES SHE'S THE WIFE OF ALLEGED BIGAMIST

Mrs. Howard of Cambridge Says Mistake Will Be Rectified.

Mrs. Helen Hawkes Howard Returns Home and Learns of Her Husband's Arrest—He Is Held in $3,000 Bail.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Jan. 3.—Mrs. George W. Howard of Cambridge, whose alleged husband has been arrested in New York on a charge of bigamy, is very ill to-night from the effects of the exposure, and is denied to all callers. Her sister, Mrs. McCarter of Cambridge, is with her.

Mrs. Howard was seen this noon by a reporter at her home in the apartment house at 63 Dana Street. She was noncommittal and refused repeatedly to answer nearly every question put to her, she said:

"I will simply say that the George W. Howard arrested in New York is not my husband. There has been a great mistake, which will be rectified in time."

Mrs. Howard replied that she had nothing to say in answer to questions whether she was ever married to a George W. Howard, whether she was acquainted with him, whether her husband was in Cambridge or in New York.

From her manner the inference was drawn that Mrs. Howard meant by her denial of being the wife of the New York Howard that he was not her husband in a moral sense. This supposition is strengthened by the difficulty which is encountered by those who are in search of the facts in the case. For instance, the name of the clergyman, the Rev. Joseph Lambert, does not appear in the directories of ten years ago, and is not known to-day.

In the certificate on file in Cambridge Howard certified that this marriage with her was his second. Both gave their residences as Cambridge. Howard gave his age as thirty-three years, and said he was born in Reading. His parents were James H. and Eliza J. Howard. It is recorded that it was Miss Kay's first marriage, and that she was twenty-six years old. She was born in Red Beach, Me., and her parents were James W. and Margaret Kay. Although Howard certified that his marriage to Miss Kay was his second, it is not known whether his first wife died or there was a separation of some kind.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard have lived at 63 Dana Street, Cambridge, only a short time. The family is not very well known in the city, but Mrs. Howard is highly spoken of. When she was first apprised of her husbands' arrest she exclaimed that it could not be true, for he was her lawful husband, but this noon as above stated she denied the marriage.

Mrs. Helen Hawkes Howard, the wife of George W. Howard, who is alleged to have committed bigamy in marrying her in September last, returned last evening from Albany and learned for the first time of her husband's arrest from her father, who met her at the Grand Central Station.

Henry Hawkes, the father of Mrs. Howard, who is Superintendent of the Bureau of Distribution of the Brooklyn Water Supply Department, and a prominent Democratic politician of that borough, drove with her to the Hawkes residence on Prospect Place.

The news of the charge against her husband was naturally a great shock to Mrs. Howard, and she was prostrated last night. Mrs. Howard had been visiting friends at Albany with her sister, and the knowledge of her husband's arrest had been kept from her until she reached this city, coming in response to a telegram from her parents.

Howard was arraigned before Magistrate Brenner in the Adams Street Police Court, Brooklyn, yesterday. Through his counsel, John S. Bennett, he pleaded not guilty to the charge against him.

The Magistrate fixed the bail at $2,000 and counsel for Howard asked that it be reduced to $1,000, saying that his client held a responsible position with the Metropolitan Traction Company, which might be jeopardized by his detention in jail. District Attorney Clarke, however, asked that instead of the amount of bail being lowered, it be increased.

Magistrate Brenner finally fixed bail at $3,000. William A. Price, President of the New York Coal and Navigation Company, with offices at 143 Liberty Street, Manhattan, was accepted as bondsman for Howard, and the latter was released pending examination on Tuesday next.

Henry Hawkes, Jr., brother-in-law of Howard, who made the complaint upon which the latter was arrested, was in court, as was also the elder Mr. Hawkes. The last named, when seen last night, said that Howard spoke to him outside the court, when they met on the sidewalk, and asserted his innocence of the charge against him.

Howard also told the reporters that his only wife was the daughter of Mr. Hawkes, and that he never married the woman in Cambridge, Mass.

LITTLE GIRL TAKES POISON.

Found a Box of Pills and Eat Some, Causing Her Death.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Jan. 3.—Hattie Ford, five years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur P. Ford of Chicago, and granddaughter of Warwick Ford of Chester Hill, this city, died to-night after an hour of agony following the eating of several pills containing belladonna and strychnine.

The child, with her father and mother, came here to spend the holidays with Mr. Ford's father. On Christmas the little one had an elaborate tree, and since then had been in the habit of playing with the ornaments, which had adorned it. She was so engaged to-night when she found the box of pills in a drawer of the bureau in which the things were kept.

The first knowledge the family had of her actions was when she screamed, and her mother ran into the room to find her in convulsions. Drs. Green and Fleming were called, but arrived too late to save her life. The box which had contained the pills was found on the floor.

SHARP EXCHANGES AT THE HERLIHY TRIAL

The Rev. Robt. L. Paddock Again Under Cross-Examination.

MR. YORK BECOMES SARCASTIC.

Commissioner Tells Attorney Grant That He Never Gets Tired of Talking—Mr. George Testifies.

The hearing of evidence in the trial of Capt. John D. Herlihy, upon charges of inefficiency, conduct unbecoming an officer, and violation of department rules, while he was in command of the Eldridge Street Precinct, was continued yesterday at Police Headquarters. The hearing began shortly after 2 o'clock, and was continued until 7:30 last evening.

The session was devoted largely to a continuation of the cross-examination of the Rev. Robert L. Paddock of the Pro-Cathedral, in Stanton Street. The Rev. James H. George, rector of St. John's Church, Salisbury, Conn., who was with Mr. Paddock on the occasion of his visit to the Eldridge Street Station, also testified yesterday.

Ex-Judge W. M. K. Olcott, with his associates for the prosecution, P. V. R. Van Wyck, W. N. Wilmer, and Fred House, arrived early. As soon as Commissioners York, Abell, Hess, and Sexton came in the hearing was begun.

Mr. Grant again renewed objection, made at the previous hearing, to having President York sit on the case. He said that he did so on the strength of an affidavit made by a reporter of THE NEW YORK TIMES, who had interviewed President York.

"I desire to submit the affidavit," he said, and began to read it, when Mr. Olcott objected. Mr. York said that he would exclude the affidavit. The board sustained Mr. York.

The Rev. Mr. Paddock being called, Mr. Grant asked him if he had talked to any one about the case since the last hearing.

"To several."

"And who were they?"

"I think—"

"Never mind what you think. What do you know?"

"Well, to several of my staff."

Mr. Grant put a number of questions and Mr. Paddock finally declined to answer.

"Why won't you answer?" asked Mr. Grant.

"Because you are so disagreeable."

"Oh; well, now, I'll be real nice. Did you speak to Mr. George?"

"Yes."

"Ah, good. And what did you say to him?"

"Well, that the trial was very interesting and—"

"Yes. Yes. And—"

"Oh, see here," interposed Mr. York; "are we going to have to listen to private conversations?"

Mr. Grant then changed his line of questioning and got Mr. Paddock to outline the history of his life in detail. Coming down to the incident in the Eldridge Street Station, he asked:

"Were the words, 'You lie' used at that interview?"

"To the best of my recollection those were the words."

"And that is the best answer you can give?"

"He said either 'You lie' or 'You are lying.'"

Mr. Grant got Mr. Paddock to admit that the policeman in the station house had said before him and Capt. Herlihy that he saw no women in the doorway. Then he produced the affidavit signed by Mr. Paddock and shown in court the next day.

"How is it that in the written part of this affidavit you swear to other facts?" he asked. "How were you able to swear that the women were warned?"

"The clerk of the court wrote what I told him, I supposed, in confidence."

"Well you swear that at any time during that interview Capt. Herlihy came from behind the railing?"

"I think he did."

"That is your impression. You said the other day that he came up to you with his clinched fist, almost in your face?"

"Yes."

"You were frightened?"

"No, I can't say I was."

"Did you tell this to Mr. Olcott when you spoke about the case to him?"

"No; I did not."

"Didn't you think it was a serious matter when a Police Captain put his clinched fist in the face of a citizen, a clergyman, who had gone to his station house in the performance of his duty?"

"Yes, I thought it was a serious matter."

"Well, why didn't you tell Mr. Olcott about it?"

"It was one of many things I did not tell him."

After a long string of questions, in which Mr. Grant sought to get the witness to make some definite statement as to why he had not given Mr. Olcott the information, Mr. Grant came down to the time of his visit to Inspector Cross's office.

"That was the morning after Capt. Herlihy threatened you, was it not?"

"Yes."

"And you went in and shook hands with him—treated him cordially?"

"I shook hands. You may say cordially if you like."

"And you knew it was Herlihy with whom you shook hands?"

"Oh, of course he knew it," remarked Mr. York. "Don't try to be so impressive."

"I like to be impressive," said the lawyer.

"Did you tell Inspector Cross that Capt. Herlihy insulted you?"

The witness did not remember whether he had done so, and Mr. Grant asked him why he had not.

"I presume it was because Capt. Herlihy had done it before," said the witness. He added that the inspector had, to the best of his knowledge, said that the language mentioned was not such as an officer ought to use. Mr. Paddock added that Inspector Cross had said he ought to make charges against Herlihy. He at first refused, but consented later, and a stenographer was called in. When the stenographer arrived he refused to make the complaint, as, in the meantime, he had had a conversation with the Inspector in which the Inspector told him he was unreasonable, and that if the precinct were a paradise he would not be satisfied.

"You refused to put the complaint in writing?"

"Yes."

"Because you said the Inspector had prejudged the case?"

"Yes."

After another whispered interview between Capt. Herlihy and the lawyer Mr. Grant asked:

"You went to the station house and said that if Capt. Herlihy did not report to your house at 9 o'clock one morning you would have his head; that you had influential people behind you?"

"I don't remember. I won't swear I did not."

"Will you swear that you did not tell officers in the precinct that you had the power to transfer any roundsman, officer, or patrolman?"

"Yes."

"I don't see that that cuts any figure," said Mr. York.

"Well, I've been talking all day, and"—

"Yes; I know," remarked the Commissioner, "you never get tired."

Mr. Paddock then repeated his testimony that he had been accosted more than one hundred and fifty times, and in answer to a question as to whether Capt. Herlihy had ever offered to go with him and have him identify any of the women he said that the Captain, he thought, had offered to send a policeman with him. On one occasion, when he arrived with a policeman at the house the door was locked and there was no one there. He said that he had told Capt. Herlihy on many occasions if he got proper policemen in citizens' clothes he would have no trouble in getting evidence.

The Rev. Mr. George was then called to the stand. He told of leaving the Pro-Cathedral on April 26 with Mr. Paddock. As they started into Chrystie Street a man brushed past them, and they quickened their steps. Mr. Paddock went up to the man and asked him if he did not want to meet the policeman on the corner. The officer refused to arrest the man, but they went to the station house, and Mr. Paddock charged him with informing the women that he was approaching.

Mr. George went into details of what occurred in the station. The Captain, he said, declared that Mr. Paddock went around trying to induce people to commit crime, and that he carried an umbrella and turned up his collar so that people would not know him. Capt. Herlihy appealed to Mr. George to witness that he had not called Mr. Paddock a liar, but he told the Inspector that Herlihy had used the expression "You lie."

Mr. George's recollection of the meeting in the Inspector's office differed somewhat from the testimony of Mr. Paddock. He did not recall any handshaking. And did not remember the greeting to Capt. Herlihy. After a lengthy examination by Mr. Grant, in which to many questions the witness said he could not remember and would not swear, the hearing was adjourned. It will be continued to-day at 1:30 o'clock.

SMALLPOX UP THE STATE.

State Board of Health Says It Was Brought in by Negro Minstrels.

ALBANY, Jan. 3.—The State Board of Health, issuing its monthly bulletin, to-day devotes the greater part of it to discussing the fact that there are outbreaks of smallpox in seventeen places in the State. The report says in part:

"During the last three years we have had considerable experience with smallpox, commencing with an importation, in 1898, by a traveling theatrical troupe among whose members the disease existed undiscovered until twenty localities in the western part of the State had been visited, with public parades and performances, and as a result smallpox was distributed in fourteen counties, not less than 320 persons took the disease, and a year passed before it ceased to exist. During this current year smallpox has been brought to seventeen places from outside.

"Now, toward the close of November, prior to which time the State had been free for three months from this disease, a repetition of the experience of 1898 on a smaller scale is threatening, in the appearance of another traveling troupe of colored minstrels from the South, in whose personnel smallpox has been discovered after having exhibited at eight places in the eastern part of the State, in three of which, Albany, Schenectady, and Gloversville, an outbreak has followed.

"There has also been a considerable outbreak in a locality of New York City which this troupe touched in passing, though the health authorities trace the origin instead to a more remote unrecognized case.

"The present comparative immunity of this State from smallpox is chiefly due to very general vaccination, secured by health authorities, especially in places where the disease has developed, and more widely by the operation of the law now several years in effect requiring the vaccination of school children.

BABY SMALLPOX PATIENT.

Sixteen-Months-Old Child Sent to North Brother Island.

Viola Buck, the sixteen-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Buck of 417 Wales Avenue, the Bronx, yesterday was transferred to North Brother Island, suffering with smallpox.

The child had been ill for two days, and the case was reported to the Bronx Borough Board of Health. It was at once diagnosed as smallpox, and the little patient transferred to the Island.

The family lived in a two-story flat house, and Mr. Buck kept a grocery store underneath. The house was fumigated and everybody within a radius of two blocks of the house vaccinated.

RABBI UPHOLDS BAKERS' STRIKE.

Dr. Bernard Drachman Addresses a Breadmakers' Meeting.

Dr. Bernard Drachman, rabbi of the Synagogue Zichron Ephraim, 163 East Sixty-seventh Street, addressed a mass meeting of the striking Hebrew bakers last night, in New Irving Hall, Broome Street, near Norfolk Street. Dr. Drachman was received with cheers. As did the other speakers, he addressed the bakers in Yiddish.

"If reports are true," he said, "and there is every reason to believe they are true, there is great need for reform in the east side bakeries. It surprised and gratified me to hear that Bishop Potter, at a recent labor dinner, said, 'I drink this glass for the welfare of the east side bakers.' It showed that he was a man of broad sympathies. But, my brethren, I would have you be fair in your demands and not exaggerate, and I assure you of my hearty sympathy.

Joseph Barondess spoke at length, and exhibited what he said were sections of loaves made in dirty bakeries. He pointed out worms and insects which had strayed into the dough. The strikers reported that investigations of bakeries were being conducted by James B. Reynolds of the University Settlement, the Rev. W. S. Rainsford, and others.

BANK CASHIER ARRESTED.

Receiver Makes Complaint Against E. C. Remme of Newport, Ky.

CINCINNATI, Jan. 3.—Edward C. Remme, cashier of the German National Bank of Newport, Ky., was arrested to-day by United States Marshal Compton upon a warrant issued at the instance of Bank Examiner Tucker. Owing to the shortage of $195,000 of Frank M. Brown, as assistant cashier and bookkeeper, the bank was recently placed in the hands of Tucker as receiver. The whereabouts of Brown are unknown, and it was thought that there would be no proseeutions until he was found. Bank Examiner Tucker said to-night:

"On April 26, 1899, I arranged with Cashier Remme to examine the books of the bank privately. Remme and I were the only ones who knew of the arrangement. On April 29 the books were taken to Cincinnati and examined in private. I have since discovered that between April 26 and 29 sixty false entries were made, covering a shortage of over $90,000. Some one must have informed Brown that the books were to be examined, so as to give him an opportunity to make the false entries. This is the basis of my affidavit against Remme."

Mr. Remme said: "I am innocent, and did not know of the Brown shortage before the Directors knew it and gave Brown no intimation of the secret investigation of the books."

Mr. Remme has been assisting Receiver Tucker in closing up the affairs of the old bank and organizing the new one, and was at work in the bank when arrested. Although he has lived all his life in Newport, and is well known on both sides of the river in prominent business circles, he was unable to secure the necessary $25,000 bail until to-night. He was held quietly and assisted by the officers in securing bail. Petitions had been numerously signed by the old depositors for Remme to be the cashier of the reorganized bank, and his arrest came as a surprise to the community.

A NEW DEMOCRATIC CLUB

The Samuel J. Tilden Association Is Incorporated.

Will Work for the Reorganization of the Party—May Fight Tammany Next Fall.

To help in the reorganization and rehabilitation of the Democratic Party on old-line principles is the avowed purpose of a new Democratic club organized yesterday. The articles of incorporation were filed and the organizers are shown to be ex-Senator Jacob A. Cantor, ex-Assemblyman Perez M. Stewart, and others. The club has already a membership of 300. The corporate name is the Samuel J. Tilden Democratic Association.

The club is to be organized on the model of the Manhattan Club. The purpose of the new club as avowed in the articles of incorporation is to work for the reorganization of the Democratic Party in the Nation, State, and city. The headquarters will be on Seventy-second Street, near Broadway. It is expected that within a few weeks the membership of the new organization will be at least 1,000. Hundreds of applications are on file now and will be acted on as soon as the preliminary organization is completed next week.

Ex-Senator Cantor said yesterday:

"The new club will be composed of men who will work for the reorganization of the Democratic Party. The members will be recruited from the ranks of Democrats who believe in the solid principles of the old Democracy."

Ex-Senator Cantor would make no direct statement that the club is going into the battle next Fall to try and defeat Tammany Hall in the Mayoralty contest. Many of the other members were, however, outspoken that it would be an anti-Tammany organization, and that the rank and file of the members were just as much opposed to the domination of Richard Croker in New York City politics as they were to the present national leaders of the party.

When asked about the policy of the new club ex-Senator Cantor said:

"We will not sit around like the members of the Manhattan Club and watch the principles of Democracy set aside. We intend to make it a very active organization. An address will be issued to the voters next week. We hoped to have the address ready at the time of the publication of the articles of incorporation, but it was thought best to defer a public discussion of the objects of the organization until next week."

It was stated yesterday that Robert Dowling of the firm of Flake & Dowling would be President of the new organization.

Ex-Senator Cantor was for many years a prominent leader in Tammany Hall. He was elected to the Assembly and the Senate, but was finally turned down by Richard Croker. Mr. Cantor was a personal friend of Roswell P. Flower. Of late years Mr. Cantor has taken no interest in politics and, in fact, announced to many of his friends that he would never again enter the political field. It is expected that the new club will rally to its standard many of the Democrats of wealth and influence who are at present opposed to the leadership of Richard Croker in Tammany Hall.

MR. BLISS CHOSEN CHAIRMAN.

Succeeds the Late William L. Strong as Head of Sound Money Association.

Cornelius N. Bliss was last night elected to succeed the late William L. Strong as Chairman of the Business Men's Republican and Sound Money Association, at a meeting held at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. This organization, which was formed in 1896, has heretofore taken no part except in Presidential political contests. It has now decided to take an active part in State and local campaigns.

With this idea in view, a committee was appointed last night to secure articles of incorporation.

"We purpose," said a member of the committee, "to do all that we can in the interest of good government—National, State, and local. We have no desire to be intruders, but we will lend our best efforts to secure satisfactory administrations all around."

The association will hold its annual dinner at Delmonico's on Jan. 15.—Covers will be laid for more than 300 persons, and it is already known that among the guests will be Gov. Odell, Lieut. Gov. Woodruff, and Senator Hanna.

Healy, Second Vice President William Halpin, and Treasurer George R. Sheldon. John J. Pinnket of the Ninth District will devote much attention to the ballot and the ballot box details.

Burglars Worked While Houses Burned.

The residences of William H. Bishop and Peter Ritter, situated on Fifteenth Street, near Broadway, in Bowne Park, Flushing, were destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The fire originated in the Bishop residence, and spread so rapidly that Mr. and Mrs. Bishop had barely time to escape by jumping from the roof of the veranda. Mr. Bishop's loss is about $7,000 and Mr. Ritter's about $3,000. During the excitement burglars broke in the house of Alfred Peace, in the same neighborhood, and robbed it of valuable property. The family was not at home at the time.

MINERS KILLED BY BLACK DAMP

Experienced Men Lose Their Lives in Spite of Efforts of Four Different Rescue Parties.

WILKESBARRE, Penn., Jan. 3.—An accident occurred at the Pine Ridge Colliery of the Algonquin Coal Company to-day, which resulted in the death of two men and the fatal injury of two others. The mine, owing to a cave-in, had not been in operation for some time past, and considerable gas had accumulated in the workings.

This morning D. J. Williams, the Superintendent of the mine; William Morgan, the Assistant Superintendent, and William Early and Martin Fortune, fire bosses, entered the mine for the purpose of devising a plan to drive an airway. They were experienced men and prepared for any emergency. The party did not return to the surface at noon, and there was some alarm as to their safety.

At 2 o'clock a searching party went down the mine to see what had become of the Superintendent and his men. The searchers could not go far, being driven back by the black damp. A rescuing party of experienced miners was then organized, and they entered the mine. They were slow in returning, and the greatest apprehensions were felt that all had fallen victims to the foul gas. But at 5 o'clock the rescuers came to the surface. They reported that they could find no trace of the missing men.

Another rescuing party of six men volunteered to go down. They were driven back several times by the fire damp, but finally managed to push their way into the workings and came across the dead bodies of Superintendent Williams and Fire Boss Morgan. After much difficulty the bodies were brought to the surface.

Later a fourth rescuing party went down the slope and found Early and Fortune. They were unconscious and when brought out physicians who were in waiting said they could not recover. The rescuers were loudly cheered by 2,000 persons who had been attracted to the scene of the disaster. All the victims were married men with families.

WANT FREE DELIVERY STOPPED.

Merchants in an Ohio Town Say That They Lose Trade Through It.

Special to The New York Times.

ASHTABULA, O., Jan. 3.—News reaches here from Newton Falls, in Trumbull County, that a petition is to be sent to Washington at once by the merchants of that place asking that the rural free delivery recently inaugurated there, be discontinued. So far Newton falls is the first place heard from in Ohio to take such a stand. It is claimed by the merchants there that is takes custom from them.

This one feature of the new system which apparently has not been considered. Formerly scores of farmers would drive to the town each day from all localities to get their mail and of course while there would do more or less trading with the merchants. Now they have no occasion to make daily trips to the postoffice but instead the farmers do their trading perhaps on but one day in the week, and then take a longer drive to the largest nearby city.

COLLIERS WIN THEIR STRIKE.

Nova Scotia Operators Grant Demand for Increase in Wages.

HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 3.—The colliers' strike in Pictou collapsed to-day by the unconditional surrender of the operators to the demand for a 12 per cent. increase in wages. The strike was the shortest on record for such a decisive result, having lasted three days. Had the owners not given in to-day the 1,200 miners of Spring Hill would have ceased work to-morrow and gone out with their Pictou brethren. Accordingly the coal mine managers of the province met this morning at Truro and, after being several hours in session, reached a decision to grant the demands of the men.

This makes 22 per cent. increase of wages the employes of the coal mines have received in four months. An original 10 per cent. having been applied for and conceded in September last. The Spring Hill workmen, although they remained at work, will also receive the 12 per cent. increase, but it is doubtful if the Cape Breton miners will share the benefit, as they showed no disposition to assist the strike. The total wage at the Spring Hill and Pictou mines affected by the increase is $100,000 monthly.

HAS A MAYOR ARRESTED.

Trouble Between the Municipal Executive of Hightstown and a Contractor.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 3.—Mayor Richard D. Norton of Hightstown, N. J., was arrested to-day on complaint of Contractor Charles B. Walton, and was held in $500 bail by Justice of the Peace Naar to answer a charge of selling goods to the borough of which he is Mayor, in violation of law. The bills had to be passed upon by the Common Council, of which the Mayor is ex officio President.

The arrest of Norton is a retaliatory act on the part of Walton, who was the defendant in a suit instituted by Norton to restrain the County of Mercer from paying the contractor the balance due on some stone-road building. Norton alleged that Walton had not complied with the specifications of the contract. The decision of the court was against Norton, and then Norton instituted other proceedings, attaching the money due Walton, claiming that Walton was indebted to him.

Money for the Hunt Memorial.

The Hunt Memorial Committee is in need of funds to complete payment to Daniel Chester French for two statues now on exhibition at the National Academy of Design, which are intended for the completion of this memorial in Fifth Avenue, opposite Lenox Library. The committee has now been working for three years and has raised $16,800 from the art societies and art lovers of New York. There is still lacking $4,500 wherewith to pay Mr. French for his work, and the committee hopes for contributions from the general public.

DR. MOORE IS SUSPENDED

Relieved of Duty at Bellevue Pending Investigation.

Commissioner Keller Says He Is Self-Convicted of Negligence in the Hilliard Case.

Commissioner of Charities John W. Keller announced yesterday that as a result of the reading of the minutes of the Coroner's investigation of the death of Louis Hilliard in the Pavilion for the Insane at Bellevue Hospital he had decided to suspend Dr. John W. Moore, who had charge of the pavilion when Hilliard met his death, to await the action of the Medical Board of the hospital. He announced this yesterday afternoon in his room at the New Amsterdam Hotel, where he was examining the minutes of the Coroner's jury in company with Dr. Hill, the Inspector of the State Board of Charities. He said that Dr. Moore was self-convicted of negligence, so far as Hilliard was concerned.

Dr. Alexander Lambert, Secretary of the Medical Board, said yesterday that he could not as yet make public the names of the Committee of Five of the board that has been appointed to confer with the Charities Commissioner in regard to the charges made against the management of the hospital.

It was learned at the hospital yesterday that there was a great scarcity of male nurses there, and it was said that this was caused by the resignation yesterday of four of the nurses. It was also rumored that Mrs. Ada Willard, the Superintendent of the Mills Training School for Nurses, had also signified her intention of resigning. She refused, however, to either confirm or deny this report. The names of three of the male nurses said to have resigned yesterday are Hoffman, Schwartz, and Walters. The name of the fourth could not be learned either at the hospital or at the training school.

Casper Hoffman said that he had resigned because he could not stand the present notoriety that he was attracting at present as a nurse in Bellevue Hospital. Nine graduate nurses who had volountered their services were on duty at the hospital.

"I am perfectly satisfied with the attitude of the Medical Board in this case," said Commissioner Keller in answer to a question. "Their answer to my letter was the appointment of the Committee of Five. This committee will be of immense value in any investigation that may be made."

When asked whether he intended to take any action in dismissing any one, Mr. Keller said that he did not want to talk of anything until he was fully determined to act.

"I have been going through the minutes, he said, "and as yet have not completed them. From what I have seen, however, I can say that Dr. Moore stands convicted of negligence in the case of Hilliard. You can put that down as my opinion. So far as the others are concerned, I don't want to say very much. I have not gone through all the minutes of the Coroner's jury yet and I don't want to talk about any cases until I am prepared to act in regard to them."

Dr. Moore, when seen yesterday, said that he had nothing to say in regard to his suspension. He became an interne at the hospital about two years ago, and is now a senior on the fourth medical division.

Dr. H. Barclay of the second medical division has been appointed to take charge of the patients in the insane and alcoholic wards in his place. The system by which Moore was placed in charge of the Pavilion for the Insane was instituted by the Medical Board when Dr. Frank W. Robertson, who formerly had charge of it, resigned to take charge of the Elmira Reformatory.

BLEW HIMSELF TO PIECES.

Maine Farmer Committed Suicide with a Dynamite Cartridge.

LISBON, Me., Jan. 3.—H. E. Webber, a well-to-do farmer of Lisbon Village, about two miles north of this place, killed himself in a peculiar manner during last night. Traces of a body were found about the barnyard this morning, and an investigation showed that Webber had blown himself to pieces. Parts of his legs were scattered about the premises and fragments of flesh were spattered on the buildings. The head and arms and upper part of the trunk were found on top of the barn.

Notes left by Webber said he had decided to kill himself by exploding a dynamite cartridge. He was thirty-five years old, married, and had three children. He had been acting strangely for several weeks.

TENANTS GREATLY EXCITED.

Fire in Engine Room of Apartment House Alarms Inmates.

The tenants in the seven-story apartment house at 64 West Seventy-seventh Street were thrown into a state of excitement last night when a volume of thick black smoke came up the areaway and was quickly followed by the electric lights throughout the building being extinguished.

The smoke was caused by a slight fire which broke out in the engine room among a lot of burlap.

The tenants became greatly excited, and made for the stairways. The firemen quickly extinguished the blaze. The loss was slight.

FLAT IN FLAMES.

Fire and Water Do $2,000 Damage in West Fifty-first Street.

The flat of Joseph C. Bishop, on the third floor of the five-story flat house, 333 West Fifty-first Street, was badly damaged by fire and water late yesterday afternoon. The blaze was discovered by Bishop's daughter Annie and a servant girl.

When the firemen arrived they found the entire flat in flames. The fire was extinguished after half hour's work. The flats occupied by Warren Walker and H. J. Pepper, on the fourth and fifth floors, respectively, were damaged by smoke. The entire loss is placed at $2,000.

The Wanamaker Store The Wanamaker Store The Wanamaker Store

The Position of JANUARY In the ECONOMY of Buying

JANUARY is no longer a period of dullness. Merchandising effort as pioneered by the Wanamaker business has made it a month of strong and vigorous business activity. It has come to be a time that all thrifty folks look forward to for economical investment in goods of personal and housekeeping need.

The Wanamaker Store policy meets this expectation most fully and honestly. Stock adjustments of store merchandise are made on some lines daily. Stock adjustments of manufacturers, where desirable merchandise is offered at very positive savings in cost, are undertaken for prompt distribution by us. These movements keep the store news bristling with daily interest.

Then of still broader importance is the

which has been developed into the greatest power for economy of production and distribution that is known to the trade. It has emboldened manufacturers of women's garments to buy muslin and embroideries in the magnificent quantities that avail much in price setting. It has given them courage to take advantage of conditions for buying materials and for employing labor and machinery when both would otherwise be idle. The planning ahead has enabled us to have all garments made in bright, clean and healthy factories, without the rush and crowding that usual goods go through when ordered later, and from makers less careful of work-people and their environments. The Wanamaker stocks are crisp, fresh, immaculate, dainty and refined. The extremely low prices buy garments of greater beauty and comfort than are bought in usual stores at regular prices.

Do you wonder that the Wanamaker Sale of White is a success without a parallel? Do you wonder that women of taste and discrimination choose this store so universally to provide their muslin garments?

Daintiness, stylish and comfortable shapes, with hygienic purity and safety are motives enough for refined and practical women; yet added to these are prices as low or lower than are asked elsewhere for garments that have neither the character nor quality to deserve comparison.

High-Class Furs
Some Reduced Prices

They were eminently fair enough before the reduction. But we wish to hurry them along a bit faster. Fur-selling time is brief now, though there's a long period of wearing-time yet remaining, and other entire winters to come. Perhaps we had too many of these handsome Persian Lamb coats. What remain of this lot will be $75 each—that's $20 less than yesterday's moderate price.

These elegant coats of Persian lamb, with collars and revers of chinchilla, are $125 to-day—and that is $25 less than their regular very reasonable price.

Extra long full boas of natural lynx at $25 instead of $45 and $50.

Among the goods thus sacrificed to their later rivals are many for which the best wearing-time is now,—the handsomest and newest of Paris designing. Read the interesting details:

The BOOK SALE
New Lots Added To-day

It's the "Hurt Book" Sale that began yesterday. So called because instituted for the purpose of disposing of the books damaged during the eager holiday-time choosing. But it has broadened out greatly—it embraces this year many books without a scuff or a scar or a soil. Many splendid volumes of which there are but two or three of a kind. Complete sets of books, of which there remain only very small quantities—the entire field of literature is covered. And interesting additions will be made daily. The prices are about a third of regular markings. Here's a little list—just the briefest hint of the many good things procurable to-day:

HOUSE FIGHT OPENS ON REAPPORTIONMENT

Advocate of Reductien in Southern States Springs a Surprise.

Action of Both Democrats and Republicans Prevents Adoption of Resolution to Investigate Disfranchisement.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The radical element among the House Republicans who favor cutting down the representation from the Southern States in which the franchise is abridged, suffered defeat to-day because a number of their colleagues refused to act with them. The issue was precipitated quite unexpectedly.

The leaders had decreed that the reapportionment bill should be taken up to-day, but before it could be called Mr. Olmstead of Pennsylvania offered as a matter of privilege a resolution reciting the alleged abridgment of the suffrage in Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, and North Carolina, and directing the Committee on Census to investigate and report the facts to the House, in order that a Constitutional basis of representation could be established for those States. The resolution created a sensation. It was a surprise even to several of the Republican leaders.

The leaders on the Democratic side sought in vain to head off the resolution with points of order, but the Speaker ruled against them. They then began a filibuster, openly avowing that they would fight every proposition looking to the reduction of representation from the Southern States to the bitter end. Several of the Republicans were secretly in sympathy with them, and their indifference to the fate of the Olmstead resolution in the end gave the opposition the victory of to-day. Many of them quietly paired with absent Democrats, leaving their absent colleagues unpaired. As a result, when the question of consideration was raised against the resolution, it was defeated, 81-83.

The vote was a strict party vote. Two Republicans, Landis, Indiana, and Mann, Illinois, answered present, but did not vote. The story of the defeat is found in the absentees on both sides who were unpaired. Thirty-two Republicans were absent and unpaired, against sixteen of the opposition.

The situation, with reference to the apportionment bill, is greatly complicated as a result of the injection of the Olmstead resolution. Chairman Hopkins, however, is confident of victory for his bill. He thinks the Olmstead resolution may pass in a full House, and that the investigation may be made, but that the matter will end there. Irrespective of the fate of the resolution, however, he will press the reapportionment bill, and thinks it will pass on Monday. If possible, he will displace private bill day to-morrow with his measure.

THE RESOLUTION.

When the House reassembled not more than seventy-five members were present. Immediately after the reading of the journal, Mr. Olmstead (Rep., Penn.) sprang his surprise by offering the resolution, which is as follows:

Whereas, The continued enjoyment of full representation in this House by any State which has, for reasons other than participation in rebellion, or other crime, denied to any of the male inhabitants thereof, being twenty-one years of age and citizens of the United States, the right to vote for Representatives in Congress, Presidential Electors, and other specified officers, is in direct violation of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which declares that in such case the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which such male citizens bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State, and is an invasion of the rights and dignity of this House and of its members, and an infringement upon the rights and privileges in this House of other States and their Representatives; and,

Whereas, Since the last apportionment the States of Mississippi, South Carolina, and Louisiana have, by changes in the Constitutions and statutes of said States, for reasons other than participation in rebellion and other crime, denied the right of suffrage to male inhabitants twenty-one years of age, citizens of the United States, and such denial in each of said States extends to more than one-half of those who prior thereto were entitled to vote, as appears from the following statistics, published in the Congressional Directories of the Fifty-second and Fifty-sixth Congresses, viz.: In the seven districts of Mississippi, the total vote cast for all Congressional candidates in 1890 was 62,052; in 1898, 27,945. In the seven districts of South Carolina the total vote in 1890 was 73,322, and 58,871 in 1898. In the six districts of Louisiana, 74,542 in 1890, and 23,161 in 1898.

One member of the present House, representing ten counties in Mississippi, with a population in 1890 of 184,297, received only 2,068 votes. One member of the present House, representing six counties in South Carolina with a population in 1899 of 158,851, received only 1,765 votes, and one member, representing thirteen counties in Louisiana, with a population of 208,802, received only 2,494 votes; and,

Whereas, It is a matter of common rumor that other States have, for reasons other than those specified in the Constitution of the United States, denied to some of their male inhabitants twenty-one years old and citizens of the United States the right to vote for members of Congress and Presidential Electors, as well as executive and judicial officers of said States and members of the Legislatures thereof, and no reduction has been made in the representation of any State in this House because of such denial; and,

Whereas, The President of the United States has by message recommended "that the Congress, at its present session, apportion the representation among the several States as provided by the Constitution"; therefore,

Resolved, Section 1—That the Committee on Census shall be and is authorized and requested either by full committee or such sub-committees or sub-committees as may be appointed by the Chairman thereof, to inquire, examine, and report in what States the right to vote at any election for the choice of Electors for President and Vice President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the executive and judicial officers of a State, or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such States, twenty-one years of age, and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion or other crimes, and the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age, in each such State.

DEMOCRATS ON THE ALERT.

The reading of the resolution caused a flurry on the Democratic side. Before it had proceeded far, Mr. Richardson (Dem., Tenn.) the minority leader, jumped to his feet and interrupted the reading to ask whether the resolution required unanimous consent.

"It does not," replied the Speaker. "It is offered as a matter of privilege."

"I make the point that the resolution does not constitute a matter of privilege," said Mr. Richardson.

"The reading has not proceeded far enough to determine that point," responded the Speaker.

Mr. Richardson took his seat, but before the Clerk could proceed, Mr. Underwood (Dem., Ala.,) was on his feet. "I make the point that there is no quorum present," he said.

The Speaker glanced about the House. Evidently there was no quorum present. "The Chair will count," he said. The House was counted 141 present—not quorum—Mr. Underwood immediately moved an adjournment. The yeas and nays were demanded and obtained upon this motion. During the roll call there were hurried consultations on both sides of the House.

Many of the Republicans were taken as much by surprise as the Democrats. The latter were greatly agitated, and decided to filibuster against the resolution to the last ditch. The motion to adjourn was lost: yeas 68, nays 85; answering present but not voting, 14; noted present, 2; total, 170. The Speaker included himself in order to make up the quorum.

SPEAKER WITH OLMSTED.

The Speaker thereupon directed the Clerk to proceed with the reading of the resolution. When it was concluded, Mr. Richardson again brought forward his point of order that the resolution was not privileged. He argued that the resolution should take the course of all other resolutions, and go to a committee.

Mr. Olmsted, in reply, argued that under the Constitution matters affecting the reapportionment of Representatives were of the highest Constitutional privilege, and cited an elaborate opinion of Speaker Keifer in the Forty-seventh Congress in support of his position. Speaker Randall, he said, had also held that an Apportionment bill was a matter of the highest privilege. His resolution, he contended, seeking as it did to determine the Constitutional basis of representation, was equally privileged.

The House, he argued, could not act intelligently unless it was advised in what States and to what extent the suffrage of the male citizens of the United States had been abridged. The resolution, Mr. Olmsted said, touched the dignity of the House itself. If the suffrage had been abridged in certain States, then members were unjustly and unconstitutionally holding seats upon this floor, and this constituted an invasion of the dignity of the House.

The matter dealt with by the resolution might also affect the election of a President of the United States, a matter held repeatedly to be a matter of high privilege. But Mr. Olmsted was willing to rest his case upon the plain mandate of the Constitution.

Mr. Richardson made a brief response to Mr. Olmsted. He conceded that an apportionment bill was privileged, but contended that the resolution itself was simply one of inquiry to ascertain facts which might or might not be true.

"The resolution clearly recites that in certain States suffrage had been abridged without reduction of representation," interposed Mr. Olmsted.

"The 'whereas' makes such an allegation," replied Mr. Richardson, "but the resolution is simply one of inquiry."

"How can we apportion Constitutionally," asked Mr. Mahon, (Rep., Penn.,) "if we do not know the facts? How can we ascertain the truth of the allegations that hundreds of thousands of citizens are disfranchised?"

"An investigation can be made," replied Mr. Richardson, "but it must be made in the regular way."

The Speaker then announced that the question was clearly settled by Section 2 of Article XIV. of the Constitution, which he directed the Clerk to read. It related to the reduction of representation in States where the suffrage was abridged. The resolution and its preamble, said the Speaker, alleged that certain conditions existed which the Constitution expressly prohibited, and it must be passed upon by a higher rule than that of the House—the Constitution of the United States. He said he never expected to pass upon a question more simple. He overruled the point of order.

FILIBUSTERING WINS.

Mr. Underwood immediately raised the question of consideration against the resolution. On a rising vote it stood, yeas 69, nays 70. The yeas and nays were demanded and ordered. The Speaker announced the vote 81 to consider the resolution, 83 against, and 5 present but not voting—not a quorum. He directed a call of the House, pending which Mr. Underwood again moved an adjournment. The motion to adjourn was carried—77 to 75.

During the day Mr. Shattuc (Rep., Ohio,) also offered a resolution providing that the Census Committee furnish to the House information as to the total number of male citizens of the United States over twenty-one years of age, and the total number of male citizens of the United States over twenty-one years of age who, by reason of any State Constitutional limitations or State legislation, are denied the right of suffrage; whether the denial be on account of illiteracy, pauperism, polygamy, property qualification, or any other reason, and further providing that the Speaker appoint a committee of five to investigate such alleged abridgment of the right of suffrage.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE BIDS.

None of the Estimates for the New Building at Washington Comes Within the Appropriation.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Bids were opened at the Department of Justice today for the construction of a new Department of Justice Building of marble, according to the plans submitted by George B. The bids were as follows:

D. L. Thomas, Baltimore, $1,589,000; time, thirty-six months.

SENATE'S REQUEST DENIED.

The President Refuses to Send In Lawshe Report on Cuban Frauds.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The President to-day sent a message to the Senate declining the request of that body made in a resolution passed on the 19th of December and addressed to the Secretary of War for the transmittal of the Lawshe report in regard to the irregularities in connection with postal affairs in Cuba. The declination is considered exceptional, and it is possible it will create more or less discussion.

The President's refusal was based on a report from Secretary Root, transmitted with it, which was couched in the following language:

The document referred to is a confidential report of an investigation made under your authority for the purpose of enabling you, through this department, to properly direct the prosecution of certain offenders against the laws of Cuba.

The prosecutions are now pending. While they are pending it is not in my judgment compatible with the public interests that the report should be made public.

I transmit a copy of the report, together with the resolution for your action or instructions.

CHANGES IN NAVAL COMMANDS.

Coming Retirement of Rear-Admiral Kautz Causes Transfers.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—The Navy Department to-day issued orders detaching Rear Admiral A. Kautz from his post as Commander in Chief of the Pacific Station, to take effect Jan. 28. Admiral Kautz's retirement takes place soon after. He will be succeeded by Rear Admiral Casey, Commandant of the Philadelphia Navy Yard. Rear Admiral G. W. Sumner has been detached from the command of the Port Royal Station, and will succeed Rear Admiral Casey.

CONGRESSIONAL NOTES.

Senator Harris (Pop., Kan.,) yesterday introduced a resolution in the Senate directing the Inter-State Commerce Commission to investigate "whether there now exist any association or associations of railroad companies formed for the purpose of controlling and restraining competition in transportation rates of traffic over lines from points between the Mississippi River and the Rocky Mountains which operate similarly to the association known as the Trans-Missouri Railway Association, that was declared by the Supreme Court of the United States to be an unlawful combination and in violation of the anti-trust law." The commission is to report to the Senate.

The Secretary of War has submitted to Congress an additional deficiency estimate of $3,000,000 for army subsistence, caused chiefly by the heavy demands made by the forces in China and the Philippines.

Resolutions adopted by the House of Representatives upon the death of Representative Wise of Virginia were read in the Senate. Mr. Daniel, (Dem., Va.,) then offered a resolution expressing the sorrow of the Senate at the intelligence of Mr. Wise's death.

A bill framed by a board of officers of the navy providing for a naval reserve to assist the United States Navy in time of emergency was introduced in the House by Representative Cummings, (Dem., N. Y.)

Representative Hill (Rep., Conn.,) introduced a bill to maintain the legal-tender silver dollar at parity with gold. This and the bill of Representative Levy, (Dem., N. Y.,) on similar lines, will be taken up next Thursday by the House Committee on Coinage and a time fixed for hearing Secretary Gage and other financial authorities. Mr. Hill supplements this bill with another providing for exchanging greenbacks for gold certificates, so that the former may be retired without any lessening of the currency in circulation.

Senator Nelson (Rep., Minn.,) gave notice of an amendment he will offer to the bill for the modification of the war revenue law providing that "all bequests or legacies for uses of a religious, literary, charitable, or educational character, including works of art, on which the tax heretofore imposed has not been paid or collected shall be and are hereby declared to be exempt from the payment of such tax."

PINGREE SAYS FAREWELL

Sends His Last Message to the Michigan Legislature.

INVEIGHS AGAINST CAPITAL

Says He Was Condemned for Being Honest—Tells What Led to the Attack on Alger.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 3.—Both houses of the Michigan Legislature assembled in joint session to-day to hear the message of ex-Gov. Pingree and the inaugural message of Gov. Bliss. Mr. Pingree prefaced his message with some extemporaneous remarks, in which he attacked the courts, the Legislature, and the press. He also urged the Legislature to appropriate sufficient money to amply pay the expenses of the Governor, saying it had cost him $40,000 during his four years' term.

Mr. Pingree took up the subject of "equal taxation" at the beginning of his message, and reviewed all the steps that have been taken to date toward increasing the amount of taxes paid by railroads and other corporations. After mentioning the failure of the Senate, which has always opposed his taxation bills, at the last special session of the Legislature in December, to pass the railroad taxation bill passed by the House, he said:

"The lesson to be drawn from this history of the contest for equal taxation is that if the people wish this great problem to be satisfactorily settled they must centre their efforts on the election of a Senate which shall be less subject to the seductive arguments of the railroads and other wealthy and powerful interests, and more responsive to the wishes of the people."

The message urged the Legislature to adopt the resolution adopted by the Legislature of Pennsylvania requesting Congress to call a convention for the purpose of proposing an amendment to the Constitution to provide for the election of United States Senators by popular vote. Discussing the question, the message said:

"The cases of Hanna in Ohio, Carter in Montana, and our own discouraging and disgraceful experience furnish the most powerful and convincing argument in behalf of popular elections. It is a matter of common knowledge that the office is sought by wealthy men, not so much for the alleged honor, as the opportunity which it offers for financial profit and commercial advantages, not only through stock speculation, but in other and less legitimate ways. Instead of being the bulwark of our Government, as the framers of the Constitution intended it, the Senate is now looked upon with fear and distrust by the people of the country."

Municipal ownership of public utilities, such as water, gas, electric light, telephone service, and the furnishing of street railway transportation, was also discussed and advocated.

Discussing the pardons and paroles which have been granted to prisoners during his four years in office, Mr. Pingree said:

"The people of the State would be astonished if they could know how loose and careless, and almost criminal, have been the methods of courts and prosecutors in prosecuting criminal cases. It has become a trite saying in our State, among those familiar with the circumstances, that our public prosecutors should be named 'public persecutors.' They seem to have lost sight of the fact that they take an oath of office to protect the innocent from punishment as much as to bring the criminal to justice and to protect the people of the State."

After discussing a number of matters of State interest only, and making recommendations in regard to them, Mr. Pingree said in conclusion:

"My experience during my political life, extending over a period of twelve years, has convinced me that in order to secure the full commendation of those who consider themselves the 'better classes' the Governor and other high officials must do nothing to antagonize the great corporations and the wealthy people. I am satisfied that I could have had the praise and support of our 'best citizens' and our 'best society' and of the press of the State generally if I had upheld those who have for years attempted to control legislation in their own interests to the end that they might be relieved from sharing equally with the poor and lowly the burden of taxation. I would have been pronounced a good fellow and a great statesman.

"The memory of the treatment of Gen. Alger by the press of the country and his removal from the Cabinet is fresh in the minds of all. I was informed by Gen. Alger himself that one of the main reasons for the opposition to him was because he had ignored the claims of the great steamboat interests with representatives in New York City. The matter of sending something like 50,000 Spaniards to Spain came up, and the General advertised for bids for transportation. The tenders of the different companies, submitted by the New York representatives, were exactly alike—so much for officers of certain rank, so much for other officers, and so much for privates—showing a combination and agreement between the companies. The bids which the General received from Spain were less than half of those offered by the New York syndicate, and the contracts were therefore awarded to the Spanish vessels. That was the turning point in the assault against the General, because he would not toady to the companies as represented in New York and show them special favors.

"I use this as an illustration to show how powerful is the influence of those who have resolved on the policy of rule or ruin. This has been my experience while holding the office of Governor. Every large interest that I have antagonized during my fight for equal taxation has been arrayed against me, and the allies of those interests, the newspapers of the State, have let no opportunity to attempt to draw the minds of the people from the real issue by making personal attacks on me and publishing malicious and willful libels, and to belittle my efforts and bring me into disrepute in order that the present system of unjust, inequitable, and iniquitous laws might still remain in force, to the detriment of the great masses of the laboring classes and farmers and those of small properties who are unable to speak and act for themselves.

"I make the prediction that unless those in charge and in whose hands legislation is reposed do not change the present system of inequality, in less than a quarter of a century there will be a bloody revolution in this great country of ours."

Gov. Bliss, in his message, urged on the legislators the advisability of economy in all appropriations, and suggested a short session of the Legislature in the interest of economy.

COLORADO'S FINANCES.

Retiring Gov. Thomas Suggests Means of Relief.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 3.—Retiring Governor Thomas to-day transmitted his final message to the Legislature. Concerning the condition of the State's finances and plans for increasing the revenues, he said:

"Our credit is exhausted, and we are face to face with relief or bankruptcy. I would recommend that our great industrial corporations operating and owning property scattered throughout the State be placed, with transportation companies, under the jurisdiction of the State Board of Equalization. Their evasions of the revenue laws are general and notorious.

"Experience teaches that two methods of reaching personal property may be effectively employed. One is the taxation of incomes, the other of inheritance."

The floating debt of the State, for the payment of which, the Governor declares some provision should be made, amounts to $2,073,077.

For a Department of Education.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Senator Hansbrough to-day introduced a bill creating a Department of Education and giving the head of the department a place in the President's Cabinet. Speaking of the object of the bill, Senator Hansbrough said that the educational interests of the country are constantly increasing, and that, with the addition of the new territory comprised in Hawaii, Porto Rico, and the Philippines, this interest would grow rapidly in scope and importance in the future. On this account, he said, he thought the head of the proposed department should be a member of the President's official household.

Cost of Improving Governors Island.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Secretary Root has sent to Congress an estimate of $1,140,000 for enlarging and improving Governors Island, New York Harbor, for army purposes.

TO MODIFY TUNNEL PLANS.

Rapid Transit Commissioners Will Grant Mr. McDonnell's Request.

Residents of Jerome Avenue and other streets in that section of the Bronx presented to the Board of Rapid Transit Commissioners yesterday afternoon two petitions asking for an extension of the subway from Lenox Avenue across the Harlem and north. The petitions were presented by Fielding L. Marshall and William D. Peck, who addressed the board and asked for a hearing some day in the near future.

The Commissioners practically approved an application by Contractor John B. McDonald for a modification of the plans providing for three tracks across the Manhattan Valley viaduct, from One Hundred and Twenty-third Street to One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street, and also at the stations at One Hundred and Tenth, One Hundred and Sixteenth, and One Hundred and Forty-fifth Streets. The proposed modification is designed to facilitate express service, and will mean quicker travel north of the terminus of the four-track section. By means of the third track at these points, many of the purely local trains can be passed on the additional track, and time saved to residents of the extreme northern portion of the route.

The board's counsel reported that it has power to grant authority for the additional construction, and at the next meeting a resolution to this effect will be passed.

Some time ago Contractor McDonald asked counsel to what extent he was liable for the restoration of vaults to buildings disturbed, and in many instances entirely cut off, by reason of the encroachment of the tunnel. In an opinion given yesterday by Messrs. Shepard and Boardman, it was held that the contractor is under no obligation to either restore or make restitution to property owners, inasmuch as the owners in many instances have taken city property for such purpose without legal right, and in other cases have built vaults under the sidewalks by virtue of special license, revokable at will by the city. The decision means much to Mr. McDonald, and, conversely, will affect many property owners and tenants to a considerable degree.

The board approved the bonds, to the value of $1,000,000, deposited on Wednesday by August Belmont & Co. with the Controller, in compliance with the terms of the supplemental agreement with the contractor, which called for this additional security.

A NEW TUNNEL SCHEME.

Proposed Plan to Run New York Central Trains to Brooklyn.

Among the possible innovations in intramural railroad travel in connection with the subway is the building of a short tunnel by the New York Central Railroad, to connect with the underground road at Forty-second Street, by which Central trains may be run down town and across to Brooklyn. This is a plan which in a general way has been outlined before in connection with a subway line from Brooklyn to Jersey City. Its revival now is the result of a report that the subject was discussed by the rapid transit and Central engineers in the many conferences regarding the Forty-second Street section of the subway and its connections with the Grand Central Station.

The New York Central officials it is known have long been engaged in devising means for more yard room, involving the utilization of space under the present tracks. In this event a connecting tunnel with the city subway road might easily follow, as the entrance by the Central into the lower part of the city and to Brooklyn would be of incalculable advantage to the road.

THE BATTLESHIP CONTRACTS.

Order for Sheathed Vessels May Be Deferred Until February.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—There are indications that the Navy Department may defer the award of contracts for the three sheathed battleships yet undisposed of until the 1st of February, at which time there will be opened the bids for constructing three protected cruisers.

The reason that is being advanced for postponing the allotment is that it will be possible to secure a more equitable and more satisfactory distribution of this naval work among the various bidders by having six ships to distribute at one time than by trying to parcel them off in two installments.

The Department has decided to qualify its decision already announced, to award two of the unsheathed battleships to the Fore River Engine Company of Quincy, Mass., so as to require the concern, which is now a partnership, to become incorporated.

Lieut. Barber's Body Brought Ashore.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—The body of Lieut. James S. Barber, Paymaster in the Navy, and nephew of President McKinley, was taken from the transport Grant to the Mare Island Navy Yard. It will be transported East soon. The body was taken on by the Grant at Hong-Kong, the vessel making a special call there for that purpose on the way from Manilla to this port. Lieut. Barber died from fever about two months ago, while on duty at the Asiatic station.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—Arrangements have been made for the interment at Canton, Ohio, of the body of Assistant Paymaster James S. Barber of the Navy, the President's nephew, who recently died in Japan of disease incurred in the line of duty. It will be transshipped to Canton from San Francisco next Saturday.

A West Point Cadet's Fine Record.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Jan. 3.—The semi-annual examinations of the Corps of Cadets began this morning, and will continue from day to day until completed, probably next Tuesday. Cadet Edward N. Johnston of the first class appeared before the Examining Board as first man in all the subjects of his class—engineering, ordnance and gunnery, law, and history—an unusual distinction. Johnston was appointed from Oregon.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Establishment of an American Trans-Pacific Cable Approved.

National Organization of Commercial Interests for Co-operation with the Government Discussed by John A. Kasson.

The regular monthly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was held yesterday. There was a large attendance, and Morris K. Jesup presided.

Gustav R. Schwab of the Committee on Foreign Commerce and Revenue Laws presented a set of resolutions, which were adopted, stating that the Chamber favored the establishment of an American trans-Pacific cable by private enterprise and approving the provisions of the bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman Sherman.

George F. Seward of the Committee on State and Municipal Taxation presented a report, which was adopted, the principal provision of which was that local governing bodies may declare what property now taxable shall be free from taxation or subject to taxation at a reduced rate, and setting forth the advantages of local option in taxation.

John A. Kasson addressed the members on "National Organization of the Interests of Commerce and Industry for Co-operation with the Government." Mr. Kasson deplored the want of relationship and of co-operation between the men who have the knowledge and the Government which has the responsibility of legislative action, which, he said, was a positive public misfortune. He sketched the methods in vogue in other countries, and proposed the following remedies here:

"The chief Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade of the country should devise a plan for constituting a Commission of Experts, thoroughly representative of the commercial, industrial, and agricultural interests of the country at large. It might be defined 'The United States Central Committee of Commerce and Industry,' and should have for Secretary an able man, with sufficient salary, and with his office at the National capital. He should be a medium of communication between his immediate constituency and the Government in all matters of legislative and executive action affecting their interests.

"The second proposition, inviting the consideration of yourselves and of your associate boards throughout the country, is the establishment of an Executive Department of Commerce and Industry at the seat of Government. The new department would be, in the United States as in other commercial nations, the natural head of the new National association, and through it would be in touch with the active industrial life of the country. This department would also become (as in France) the referee and adviser of the Department of State in respect to the negotiation of all commercial treaties. It should, and undoubtedly would, have charge of all commercial statistics, and would speedily correct delinquencies such as now exist. It would be able to furnish promptly accurate and detailed information respecting particular markets and merchandise upon the demand of those numerous and important agents of National prosperity, the exporting merchants along all our vast frontiers on land and sea.

"Theoretically this is a Government by the people. And this is practically true, so far as the political wishes of the people are concerned. It is not effectively true, so far as non-political legislation is concerned. It never will be true, so far as the material interests of the country are involved until these interests have adopted some form of effective organization by which their influence may be concentrated and brought to bear upon the Government as effectually as is the political interest. There is no just reason why men combined in voluntary political associations should exercise a stronger influence over legislation than do these other men—certainly their equals in intelligence and patriotism—who are combined for the promotion of our National prosperity. It remains for our business associations to establish this principle of equal rights, and to give it effect by a well considered, widely extended and well concentrated organization."

CAUGHT AFTER PISTOL FIGHT.

Sullivan Had Burglar's Kit and Dynamite—Accused of Killing Policeman.

Thomas Sullivan, alias William O'Connor, alias "Goat" Hinch, No. 5,382 in the Rogues' Gallery at Police Headquarters, was arrested yesterday on the New York Central Railroad, near Hastings, after a fight with Policeman Graney of Dobbs Ferry and Deputy Sheriff Murray of Hastings, near Dobbs Ferry.

At 2 o'clock Graney stopped four men at Dobbs Ferry and asked them what they had in a bundle one was carrying. For a reply one of the men fired at the officer, but missed him. The men then ran toward Hastings. Later Graney and Murray saw a man cross the railroad tracks. He ran away, and both sides opened fire. The officers closed in upon him, and as they did the man threw a bundle into the Hudson. Then the officers caught him. The bundle when found later revealed a kit of burglar's tools, including dynamite.

He was brought to Police Headquarters in this city, where he was declared to be a safe cracker. The detectives who brought him here, say that he is reported to have killed a policeman near Albany, and probably will be sent to the latter place.

ACCUSED OF FORGING A POLICY.

Insurance Agent Arrested on Complaint of a Broadway Storekeeper.

William White, an insurance agent who says he lives at 150 West Eighty-fourth Street, was locked up in the West Thirtieth Street Station last night on a charge of forgery, the complainant being Oscar L. Aufben-Heide, proprietor of a cigar store at 1,453 Broadway.

Mr. Aufben-Heide says he took out a policy for $1,500 with White, in the Sun Fire Insurance Company, and that White charged him $49 for the first premium. A few days later White came to him and got possession of the policy on the plea that mistakes in a few matters of detail had been made. When he returned it Mr. Aufben-Heide discovered that the policy in his possession called for $1,000 insurance on furniture in a flat in West Eighty-ninth Street, the premium on which was down as $4. The cigar dealer also discovered that the original writing had been erased with chemicals and the furniture policy written over it.

Mr. Aufben-Heide then learned from the officials of the company that his $1,500 policy had not been recorded.

Rhode Island Cedes Land.

PROVIDENCE, Jan. 3.—The Senate today passed an act under the title of "An act to cede jurisdiction of tracts of land at Portsmouth Grove, Narragansett Bay, in this State, to the United States of America, for use as a coaling station and for other naval purposes." This constitutes the formal transfer by the State of the land picked out by the Belknap Board in 1898 for a coal station, to the National Government. The naval base is important, owing to its proximity to the Newport station.

Porto Rican Assembly Quits Jan. 31.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, Jan. 3.—By the decision of Mr. Griggs, the United States Attorney General, the term of the Porto Rican Assembly will expire Jan. 31, Mr. Griggs pronouncing in favor of a sixty-day continuous session from Dec. 3. The delegates have been regarding Sundays and holidays as periods that would not be included, and had expected to adjourn Feb. 10. The House is now holding two sessions daily, endeavoring in the time that remains to accomplish some useful legislation.

SUNDAY CAR RIDING ILLEGAL.

New Jersey Law Permits Traveling in Public Conveyances Only to and From Church.

Diademo Cupo, a bandmaster, yesterday sued the Jersey City, Hoboken and Paterson Railroad Company in the First District Court, Jersey City, before Judge Crouse, to recover $120 for alleged violation of contract. Cupo, who lives in New York, claimed that he had a contract to play with his band in the procession that took place in Paterson on Sunday, Aug. 12, in celebration of the assassination of King Humbert. He was to receive $120.

He and his musicians boarded one of the company's trolley cars in Hoboken at noon of the day named, expecting to reach Paterson before 3 o'clock, the hour at which the procession started. A violent electrical storm arose, and at East Rutherford the car ahead of that in which Cupo and his musicians rode was derailed. Traffic was delayed and when Cupo and his band finally reached Paterson the parade was over. As a consequence he did not receive the $120 he expected, and was at the loss of this time, the money he was obliged to pay, the musicians and their traveling expenses.

The company's defense was that the contract it had made to carry Cupo and his band to Paterson was illegal because it was made for service to be rendered on Sunday, and that under the laws of New Jersey it was illegal for any one to travel by public conveyance on Sunday except in going to or returning from church. This contention was upheld by Judge Crouse.

"The contract in this case," said Judge Crouse, "is contrary to the provisions of the act for the suppression of vice and immorality. That legislation exhibits today all the force and vitality which inhered in it thirty-five years ago, when Chief Justice Beasley stated its effect to be to annul every transaction which, if performed on a week day, would be enforceable in a court of justice. Barring the cases taken out of the general rule by the act itself, there can be no such thing as a liable contract made to be performed on a Sunday."

ICE TRUST WILL SUPPLY CITY.

Only One Bid for the Contract—The Price to Be Paid.

The American Ice Company, known as the "Ice Trust," will furnish the city with ice this year. Commissioner Kearny of the Department of Buildings, Lighting, and Supplies yesterday opened the only bid for this contract. It was from the American Ice Company.

The ice is to be delivered to the city departments in the Borough of Manhattan at $4 a ton, 20 cents per hundredweight, or 35 cents per water cooler each week. In Brooklyn ice will be delivered at $5 per ton, 52 cents per hundredweight, and 5C cents a week for each water cooler. The contract will amount to about $5,000. The buildings to be supplied do not include the schools and hospitals.

City Will Try Again to Mend Leaks in Millburn Basin.

At the meeting of the Board of Public Improvements yesterday a resolution was adopted authorizing the expenditure of $500,000 to make repairs to the Millburn Reservoir in Brooklyn.

FOURTEEN PAGES.

THE PEOPLE AND THE GOVERNOR.

The supreme power of the people is at the command of Gov. ODELL for the achievement of the reforms and the savings he has had the courage to recommend. He need have no fear that anybody will stand in his way. Nobody can. No boss, no machine, no Legislature, no party will have the hardihood to oppose openly the measures of public morality that he proposes in his message. If they did attempt to thwart him, they would be themselves destroyed.

He has surprised the State and awakened public opinion not only by his knowledge of the abuses that have been practiced and his radical recommendations for correcting them, but by the perfect disinterestedness of his plan of procedure. He has startled and shaken his party because he has exposed its sins, its greed, its waste of the public moneys, and by its unfaithfulness to a public trust. For six years the Republican Party in New York has industriously pursued the Tammany vocation of filling its own pockets. It has created many useless commissions and scores of superfluous offices to provide support at the taxpayers' cost for a host of the workers and dependents of the organization. How jealously watchful the Republican organization has been not to let any seizable dollar slip through its fingers was shown the other day when PLATT himself was caught interfering to prevent one of the innumerable commissions from awarding a contract to a Democratic lowest bidder.

Nobody expected that Gov. ODELL would sound such a note as we have heard in his message. It is like the blast of the ram's horn before the walls of Jericho. It is not merely the accomplices and beneficiaries of the Republican spendthrift policy that are pilloried. The message is also a terrible arraignment of the public officials who, knowing these abuses to exist, have done nothing to cure them. Gov. ROOSEVELT, in particular, a man from whom, according to all the promises of his training and his professed views of public duty, the people had the right to expect a relentless cleaning of the household, will read Gov. ODELL'S message with the poignant regret of one who sees his own lost opportunity availed of by another.

Those who have known the present Governor only as a politician did not expect from him so thorough an understanding of the evils that have been engrafted upon the State system, or so direct and simple a programme for reforming them. It is the highest distinction of his message, next to the courage and the sense of public duty that prompted it, that it is altogether practical. There is not a particle of egotism, no red fire or rough riders, no sounding of trumpets, but precisely such a plan of reform as the new Superintendent of a business establishment would prepare in response to a demand from the Board of Directors that useless expenditures be lopped off and the business be put upon a sound basis of economy and efficiency. The State will be gratified beyond measure to discover that at last it has a business Governor.

Last Fall, when ex-Gov. HILL pointed out in a campaign speech the very abuses that the Governor has exposed, the nest of Republican officials, much stirred up and resentful, sent out a reply and defense that possessed a superficial effectiveness because Mr. HILL had made a few mistakes in his figures. The charges he made were true, the immorality of the transaction he denounced was evident, but attacks from without were dismissed as due to partisanship. That defense will not avail against this exposure. Mr. ODELL is as good a Republican as there is in the State. He has been for years the Chairman of the State Committee. He serves not only the people but his party by the undertaking upon which he has entered. It is, indeed, the very highest service to the Republican Party to cleanse it of some of the corruptions that have been fastened upon it by PLATT. The Governor has but to keep on as he has begun to awaken a public opinion that will be altogether irresistible. With the reinforcement that he can summon to his support he can make himself the boss, the boss for good things as PLATT has been the boss for bad. He can make the Legislature pass the bills that will carry out his projects of economy, for experience has often shown that even a machine Legislature will bow to the public command clearly given. For Mr. ODELL personally there is no course he could pursue that would give him greater distinction and carry him further.

MR. HANNA TO THE RESCUE.

Senator HANNA publishes in The Independent of this week a careful defense of the Ship Subsidy bill which bears the name of Senator FRYE, but of which Mr. HANNA is the chief advocate. The question of authorship is a delicate one on which it is not necessary to enter; no one, we believe, is disposed to withhold credit from the Committee of Twenty-five, composed principally of beneficiaries of the bill.

The Senator assumes that "the people as a whole are almost a unit in desiring to see American ships do our foreign carrying." It is a pretty stiff assumption. There is a very large number of those Americans who desire to see our foreign carrying done at the lowest rates whether it be done by Americans or not. But, granting the Senator's assumption, there is one feature of his bill that is in contradiction to this desire. It is the section that admits to share in the subsidies foreign-built ships belonging to a favored group of men who were in a position to profit by the bill at the time that it was concocted and submitted to Congress. If it is well to admit these men to the privilege of buying or building ships abroad, and getting subsidies on them, it is also well to admit all others who choose to comply with the conditions. Subsidies to foreign-built ships are absolutely inconsistent with the professed purpose of Mr. HANNA'S bill. To propose them is to concede the principle of free purchase of ships, and then to confine its benefits to a special small group, selected in advance, and actually employed in framing the bill. Mr. HANNA must permit us to say that nothing more impudent than that has ever been done in the history of American legislation.

Senator HANNA makes a specious attempt to justify the large subsidies to fast ships. He says:

> It has been said that the greatest amount goes to a few of the fast ships now under our flag. But, while such ships actually receive more, in dollars and cents, than do cargo ships, they nevertheless receive much less proportionately to the differences in the cost as compared with the foreign ships against which they compete.

But the Senator ought to know that what the bill professes to promote is the carrying of "cargoes," and the sum spent is to be excused if at all by the effect it has in that direction, and not to the ease it brings to the pockets of the recipients. Here again the presence of this absurdly one-sided provision is to be accounted for by the part taken by the men favored in the shaping of the bill. It is no justification; it is an ample explanation.

DISCREDITABLE PARSIMONY.

At the last session of Congress Senator HOAR introduced a bill to increase the salaries of Judges in the United States courts. It was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, and reported favorably, with some amendments. We give below the actual salaries paid to Judges of the various courts and the salaries proposed by the bill:

	Now Paid.	Proposed.
Chief Justice	$10,500	$15,500
Associate Justice	10,000	15,000
Circuit Judge	6,000	9,000
District Judge	5,000	7,500

Senator HOAR'S bill also provides that after the passage of the act no payment shall be made to any of the Judges for expenses. It will be seen that the increase proposed in the salaries is 50 per cent. in each case, except that of the Chief Justice, where it is a trifle less. The original proposition was for a salary of $20,000 for the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court and $21,000 for the Chief Justice. Apparently it was thought best by the committee to adopt a uniform ratio of advance.

We are of the opinion that the salaries proposed for the Supreme Court were not too high, and that those of the Circuit and District Judges might with advantage have been advanced in the same proportion. Certainly the increase proposed is exceedingly moderate, and is demanded by every consideration of fairness and expediency. The salaries when raised will still be below the average paid in the State courts which rank at all near to the Federal courts. They will be far below the income which any lawyer of the ability and reputation which ought to be possessed by a Federal Judge could earn in private practice. It is true that the dignity of the office and the life tenure with the right of retirement are very valuable attributes of the Federal bench, but if we give to these all the consideration that they are entitled to it still remains true that the Judges are very much underpaid. The fact is utterly discreditable to the Government. No time should be lost in remedying the injustice.

There has been but little advance in the compensation of the Federal Judges since the foundation of the Government, though the extent and importance of their labors have very greatly increased. With the development of the country and the complex industrial and financial interests that have become National in character as well as in scope, the range of matters over which Federal jurisdiction has gradually spread is almost incredibly wide, and embraces whole fields that were not even imagined by the framers of the Constitution. In patent cases, for instance, with the enormous values involved and the intricate ramifications of claims and counterclaims, the courts of to-day have a task exceeding in extent and difficulty the entire commercial business of the early years of the Republic. In the relations of persons and corporations, citizens of or incorporated in one State and doing business in all the other States, there is another source of litigation far outstripping the expectations of the founders of the court. And wholly outside of and above all the relations between private or corporate parties in interest are those that have arisen under the application of the Constitutional power to regulate commerce between the States. The effect of that power and the nature of its present use were not even conceived when the Federal courts were established. The subject matter—the operations of the vast railroad system of the country—did not exist and was inconceivable. Add to these fields of judicial action the interpretation of the Constitution in its bearing on wholly novel matters, and we can get some idea of the growth of the demands made on the wisdom, learning, and intellectual ability of the United States judiciary.

There is no bench in the world more burdened, more honored and trusted, and none so ill-paid. That, we repeat, is a deeply discreditable situation, and no time should be lost in changing it.

CONGRESS AND THE ARMY BILL.

If any individual Senator or Representative had the responsibility to sustain that is divided among the members of the Military Committees of the Senate and the House, he would not be able to stand it. He would consent to make some immediate regulation. The urgency of the case is matter of common notoriety. It proceeds, it is true, from the malefaction of a person whose membership no longer disgraces the Senate, and who has thus lost the power to mislead and pervert that body. It was evident to everybody except Senator GORMAN, when he managed to fix the legal limitation of the army to a term far shorter than any expert would have said was sufficient for the work it had to do, that he was preparing a grave peril for the country. There was no prospect that the evident public disadvantage of his unpatriotic behavior would be offset by a party advantage, or even a personal advantage to himself, although, on this latter point, it must be admitted that the judgment of the unpatriotic GORMAN has a claim to be treated as expert.

But nobody supposes that the members of the present Military Committees of Congress have been bribed, politically or personally, to cripple the army. Why should they gratuitously do it? Why should they expose the whole work of the Administration, to the support of which they are committed, to be overthrown for want of provision for carrying it on?

It is on the Military Committee of the Senate that the immediate responsibility rests, since the House has passed an Army bill, such as it is. The social pressure of the barnacles of the staff can scarcely explain the action of the Senate in "holding up" a measure the immediate disposition of which every officer, though a barnacle, admits to be absolutely necessary to the acquittal of our National obligations.

Mr. ROOT, we suppose, has by this time parted with any amiable illusions that he may have entertained, to the effect that all that was necessary to secure the enactment of an Army bill was to prove that it would increase the efficiency of the service and decrease its cost. He is probably prepared to welcome any "modus vivendi" that will merely not expose the army and the country to immediate and shameful disaster, even though its terms are prescribed by a joint conference of the Women's Christian Temperance Union and the barnacles who are enjoying the "soft things" of staff service at Washington and employing their large leisure in currying favor with the members of the Military Committees. But in the name of patriotism and decency let Congress decide and act. There seems to be no doubt that action is delayed by the pressure of the staff barnacles. The inference is that those persons, nominally officers of the United States Army, are really as cold-blooded and greedy and selfish politicians, as utterly regardless of the interests of their country, when the interests of the "gang" is concerned, as are the professed politicians. Some day, on the news of some disaster, the country will fix this responsibility. That will be a bad day for the barnacles.

MR. CONGER IN CHINA.

We continue to receive from Washington complaints of the conduct of Mr. CONGER in China, all to the effect that he misrepresents the Government of the United States in that country. These complaints have an official or "semi-official" air which gives them more importance than they would otherwise have possessed. Moreover, so far as we are able to judge, they are all well founded. The story, as it has been given out from Washington, of the manner in which that very objectionable word "irrevocable" was put back into the terms of peace of the allies, after everybody made sure that it had been finally taken out, is not at all creditable to Mr. CONGER. The plain meaning of the incident is that he made eager haste to put that construction upon an undecipherable dispatch which would best suit his own personal views, but which, as he had been informed, did not at all meet the views of his Government. In the most charitable construction of his action, he was curiously reckless. In a less charitable construction, he snatched at the chance an incoherent dispatch gave him of nullifying the will of his principals.

In any case, he has evidently ceased to be a fit representative of the Government of the United States in China. Why, then, is he not relieved? His mere participation in the sufferings and the horrors of the siege of the legations may well be supposed to have inspired him with a personal resentment which unfits him to represent a Government which has taken pains to show that its policy was based upon something more respectable than resentment. There was no fault, that we know of, to be found with the behavior of Sir CLAUDE MACDONALD during the siege, or in the incidents that led up to the siege. Yet, as soon as the siege was ended by the rescue, he was honorably relieved of his mission and sent elsewhere. If we had done the same or an equivalent thing by Mr. CONGER we should evidently have been better off, so far as concerns our having a faithful representative of our views and purposes in Peking. Mr. CONGER has no lien on his mission that we ever heard of, or that we believe, when he has outlived his usefulness in it. And we are bound to say that the Government does not appear in a dignified or advantageous attitude in continuing to find public fault with an agent whom it has the power of removing summarily whenever he ceases to be the best attainable representative of its policy and purposes.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

—That element of humor which the Cudahy kidnapping case has hitherto completely lacked is now supplied by the discovery that the man arrested near the Pine Ridge Agency was not, as the first reports had it, the redoubtable PAT CROWE, but one DENNIS of Boston, who is vaguely, and yet perhaps adequately, described as "a collector of specimens." It must have been a thrilling moment for Mr. DENNIS of Boston when his search for whatever specimens he wanted was interrupted by the swift and concentric approach of a posse of mounted and heavily armed Nebraska Deputy Sheriffs, all eager to earn an enormous reward by capturing any reasonably suspicious person, and not too particular whether they captured the person dead or alive. Presumably Mr. DENNIS of Boston wasted no time in giving a full and credible explanation of his mission, and his survival is sufficient evidence that he is a ready and lucid speaker, whose gestures never carry his hands below his waist line. We incline to the theory that the Bostonite, if one may use that term, of Mr. DENNIS was not the real thing—not a product of birth and breeding, but adoptive and to some degree commercial. His name, in the first place, doesn't have the true Boston ring, and then he not only convinced the deputies that he was not PAT CROWE—which any Bostonian could have done, of course—but he also convinced them that his continued existence could be endured, and not all, or perhaps many, Simon-Pure Bostonians engaged in collecting specimens would find it easy to do that. The chances are that Mr. DENNIS reached Boston from Ireland, by way of New York, and that he was out West simply to get rid of ideas involuntarily acquired in the course of a mistaken and quickly regretted effort to accustom himself to the Boston climate and atmosphere. The "specimen" yarn evidently did well enough for the Deputy Sheriffs, but somehow it doesn't carry conviction in the East. If Mr. DENNIS couldn't find on the north side of Fourteenth Street, between Third and Fourth Avenues, a place where he would feel perfectly at home, we miss our guess. That's the kind of a Bostonian he is.

—A truly interesting letter has been sent to The London Chronicle by a woman who, writing from Washington, begins by saying: "A year ago I had the qualified good fortune to travel hither with my American husband, for whom I abandoned title, position, and our better English climate." She seems to have regretted her matrimonial experiment even before she reached our savage shores, for on the steamer that brought her here she was "launched at one breath into a society and among people prejudiced, except in a few instances, by both education and sentiment against Great Britain." And this painful knowledge "does not come by degrees, thus enabling you to grow philosophical in equal ratio, but it is almost immediately tossed into your face by a servant, a tradesman, a newly found friend who undertakes to act as an apologist for the rest of her compatriots, and others." The exiled Britoness was amazed to find no English flags flying in American streets, and in American text books she noted an outrageous tendency to record facts about happenings in the Revolutionary era, "much of which, whether true or not, might well be omitted." After a passing reference to "the whisky-drinking, priest-ridden sons of Erin, who never mention our dear Queen-mother without a curse," the letter writer thus discourses: "The social standard of our American cousins, if we may so speak of the conglomerate admixture of all the peoples of earth, is an interesting study to one versed in the etiquette of our English drawing rooms. Whether the lack of polish in many instances is due to an ignorance of the rudiments of refined life, the effects of the boasted common school training where all classes meet on a common level, or an affected indifference to what we call polite usage, it is difficult to say. Whatever be the cause, the disheartening fact remains that outside the circle of a few thousands of cultured people in each of the great centres, and proportionally less for the smaller towns and villages, there are few who would not become the cynosure of all eyes and the centre of all manner of criticism in any capital in Europe." And here is a revelation cruel indeed: "In the select society here I have seen retired French restaurateurs, Italian confectioners, Dutch dairymen, Swedish bath proprietors, Austrian musicians, Irish politicians, and a host of others out of the whirlwind of commerce, whose only claim to position was their money. When these persons visit England, or return to their respective countries, they marvel much at the refusal of their betters to receive them nolens volens into the circle of refinement and culture which their money is expected to dazzle. They forget that the loud, self-assertive style which they affect is never seen in the proudest and richest of the noblemen and others whose homes they would enter." How angry this would have made us once!

—Perhaps the most curious feature of the present excitement over Bellevue Hospital is the utter lack of any novelty in the facts revealed. For years and years past it has been perfectly well known to thousands of New Yorkers that Bellevue patients were treated with a systematic severity that often and on slight excuse passed into downright cruelty, and the stories of extortion now told only duplicate other stories that have had fairly wide circulation for a long time. It was not this Winter, or last, that the nurses in the other hospitals, when a patient showed a disposition to be unruly or unnecessarily troublesome, found out that instant and complete docility could usually be secured by a judiciously expressed threat to send that patient to Bellevue. Nobody in the circle of whose acquaintances there are a few nurses of hospital experience will have any difficulty in discovering that all the members of the profession learned the utility of this menace early in their career and have since resorted to it whenever occasion arose. That they could do this does not, of course, prove that all the charges against Bellevue are true, but it does prove that the conditions recently disclosed were only the natural culmination of abuses the existence of which had been either known or strongly suspected by many people for many years. But quiet talk is one thing and open publication in the newspapers is quite another, so we now have demonstrations of fierce surprise over revelations that were no revelations at all to those at all informed on the subject. Really, it is only newspaper publicity that counts nowadays. The scandal which the newspapers overlook or refuse to exploit gives no serious trouble to those concerned—a phenomenon illustrated every day in cases in which reputations other than those of hospitals are involved. Ask the politicians here in New York if this is not true.

—In trying to account for the sudden turn in favor of the Boers which the war between them and Great Britain, at least in appearance, has now taken, it is well to keep in mind, not the relative strength of the two opponents, but the relative difficulty of the task which each is endeavoring to accomplish. The object of the British is to conquer the Boers; that of the Boers is not to conquer the British, but to avoid decisive defeat. Even in the conduct of seemingly offensive operations the Boers are really acting on the defensive, and though they are undoubtedly spending capital, while their antagonists are only spending income, yet their expenditure is trivial in comparison with that of the other side. If the Boers should succeed in maintaining their independence—a supposition which is turning, perhaps, from a wild absurdity to a faint possibility—it will be due, not to the fact that Great Britain could not carry through her plans, but to a realization on Great Britain's part that the game is not worth the candle. The argument of the pocket is a strong one, and Great Britain has been known, before now, to put her pride temporarily in that receptacle rather than consent to prolonged and serious drains upon its other contents. With the result which, despite the distinctly amusing triumph accorded to Gen. ROBERTS in London, may be preparing in South Africa, the United States is not unfamiliar. We ourselves have been quite content with the outcome of two wars in which we conquered, not our enemy, but the part of that enemy's total force which was all she deemed it judicious to send against us. The Boers lack wealth and numbers, but they have two strong allies—distance and a desert. As for their cause, it was a very bad one when defeat seemed certain, but everybody will hold it excellent in case of success. In morals that is not good theory, but it is good practice, and when theory and practice conflict, theory always comes out second best—or nowhere.

THE DISTRICT ATTORNEY—A CASE IN POINT.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The District Attorney holds the key to the situation in all efforts toward reform of abuses in the City of New York. Criminals will not reform themselves. Exposure they do not like, but they meet it with a low cynicism like the late Boss Tweed's—"It will soon blow over." And when, after the spasm of investigation and indignation has "blown over," they find a public lulled into complacent conceit over its own futility, the "crooks" take fresh heart and act more boldly than ever. No reform is possible without active, tireless, honest, impartial prosecution of offenders. Therefore I say that if Gov. Roosevelt had done nothing more for New York than the removal of Col. Gardiner, his name should be honored for a century in the metropolis. The criticisms of his act have surprised and, to a certain extent, amused me. Col. Gardiner's position had been as treasonable to law and order in New York as any of the Federal office holders who went over to the Confederacy at the outbreak of the civil war. His removal was, therefore, just and merited. But it was more; it was opportune.

There are signs on every hand of a great moral awakening in the city. Even Tammany we see forced to play the rôle of the angry scorpion, namely, to appoint a vice-hunting committee, whose work, if honestly performed, can only result in stinging Tammany to death. We have a Committee of Fifteen abroad getting ready for a crusade against law breaking in general and the league between official and professional criminals in particular. Such of us as know how enormous the task thus undertaken could not but fear that, with Col. Gardiner and his gang in the District Attorney's office, the movement was bound to fall of tangible results. Why? Because it is in the District Attorney's power to smother prosecutions outright, or else, if public opinion is too pressing for that, to put the cases in the way of being so misconducted that they will fall in the court of first resort, and it is not there, on appeal. This, you will say, is to charge very grave malfeasance in office. Alas! in a world of "easy virtue" such things do not pass by harsh names, and then it is often difficult to draw the line between mere want of heart in the work and a secret desire to see it frustrated. Let us put it at mere want of heart in the work of prosecuting Tammanyites as what we would expect from Col. Gardiner, and enough has been said. No need to charge anything more heinous to the hero of the phrase "To hell with reform!" nor need one, now that the Colonel is out, wish any similar fate to such a District Attorney as he proved. A man of balance, of vigor, of persistence is wanted in the office now.

Commissioner John W. Keller, at much risk to himself, has been unearthing and exposing a horrible state of affairs in the insane pavilion at Bellevue. Certain prosecutions will result. To the public and conviction is certain. In reality, nothing could be less so. With incompetency or unwillingness in the District Attorney's office the men charged with these monstrosities would go free. I have in mind a case in which I was once concerned. In the course of investigation a horrible state of affairs in the city insane asylums was laid bare. Fiendish cruelties by nurses, indifference by the doctors, snarling defiance by the heads of the institutions—were the chronic conditions. All the dismal array of brutalities, the choking, doping, striking, kicking, and knocking down which we read of now were then made known. At last we were enabled to fix upon a special case—one of hundreds, be it remembered. A wretched paretic had been done to death, his limbs and ribs broken, every cruelty and indignity practiced upon him. There was a conviction, be sure, but New York was not uneasy in its conscience at the time and paid little attention to it. True bills were found and a nurse held for trial. Here the District Attorney came in. Was the case pressed? Was it ably handled? Was there the slightest desire for a conviction? A doddering old man, without the ability to hold a chain of thought for ten seconds, was selected for the prosecution. A smart lawyer on the other side did what he pleased with the case. It was made to appear that those who had stood for the investigation were the real criminals; that the inhuman nurses were ministering angels—"a little rough, perhaps," but distinctly angels, and the unfortunate victim a wretch whom it was rather kindly to deprive of breath. There was an acquittal.

From that day on, as before that day, the same brutalities have been in operation wherever the humor or convenience of nurses or doctors suffer a check. Mr. Keller has not dug into an isolated case; he has simply entered a chamber of horrors that has been in operation for years.

You may judge, then, Mr. Editor, how necessary I esteem it that the District Attorney should be able and anxious for his work. If Mr. Philbin can cover the qualifications for the task before him great and lasting reforms may be reached early in the century. CIVIS.

DUTY IN THE CUDAHY CASE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your "Problem in Casuistry" (Dec. 28) is, as it seems to me, easily solved. The question is not what the average parent would do in such a case, but what should he do and why should he do it?

The circumstances of this kidnapping rendered it certain that if the crime was successful—as it has been so far—it was only the beginning of a series of kidnappings that would render it unsafe for the children of well-to-do parents to go out anywhere unless under a sort of armed escort. The duty in such a case was something more than to follow the promptings of parental affection. The crime had a very close relation to thousands of other parents whose children would be endangered, as well as it had to public morality, and for these reasons the demands of the kidnappers should not have been heeded no matter what the result to the victim.

It is hard to blame Mr. and Mrs. Cudahy, but looking at it calmly and with only an eye to the greatest good to the greatest number, their action was selfish, and can only be excused on the ground of parental affection. But to save their boy they have endangered the safety and happiness of thousands of children all over the land, because success in this crime will be sure of many imitators.

But they are not alone to blame. In resisting the demand for a ransom every rich man in the country should have joined with Mr. Cudahy in offering a reward to arrest and punish the kidnappers, even though it cost a million of dollars. A reward that would enrich the informer or the detectives who should run down the culprits would no doubt have proved successful. The "honor" of thieves, robbers, or kidnappers will not stand long before a reward that enriches them for doing a good act.

Kidnapping for a ransom is a sort of crime that, with a fair chance of success, would soon be immensely popular with the criminal classes. It is preferable to robbery or murder for the sake of robbery, or even to successful gambling. The ransom need not be limited to a paltry $25,000, but it could be made a million just as well, or any sum that the victim could draw from his bank in haste. The skillful leader of an organized gang could as easily dispose of a million in gold as the two or three men in the Cudahy case did of $25,000, weighing 105 pounds. Every parent victimized in this way would have the same excuse for paying the ransom that Mr. Cudahy had, and if threats of violence to the immediate victim were heeded the business would flourish and pay better even than a Tammany office.

As before stated, the rule to follow is not the dictates of affection merely, but the interests of the public at large; in other words, the greatest good to the greatest number. There is no mistaking what that is in a case like this. S. P.

SUGGESTION TO CHRISTIANS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of the call of the National Central Committee of the "Twentieth Century National Gospel Campaign" to special prayer for the evangelization of the world, may I make some suggestions?

It is a notorious fact that the real obstacle to the progress of the Gospel of Christ is principally the disregard of the teachings of Christ by the Church at large. Christendom is professing to believe in them, but there is not a Christian State that even professes to be guided by them in its relations with other States. Indeed, the history of the nineteenth century exhibits as utter a disregard of the principles of Christianity by all the kingdoms of the world as was shown by the nations of antiquity before Christ came. This is so notorious that it does not call for proof, though the treatment of China by Christendom for the last hundred years, the war in Africa, and our own treatment of Porto Rico and the Philippines may be cited as illustrations.

The internal government and social conditions of every nation, due to the principles upon which individuals habitually act, prove that men at large do not always practice the teachings of Christ in their relations toward each other. Self-interest is the freely acknowledged motive which governs the vast majority of even professing Christians, and most of them will express a naïve surprise if it is suggested that this is wrong, unless they are wrought to anger that any one should find fault with them. The slums of our large cities, the criminal disregard so often shown by employers for the welfare of their workmen, the carelessness with which we remain quiet and indifferent while children are compelled in thousands to grow up as criminals, is the proof.

The Church itself is the greatest scandal of all. Intended to be one in such a way that it should always be a standing witness to the world of the brotherhood of mankind and the real unity of all good men, it is split up into hundreds of sects, each governed in its relations to other sects by the common principles which actuate mankind, and each also split up and its strength paralyzed by internal disagreements on trivial points. Proclaiming love and good-will to all men, and preaching that these are the principles which should actuate and govern all men in their dealings with each other, it has not simply shut its eyes while they have been habitually disregarded, and never protested as a Church against such doings, in defiance of Christ's teachings, but has sanctioned appeals to war by nations, and condoned the adoption by individuals of self-interest as the law of business and private life.

Before Christ came with His teachings force was the recognized source of right, and war was the natural and normal state of society. His doctrines were intended to put an end to such a state of things, and every one admits that if they were put in practice generally, they would do so. Yet to-day wars of aggression and defense are as common as ever, and Christendom is in a fever of apprehension and unrest because of the conditions that prevail.

The words of St. Paul, in writing to certain people hundreds of years ago, have a singular applicability to the Church of the present day, and deserve careful attention from all who call themselves Christian men. (Romans, ch. 21-24.)

"Thou therefore that teachest another, teachest thou not thyself? Thou that preachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal? Thou that sayest a man should not commit adultery, dost thou commit adultery? Thou that abhorrest idols, dost thou commit sacrilege? Thou that makest thy boast of the law, through breaking the law, dishonorest thou God?"

"For the name of God is blasphemed among the Gentiles through you."

It cannot be denied that the greatest obstacle to the more general adoption of the principles of Christ and of the reception of the Gospel exists in the inconsistency between the principles and practice of those who call themselves Christian men. Heathen nations are justified in refusing to listen to nations who invade their shores with missionaries and Maxim guns, and, in the same breath, demand the surrender of their beliefs and of their lands.

It will doubtless be objected that the teachings of Christ, though very noble and lofty, are impracticable for humanity to adopt, that to do so would require a complete remodeling of society, for which we are not yet ready, and that we cannot see the way clear to put them wholly in practice. But if we cannot accept Christ's teachings ourselves, why, in the name of common sense, should we preach them to others? If we cannot organize our own state upon really Christian lines, why should we devastate China with fire and sword because she cannot do what we find impossible? Has Christendom ever given heathenism any practical evidence of the benefit of accepting Christianity?

In place of universal prayer for the extension of the Gospel it would be far more to the point that Christendom should confess that it has almost wholly failed to act upon the principles of Christ, and has continued to put in practice the very principles He condemned. Universal confession of this fact and the concentration of the efforts of all thoughtful men upon the discovery of the way in which Christendom can be made Christian is what is needed, and if we open the century with this, it cannot but be that a real stride will be made in its course toward its accomplishment.

There has never before been a time in the life of the world when such a thing was so possible. The failures of the past are so patent, the consciences of so many are aroused, the study of sociology has progressed so far, that if we are only willing to confess that as Christians we have wholly failed to do what we should have done, and sincerely begin to seek to find the way by which Christ's teachings may be genuinely adopted and then will apply all our energies to the work, no one can doubt that God will guide us ultimately to the full solution of the problem.

I do not wish to seem to ignore the large amount of private work done by devoted men and women for the betterment of society, though it must not be forgotten that many of these workers on the principles of Christ are not professors of Christianity as a religion. My point is that the time has come when the Church of God as a whole should confess that it has forgotten the principles of Christ and fallen back upon primitive and pagan social ideas, and should begin, with humiliation for the past and determination for the future, to live up to its calling, to seek to Christianize Christendom. When the Church has fairly begun this, there will be no need to pray for the evangelization of the world.

I cannot see any more than others how this is to be done, beyond what I have said. The first step is to recognize and confess that we have gone wrong, and then, with prayer to God for guidance and the strenuous use of all the helps available, to search out the way to amend.

I make the suggestion that, wherever Christianity is professed, the heads of all religious bodies should appoint a week of confession and humiliation for this purpose, with prayer that the Church may be guided by God into conformity with her Master's teachings. The last week of Lent, from March 31 to April 6, would be a natural time for the great majority of the Christian world. ERNEST C. SAUNDERS.

HENRY GEORGE'S LITERARY WORK

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial review of the achievements of the nineteenth century in to-day's issue more than repays for the time spent in its perusal. In your mention of great writers (Article XVI.) you have certainly overlooked a master mind. I refer to Henry George. Here is a man who has rendered to the human family a service than which there is none greater.

He has demonstrated in a logical and convincing (to thousands of persons) manner how involuntary poverty and the ignorance, vice, and crime that it breeds can be abolished by the adoption of a pre-eminently just and practicable system of taxation. What grander or nobler work can a man do for his fellows than to lead the way to the realization of a permanent industrial condition in which the wonderful achievements of the nineteenth and all future centuries may redound to the benefit, not of the privileged few only, but to all?

If his true worth as a writer and philosopher is recognized and appreciated at present only by a comparatively few men and women, it is safe to prophesy that before the close of this century the truths for which he lived and died will find practical expression in the laws of this and other nations. E. B. SWINNEY.

THE SPITTING NUISANCE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The ill-regulated, but on the whole, gentlemanly, dog has of late come in for a good deal of abuse at the hands and pens of those who write to THE TIMES. Yet I think I could show them a more offensive animal, and one whose offense carries less excuse with it.

Yesterday (Sunday) I rode down town on the Sixth Avenue elevated. At Thirty-third Street station there entered and sat down opposite to me (in the transverse seats) a person in a new overcoat and patent leather shoes and a silk hat of the vintage of 1900. Nothing was lacking to the completeness of his attire, even down to the crease in his trousers.

But scarce had the owner of this admirable outfit seated himself, when he began to make noisy attempts to remove catarrhal impediments from his throat, and to "expatiate" (as a friend of mine calls it) almost between my feet, and this, despite a legend put up in plain view by the Board of Health forbidding (in large capitals) any such thing. After many repetitions I was constrained to get up and seek another part of the car, out of sight, but not out of sound of this obnoxious ciotheshorse.

What are you going to do about it, Mr. Editor? I can suggest nothing, excepting the passing of a city ordinance forbidding the sale of silk hats in the latest style to anybody who has not passed a civil service examination testing his acquaintance with the various uses of a pocket handkerchief. If he cannot produce his certificate he ought to be compelled to buy a hat of the shape of the year before last. H. A. C.

Name for the Cup Defender.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The name of Eagle has been suggested for the yacht chosen to defend America's Cup. Why not American Eagle? From every point of view the name of the symbolical bird of freedom seems appropriate to the yacht which is to uphold the supremacy of the American over the English model. Will you not submit the question to readers of THE TIMES?

Another question in this connection: Why should there not be a limit to the time that America's Cup should be held for the English to compete for that particular trophy, say fifty years? After that time has elapsed let some other prize be offered to the winning yacht. In any race one vessel may have a stiff breeze while the other is becalmed. This often happens, and if there is no limit to the time the English might, during the twentieth century, carry off the cup by mere chance, without showing superior sailing qualities.

The coming contest promises to be especially interesting and exciting. May the best boat win. H. W. MEAD.

Street Cleaning and the Taxpayers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I quite agree with the arguments of THE TIMES and of its correspondents as to the abominably filthy condition of our streets, and have been of this opinion for the past few weeks. Any one with their eyes open can see that the streets in any locality are rapidly going back to the condition of ten years ago, and, as one of your correspondents says, it extends even to the walks in Central Park. What a strange anomaly that taxpayers, with the millions of dollars coming out of their pockets each year for this Street Cleaning Department, will sit supinely by and allow this robbery to go on, besides the inevitable spread of sickness and disease from the scattering of these germs by every gust of wind. Oh, for the time when some one besides this ex-head of Little Monte Carlo is Street Cleaning Commissioner of this city. TAXPAYER.

THE YEAR OF LOVE.

Folger McKinsey in Baltimore News.

The world-song sweetly swelling, the world-drums sounding far,
Proclaim the world-wide conquests underneath the battle-star;
The trumpets of achievement blow down the lordly years,
The victor counts his laurels and the conquered counts his tears;
But far away, sweet lady, their conquest-song above,
We count again the record of our own sweet year of love!

Blow, bugles of the morning, blow, trumpets of the night;
Ring, bells, that carol sweetly of the wonder and the might
Of years that roll in thunder down the broadening grooves of change,
We touch, dear heart, the lowly and the humble love-girt range;
By memories enhallowed, by tender dreams and true,
The wings of love have folded all their glory over you!

Men count the march of triumph, the armaments of law,
The sweep of circling navies and the deeds that thrill with awe;
The gavel marks the tablets of the temples with a name,
And the millions grow in hunger for the fleeting figment, Fame;
But we, Ah! love, the record of our love-year ends in this—
A sweetheart trust forever sealed forever with a kiss!

Go light the roaring cities with the splendor of a dream,
Pour out the shrieking marvels of the onward march of steam,
Rejoice in grown, sweet splendors of time's widening liberty—
The feeding of the hunger of the free that are not free—
But distant far, beholding in our quiet trust we go,
You and I, beloved, together, even so and even so!

Mighty marvels are they working in the workshops of the earth,
As the cycles burst to blossom in their world of wonder-birth;
But on that side go the trumpets and the far-lights and the dust,
While on this we two, together, in our old contented trust;
Our lane a lane of roses, with the little lips that wait
To be kissed as love can kiss the lips that linger at the gate!

There are wonders in a cottage that the great world passes by,
While the festal fires are burning red against the New Year sky;
There are little records counted and the sweet months one by one
Yield their memories of the moments bright with blossoms in the sun:
Oh! the year of tender loving—harvest record of them all,
And the trumpets [illegible] know it [illegible] across the world [illegible]

MR. SALTUS'S BRIEF WILL

Conciseness Result of Experience with His Father's Testament.

He Leaves Half His Estate to Various Institutions and Half to His Wife —Son Not Mentioned.

The will of Theodore Saltus, which was filed in the Surrogates' office yesterday, is one of the simplest testaments ever placed on record, considering the fact that it makes bequests to various institutions as well as providing for the widow of the testator.

The reason of the brevity of the document was the testator's own experience with litigation over a will. For over thirty years there was almost a continuous contest over the will of the testator's father and in his lifetime Theodore Saltus frequently said that his will would be so concise that there would be difficulty in contesting the same.

The will offered for probate is about 400 words in length, including all the necessary forms and the attestation of the witnesses By the will one-half of the testator's estate is divided equally between the American Bible Society, the Home Missions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, the American Tract Society, and the New York Association for the Improvement of the Condition of the Poor. The remainder of the estate is given absolutely to Susan E. Saltus, his wife.

Thomas H. Hubbard, President of the Houston and Texas Central Railroad Company, and an official of the Southern Pacific, is the executor under the will. Mr. Hubbard in his petition for probate sets forth the fact that he does not as yet know the exact value of the estate.

Mr. Saltus died at the Fifth Avenue Hotel on Christmas Day after a short illness from pneumonia. He was eighty years old. About fifty years ago he was in the iron business with his father, Francis Saltus The elder Saltus died in the early sixties leaving a large estate, which, under a very lengthy will, was divided among forty-five relatives. Theodore Saltus was made executor and trustee under the will and almost immediately the litigation began. Owing to the fact that he was a partner with his father in business, the other heirs objected to his acting as executor and trustee The various cases dragged along in the courts up to about eight years ago, when the entire estate was finally settled. During all these years Theodore Saltus devoted his entire time to the estate and did nothing else.

In his own brief will Mr. Saltus did not mention his only child, John Sanford Saltus, but this is not considered likely by those who know the facts to cause a contest.

The widow is an invalid, and is confined to her rooms at the Fifth Avenue Hotel. She came of a prominent Connecticut family, and is wealthy in her own right.

Mr. Hubbard, the executor named, said yesterday:

"I do not as yet know the value of the estate. In fact, my becoming an executor was somewhat of a surprise to me. I had seen very little of Mr. Saltus for several years, up to 1896, when he came into my office and asked me if I would serve as an executor of his will. I consented, believing that he would outlive me, and thought nothing more about the matter until I received word that he was dead and I was the executor of his estate."

Mr Hubbard was one of the counsel in the litigation over Theodore Saltus's father's will.

KOCH WILL CONTEST.

Henry G. K. Heath Asks That the Probate Be Set Aside.

Henry G. K. Heath has carried the contest over the will of Henry C. F. Koch into the Supreme Court. The will was admitted to probate in the Surrogates' Court after a contest, and now Mr. Heath wants the probate set aside. He applied to Justice Leventritt in the Supreme Court yesterday for an order of publication by which he could serve William A. Hume, an executor named under the will, who has not qualified, with the summons and complaint.

The complaint, which accompanies the order, sets forth that Henry C. F. Koch, the dry goods merchant of this city, died at Saratoga on Sept. 5 last, leaving a will by which his entire estate goes to his widow, Anna Katherine Koch, and their two children, Erduin Von Der Horst and William T. Koch. Mr. Heath is a child of Mr. Koch by his first wife, who was Lavina Heath. In 1887 Mr. Heath had the courts allow him to change his name from Koch to Heath. Some time previous to this he inherited considerable property from his mother's mother. He did not live with his father after the latter's marriage to Anna Catherine Scheeper in 1867, some six years after his own mother's death.

The chief contentions made in Mr. Heath's complaint are that he believes the will "was never executed by the said Henry C. F. Koch, in conformity with the requirements of law," and that it was signed by him, the signature was "procured by the fraud and undue influence of the defendants." Mr. Heath, in his affidavit, adds: "The intent and purpose of said Henry C. F. Koch in making a testamentary disposition of his property was overcome and destroyed, and the desires and purposes of the said defendants substituted therefor."

Robert A. Stewart, who is Mr. Heath's law partner, appears as attorney in the case and both he and Mr. Heath declared yesterday that when the case came up for trial it would be one of the most peculiar actions ever made public.

Among the contentions made when the Surrogate heard the testimony on the admission of the will to probate was the one that, as Mr. Heath had received a very liberal inheritance from his grandmother and had later taken her name, his father believed that his own estate should go to the second Mrs. Koch and the two children by her. The Surrogate, after the close of the testimony, gave his opinion verbally from the bench, admitting the testament to probate, declaring that Mr. Koch, when he signed the will, "possessed sufficient mental capacity to execute the instrument." The Surrogate also said that there was no proof of undue influence.

Charles J. McDermott, counsel for the heirs before the Surrogate, will represent them in the trial in the Supreme Court.

WILL OF JOSEPH L. SPOFFORD.

It Disinherits His Brother, Sister, and Sister-in-Law.

In the will of Joseph L. Spofford, which was filed for probate in the Surrogates' office yesterday, the testator devotes a special paragraph to the disinheriting of his sister, brother, and sister-in-law, for the reasons that they opposed him in certain litigation a number of years ago.

Mr. Spofford was in business as a merchant at 29 Broadway, and died at his home at Hunter's Point Road and Spofford Avenue, in the Borough of the Bronx, on Oct. 23 last. The value of the estate is not given in the petition accompanying the will, but it is said that he left considerable property.

The will is dated Dec. 12, 1892, and the testator names Pauline Pearsall, his sister; her husband, Thomas N. Pearsall, and Paul N. Spofford, his brother, as those who shall never get any portion of his estate, either for themselves or their children, for the reasons that "they made certain false and malicious charges against me." In a codicil to his will, Mr. Spofford announces the intention of marrying Cecelia Hains, and in a second codicil he changes all previous bequests in the will, and leaves his entire estate to his wife, Cecelia Hins Spofford and to his two children, Paul and Joseph E. Spofford.

Hiram Hitchcock's Funeral.

HANOVER, N. H., Jan. 3.—Funeral services of Hiram Hitchcock, late proprietor of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York, were held here to-day in College Church, and were very largely attended by professional men, the Dartmouth Faculty, and students from many places. President William J. Tucker of Dartmouth College had charge of the services, reading Scripture, offering prayer, and paying a high tribute to the deceased. The display of floral offerings was elaborate. In the mourners' seats were the Trustees of the Mary Hitchcock Memorial Hospital and nurses of the hospital. The burial took place in the cemetery here.

Cold Weather in Northern New York.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Jan. 3.—The thermometer here at daylight to-day registered 8 degrees below zero. At Malone it was 10 below; Dannemora, 13 below; Saranac Lake, 21 below; Paul Smith's, 25 below; Mc-Colton's, 26 below, and at Lake Placid at 10 o'clock this morning it was still 28 below. There is nearly three feet of snow on this section, but at Port Henry, fifty miles south of here, there is not a particle of snow.

MUSIC AND MUSICIANS.

Mr. de Reszke's Ordeal in "Lohengrin" —Notes of Musical Doings.

When Jean de Reszke was preparing to float down the painted Scheidt in a papier mache shallop drawn by a stuffed swan on Monday night at the Metropolitan Opera House he was not thinking of anything but the generous public which was waiting to welcome him. He stood in the boat and gritted his teeth and murmured over and over again to himself: "I must not notice the welcome; I must not notice it; I must sing, I must sing." For he knew that if he permitted himself for one instant to think of the great public heart that was going out to him he would be so shaken with emotion that a steady and sustained musical tone would be out of the question. And if the first notes sung by him on the Metropolitan stage, after the stories of London last Summer, should be quavering, the verdict would be that the stories were true. It would not matter how well he might sing afterward, all the croakers would say: "The voice is not what it used to be." And so the artist had to hold himself in mighty check and seem cold to a wonderful reception lest by allowing himself to throb responsive to it he might wreck his career at a critical point. This is not speculation; it is history.

And while Mr. de Reszke was thus comporting himself, what were others doing? Well, Brother Edouard was vainly trying to control his voice, and when Jean went down to salute him as King he saw the stalwart basso's cheeks wet with tears. Mme. Nordica, who is a good friend of the de Reszkes, could not sing a note in the first half of the first act, but generally behaved herself like a prima donna of a second-rate Italian opera house. But when she saw that Jean was master of himself and of the public she rejoiced, and during the rest of the performance she was constantly murmuring to him, "Bravo, Jean." And she sang the remainder of her part as one inspired. In the chamber scene she rose to unwonted heights. She never before sounded so firmly the notes of deep feeling as she did then.

Even the stage hands and the members of the orchestra were affected with the excitement of the occasion. It is a fact that in the early part of the performance the players of the wood wind in the orchestra could not control their breath, and some technical slips ensued for that reason. But in the auditorium, behind the brass rail at the rear of the orchestra, every tenor (not of the company) who could reach the opera house was lined up waiting to see the breakdown of their master. When he was found to be all right in the first act they declared that he would not last through the second, and at the end of that they vowed that the chamber scene would finish him. And even at the end of that scene there were persons in the house doubtful as to whether he would be able to finish the performance. As for the professional critics, they had little doubt of the outcome. Those who know and understand Jean de Reszke rested their faith upon the fact that he knows more about technic in singing than any one else on the stage, and that he was practically incapable of making such a mistake as to come to America after his voice had gone. So when they heard him intone the farewell to the swan they smiled with quiet satisfaction and settled themselves in their chairs for an evening of genuine delight.

Startling information continues to arrive by way of London. It is now announced by The Daily Mail that the Paris Grand Opera is to have an elevator. In making this announcement the paper states that the Metropolitan Opera House of this city has had an elevator for years. It has. It has had three of them, but we could hardly expect an English newspaper man to believe that. Nevertheless, the opera house has three elevators, and, what is more, it was born with them.

Mr. Paderewski, the great pianist, is not dead. An anxious friend in this city tried very hard to have him killed in a duel in Paris a few days ago, but the habitual employment of transatlantic cable dispatches by the daily newspapers spoiled the good friend's plan. And now Mr. Paderewski, who does not know that he is dead, and is apparently unaware of the attempt to make way with him, uses the cable himself. He has cabled a private new year's greeting to the writer of this department of THE TIMES. It was not for publication, nor even as an evidence of continued existence. Still, it may serve for the latter.

All of the seats for the first series of performances of "Der Ring des Nibelungen" at Baireuth have already been sold, though the performances will not take place till June 25-28. It is said that there are few German visitors to the sacred shrine of Wagnerism now, as most of the pilgrims are English and Americans. Whether "Der Ring" will be given at the Metropolitan this Winter is not yet certain. If it is it should be offered on the regular subscription nights. The public is pretty well tired of having this series of tragedies made an extra expense to it.

It is fifty years since "Lohengrin" was first performed at Weimar, under the baton of Liszt, and a commemorative representation of the opera has just taken place at the Weimar Opera House. The opera was given without cuts, and lasted five hours. Frau Rose de Milde, the original Elsa, but now a very aged lady, was present, together with the composer's son Siegfried.

M. Massenet has written a new suite, which it is hoped will speedily be available for our orchestras. It really forms the incidental music to Racine's "Phèdre," and the overture was composed as far back as 1874, but M. Massenet has now added entr'actes, and the music is said to be in his best manner.

The Chicago Tribune, in an amiable and well-written review of the performances of the Metropolitan English Grand Opera Company, notes the ridiculous English employed in the translations of the libretti. The writer very properly argues that opera in English cannot attain permanent popularity until the audiences hear poetic text when the singers permit them to hear any at all. When the company was performing in this city we made frequent comment on the stupidity of the English texts, and expressed a belief that their character would go far toward preventing the success of the organization. It would certainly be incorrect to attribute its failure wholly to this cause, but it has had a potent influence in bringing on the disastrous end of the season. So long as such poor English texts are employed we may congratulate ourselves that at the Metropolitan we now hear the operas with their original words. For the singing of French operas in French, Italian in Italian, and German in German we have to thank Mr. Jean de Reszke, who first urged Mr. Grau to this plan.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

William Collier has made arrangements whereby he will be under the management of Jacob Litt after the present season, a contract covering a term of years having been signed yesterday.

Another version of "Quo Vadis" is to be presented in this city next week, when the American Theatre Stock Company will be seen in a dramatization of Henryk Sienkiewicz's novel.

Signor Enrico Toselli, the Italian pianist, is a passenger on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiserin Maria Theresa, which is due here to-morrow. Signor Toselli will make his first appearance in this country at an afternoon recital to be given at Carnegie Hall on Jan. 15.

Miss Marie Dressler's engagement of "Miss Prinnt" at the Victoria has been limited to two weeks from next Monday night, after which Mathews & Bulger's attraction now playing in Boston, "A Night Before the Fourth," will be presented for the first time in this city.

All the new scenery for "The Climbers," Clyde Fitch's new play, which Amelia Bingham will present at the Bijou Theatre Jan. 15, has been painted by Ernest Albert and Joseph Physioc. Wednesday the new scenery was set up for the first time, and, after a critical examination, was accepted by the management.

A motion entered by Heinrich Conried, manager of the Irving Place Theatre, to prevent M. Witmark & Sons of this city from handling the comic operas of the late Johann Strauss, which was to have been argued before Judge Blanchard in Part I. of the Supreme Court to-day, was yesterday withdrawn by the counsel for the plaintiff.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

The clear crisp weather of the last few days has made country life so enjoyable that many of the people who went out of town to the country clubs and to join house parties in the suburbs for the new year's holidays have not yet returned, and would remain through the week were it not for the Whitney ball to-night. The skating continues good at Tuxedo, and by to-day there will be good skating at Meadow Brook and Westchester.

***

The incidents of to-day will include a coming out reception to be given by Mrs. Henry Ashton Crosby of 20 Washington Square to introduce Miss Beatrice Crosby; a reception by Mrs. W. Storrs Wells and her daughter, Miss Natalie Wells, and in the evening a dance by Mrs. David Morrison for her daughters, the Misses Morrison; a meeting of Mrs. Snedeker's dancing class at Sherry's. The great event of the day, or rather evening, as well as of the Winter season, will be the ball to be given by William C. Whitney for his niece, Miss Helen Tracy Barney, at his Fifth Avenue palace this evening. Mrs. John Jacob Astor will also give to-night a second large dinner, from which her guests will go to the Whitney ball.

The week at Tuxedo continues to be gay. On Wednesday evening Mrs. Kane organized a cotillion for the younger set, in which Miss Violet Cruger, Miss Cynthia Roche, Miss Sibyl Kane, and Miss Barbara and Miss Eleanor Sedley received much attention. The skating is excellent, but thus far there has been no tobagganing. Every room in the main clubhouse, the Winter clubhouse, the annexes, and the bachelors' quarters was taken over New Year's. Contrary to the first reports, which were to the effect that the most valuable of the Mortimer belongings were saved from the fire which destroyed their villa on New Year's Day, it is now stated that Mr. Mortimer lost an extremely valuable collection of old and rare first editions and some beautiful paintings.

The first of the two dinner dances organized by Mrs. J. Frederick de Peyster and J. Montgomery Strong, assisted by a number of others, took place at Delmonico's last evening. The hostesses, who were the thirty-one patronesses, received their respective guests in the red room. Dinner was served in the large ballroom, at tables seating eight and sixteen, respectively, as some of the patronesses preferred combining and entertaining at large tables rather than singly at small ones. A number of men were also asked in for the dance following the dinner. As the invitations named 7:30 as the hour for dining, most of the company were seated by 8 o'clock. The rooms had the usual decorations of palms and potted plants. J. Montgomery Strong, James R. Pierson, Vail Stebbins, and A. F. Ashton de Peyster were the stewards, and arranged the tables and seated the guests. The dinner was over a little before 10, and the large ballroom was then cleared, and the cotillion began about 10:30. It was led by Alexander Hadden, who danced alone. The favors for the one favor figure were straw baskets filled with vari-hued artificial flowers and tied with ribbons for the women, while the men were decorated with ribbons, from which were suspended enameled pendants, hearts, &c., to match the flowers in color. The dance was not a late one, and supper was served about 12:30, so that the guests had gone before 2 A. M. Mrs. F. J. de Peyster and Mrs. Woodbury Langdon entertained as their guests the Misses Sophie Langdon, Augusta and Ella de Peyster, Marion Fish, Bertha Wurts, Miss Gardiner, and Alexander Hadden, H. E. The Astor Gallery of the Astoria was crowded yesterday afternoon with a large and fashionable audience to hear the first production under the direction of Victor Harris of a new song cycle, entitled "The Daisy Chain," or a series of children's songs by Robert Louis Stevenson, Alma Tadema, and other poets, set to music by Miss Liza Lehmann. This cycle was sung by a quartet made up of Mrs. Seabury C. Ford, Miss Marguerite Hall, Mackenzie Gordon, and Myron Whitney, Jr. The new song cycle, written, in the same form as "The Persian Garden," while different in character and contents, has been composed with the same rare appreciation of the sentiment of the verses which characterizes Miss Lehmann's setting of the exquisite quatrains of FitzGerald from Omar Khayyam's "Rubaiyat." Of the selections in the cycle, perhaps those which will have the greatest popularity, if not fame, and which most impressed the cognescenti in the audience yesterday, were the quartet "The Foreign Children," "Little Indian, Sioux or Crow," by Robert Louis Stevenson, the baritone solo, "Keepsake Mill," also by Stevenson; the quartet "Seeing the World," from "Little Men and Women"; the soprano solo, "If No One Ever Marries Me," by Alma Tadema, and the tenor solo, "The Stars," by Stevenson. Before the "Daisy Chain" the old and popular "In a Persian Garden" was sung, and received with rapturous applause by the audience, by the original quartet, made up of Mrs. Ford, Miss Hall, Mr. Gordon, and David Bispham. David Mannes, the violinist, also played several selections. The "Daisy Chain" will be sung by the quartet that rendered it yesterday at Miss Callendar's and Miss de Forest's on Sunday afternoon.

VANDERBILT-FRENCH WEDDING.

Cottages Already Secured Will Not Accommodate All the Guests.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, Jan. 3.—Additional accommodations for the guests of the Vanderbilt-French wedding are being sought. Three small cottages are required in addition to the Muenchinger, King, and Hill Top cottages, Hartmann's, and other places already engaged. The Breakers will be ready for the reception of Mrs. Vanderbilt and her family during the early part of next week. She is expected to arrive about Tuesday.

Harbourview, the home of Mrs. French, is in excelent condition, and all that remains to complete the interior for the ceremony is the work of the floral decorators. The Christmas decorations at St. John's Church will all be removed early next week, when the decorators will begin work. Their material will arrive in the special cars from New York. It was intended originally to use the decorations used during the Christmas services, with the additional decorations from New York, but this has been changed so that all the decorations will be entirely fresh.

There is a possibility that Gen. Eaton, brother-in-law of Miss French, will be recalled to England at any time, owing to the fact that he is one of the leading committeemen having charge of the reception which is to be tendered by the British Government to the Colonial troops returning from South Africa.

Organist Boone of St. John's Church has completed a portion of the musical programme to be rendered at the wedding. The wedding march will be that of Mendelssohn, which Miss French personally selected. The full choir of the church, numbering thirty voices, will assist in the musical portion of the services. The programme of music thus far selected is: Festival prelude in E flat, Guilraud; serenade, Schubert; "O Perfect Love!" Jeffery; Coronation March, from "Le Prophète," Meyerbeer; Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin," Wagner; Wedding March, Mendelssohn.

Presents continue to arrive in large numbers.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Everett Frazar.

Everett Frazar, Consul General for Korea to the United States, died yesterday at his home, 81 High Street, Orange, N. J. Mr. Frazar was born in 1834 at Duxbury, Mass. He sailed from Boston for Shanghai, China, in 1858, and there established the firm of Frazar & Co. A branch of the firm was later opened in Nagasaki, Japan, and still another in Hongkong. The firm originally dealt in silks, straw, tea, petroleum, and cotton goods, but was recently engaged in the introduction of electric lighting in Japan and China.

In 1883, while on his way from San Francisco to Yokohama aboard the Pacific Mail steamship City of Peking, Mr. Frazar met Gen. Lucius H. Foote, the first-appointed United States Minister to Korea. Through Gen. Foote's recommendations to the King of Korea, seconded by Prince Min Yonk, Korean Minister to the United States, Mr. Frazar was appointed by the King as Consul General for Korea in the United States.

In September, 1888, Mr. Frazar received from the King of Korea special marks of recognition for services rendered to Korea. Gold and jade decorations were sent him, and with them a special decree conveying the honorary title of Ka Sun Tai Poo, Korean nobleman of the second rank.

From 1872 to the present time Mr. Frazar had been the resident partner in New York of Frazar & Co., Shanghai and Yokohama, and since 1878 he had resided with his family in Orange, N. J. In 1878 Mr. Frazar married Miss Ellen H. Lindsley of Dorchester, Mass. The family consists of his widow, a son, Everett W. Frazar, and two daughters.

Thomas C. Smith.

Thomas C. Smith, proprietor of the Union Porcelain Works, died yesterday at his home, 140 Milton Street, Brooklyn, after an illness of two months. He was born at Bridgehampton, L. I., eighty-five years ago. The old homestead on which he was born was purchased from the Shinnecock Indians nearly a century ago. When very young Mr. Smith came to New York and became apprenticed to a builder. In 1830 he entered into business for himself. He built the queer-shaped stone structure near Yonkers in which Edwin Forrest lived when at leisure.

At the outbreak of the civil war Mr. Smith was compelled to take a little porcelain factory in Greenpoint for debt. In order to master the work he visited Europe and commenced a thorough investigation of the art. As a result of his application he manufactured goods that equaled those produced by the leading factories of France and England. To-day the Union porcelain plant covers nearly a block. Fort twenty-five years or more Mr. Smith was President of the Ophthalmic Hospital and College of New York, and was the confrère of the late ex-Gov. Roswell P. Flower. He was also one of the organizers of the Seventeenth Ward Bank and its President for four years. He helped to organize the Manufacturers' Insurance Company, and was a Director and Trustee on the Building Committee of the Grant Monument Committee. A wife, one son, and three daughters survive him.

Col. Huntington Wolcott Jackson.

Col. Huntington Wolcott Jackson, one of the foremost lawyers of Chicago and a member of the old Jackson family of Newark, N. J., died in Newark yesterday morning of apoplexy. He had been in ill-health for some time, and had practically abandoned his active life when he came East from Chicago two years ago. Col. Jackson's law firm was Lyman & Jackson, and under that title was the oldest law partnership in Chicago. It was changed a few years ago to Jackson, Busby & Lyman.

In the course of his life in Chicago he filled many positions of public and private trust with honor. He made a brilliant record for himself in the civil war, taking a commission in 1862 and leaving the service when the struggle was ended with the brevet rank of Lieutenant Colonel. The funeral will be held in Newark Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

Bishop W. X. Ninde.

DETROIT, Jan. 3.—Bishop W. X. Ninde, aged sixty-eight years, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was found dead in his bed at his home here to-day. It is thought the cause of death was heart disease. He attended a funeral yesterday and caught a cold. The deceased had been a Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church since 1884, and was known throughout the United States. Prior to his election as a Bishop he was pastor of the Central Methodist Episcopal Church here, and was at one time a missionary in India. He leaves a wife, three sons, and one daughter. A DINNER TO JOHN FORD

Ex-Senator's Successor Acts as Toastmaster.

Loving Cup Is Presented and Speeches on Civic Duty Are Made.

At a dinner given in his honor at the Hotel Savoy last night ex-Senator John Ford was presented with a handsome silver loving cup. The dinner was given to Senator Ford by his Republican friends of the Nineteenth Senate District, which he represented at Albany for five years. It was at the close of his legislative career that his friends decided to show their appreciation of his work. Senator Ford's successor, Samuel S. Slater, was one of the prime movers, and acted as toast master at the banquet. Nearly all of the prominent Republican of the district were present.

The cup presented to Mr. Ford is 10 inches high and inscribed:

To John Ford from his admirers and constituents for his untiring energy and brilliant record as a legislator, Jan. 3, 1901.

The presentation speech was made by Philip Bloch, Secretary of the Board of City Magistrates. He spoke of Mr. Ford's excellent record at Albany.

Toastmaster Slater, in a short speech, paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Ford, saying that he belonged to the true American aristocracy—the aristocracy of character. He also spoke of the guest of honor's career as a legislator, and said that, as his successor, he would try to emulate the example set by Mr. Ford. Mr. Bloch's speech, presenting the loving cup, was next. In responding, the guest of honor said that the token was especially dear to him, coming, as it did, after he had retired from public life. Mr. Ford's speech was in part as follows:

"If I were to name the lesson which has been mostly deeply impressed upon my mind by my five years' experience in the Legislature, I should say it was this—there is an irrepressible conflict on between the rural sections and the large cities of the State. This situation has already attracted no little attention among thinking men, and is rapidly becoming acute. I believe that if New York City had practically unlimited powers of local government, such as are granted by Great Britain to her municipalities, it would solve its municipal problems even more satisfactorily than they have been solved abroad. If our people were cut loose from Albany, so far as their purely domestic affairs are concerned, they would soon learn to put their house in order and keep it so. Under our present crude system, New York City, which pays upward of 60 per cent. of State taxes and sends a couple of million dollars annually to support schools in other parts of the State, is governed from Albany by the rural counties, which almost without exception receive from the State directly, in school moneys and otherwise, more than they pay in taxes to the State.

"The State must control the militia, the judiciary, public education, elections, and the like. Outside of these sovereign functions, we must insist upon the right to manage our own affairs in our own way. No mere charter from the Legislature will suffice. What we want is a full and ample measure of local self-government ingrafted into the Constitution, so that our cherished interests and sacred rights shall be placed beyond the whim and caprice of the rural legislator, whose education, associations, and habits of life wholly unfit him to understand or intelligently deal with a densely crowded population like ours.

"Crying evils exist here. Official corruption is far too prominent, and the interests of the public too often subordinated to the greed and venality of our public servants. I seek not to excuse them, much less to defend them. On the contrary, I hold it is the bounden duty of every citizen to work unceasingly and with all the power and influence at his command to eradicate them. There is civic virtue enough in this town to overcome all these. When Abraham Lincoln declared his faith in the plain people he meant just such people as inhabit New York to-day."

William Scherrer, manager of the New York Clearing House, and a Presidential Elector, was the next speaker. He took exception to Mr. Ford's speech in the part relating to the divorcing of the State and City of New York. "Like Senator Ford," said Mr. Scherrer, "I believe in the virtues of the people of New York City. But we had a little self-government once. That was in the time of Tweed, and I think the people will remember it for some time to come. I believe in watching the cat. New York City is great, but the Empire State is greater."

The Rev. Dr. Peters was the next speaker. He said that the district in which he lived was greatly indebted to Senator Ford for what he had done for them, especially in connection with the Amsterdam Avenue railroad matter. "He showed his worth as a man," said Dr. Peters, "in his stand in the franchise tax matter. In this he jeopardized his political life by the position he took, but he never swerved for a moment in his purpose."

TO FIGHT MORTGAGE TAX.

Missouri Real Estate Men Say It Has Hurt Business.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 3.—Seventy-five real estate and loan agents from different parts of Missouri met here to-day and organized an association to fight the third amendment to the Constitution of the State placing a tax on mortgages. The amendment, which was adopted at the last election, has, according to the assertion of the members of the association, made outside capital so cautious that the number of loans made since has been reduced greatly, and the rate of interest increased 1½ to 2 per cent.

The loan men say that indirectly the amendment has decreased the value of farm property and other securities because it its having created a demand for greater security for loans. A fight against the amendment will be made through the Supreme Court if the proper proceedings can be instituted.

Cave-In Kills a Laborer.

John Marretto of 267 Morris Avenue was killed last night by the cave-in of an embankment of a trench he and other laborers had dug at Kingwood and Fox Streets, in the Bronx. The work had stopped when Marretto jumped into the excavation for a pick he had left behind. The vibration as he landed disturbed the earth of one side and it caved in, burying him out of sight. It took five minutes to dig the man out, and he was suffocated by the time he was rescued.

STOCKHOLDER SUES RAILROAD.

H. P. Scott Wants Dividends on His Baltimore and Ohio Preferred Stock.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 3.—Henry P. Scott of Wilmington, Del., instituted proceedings in the Circuit Court to-day against the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company to enjoin the company from paying to the holders of the common stock of the corporation a dividend of 2 per cent., due on March 1, 1901, until a dividend shall be declared in favor of him and the other holders of preferred stock.

His claim is for a proportion of all net earnings of the company during the year ended June 30, 1900, appropriated to dividends in excess of 4 per cent. on the preferred stock.

The bill of complaint also asks that the company be enjoined from hereafter declaring any dividend upon the common stock out of future net earnings until a dividend of 4 per cent. upon the preferred stock, out of the net earnings for each year, shall have been declared; also, until a further dividend on the preferred shares in excess of the 4 per cent. dividend shall have been declared pro rata with that declared upon the common stock.

It is claimed that the Board of Directors had appropriated money with which to pay the March dividend on the common stock, but failed to provide funds for the dividend on the preferred stock, due at the same time.

TO DROP FAST FREIGHT LINES.

Railroads Find Them Responsible for Much Rate Cutting.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Jan. 3.—Fast freight lines will probably be abolished or their number greatly diminished as a result of the "community ownership" or amalgamation of interests that has lately taken place among the big railroad interests in this country. The discontinuance of ticket commission payments was the first step taken by the amalgamated interests to stop the worst evil from which passenger affairs have been suffering.

While it was an economic measure, saving the railroads millions of dollars spent for merely securing the neutrality of ticket agents, yet the main object was to secure stability in rates by affording an opportunity to use the commission to cut the rates, and thus engender strife and war among the railroads. This first measure of the big combine has proved an unqualified success.

The conclusion has lately been reached that the large number of practically fast-freight lines now maintained by the railroads of this country are mainly responsible for the constant demoralization of freight rates, it being almost impossible to prevent the agents of these lines from cutting the rates. The conviction seems to have taken ground that if these fast-freight lines were wiped out, or amalgamated so as to be able to control them, the same results would be accomplished as were reached by abolishing commissions.

The plan now proposed is to have in each city or shipping point one man to represent all the different roads. The joint agent at each shipping point is to see that each road he represents will receive a proportional share of the business.

DISCUSS WESTERN FREIGHTS.

Officials Are Satisfied That No Rate Cutting Exists.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 3.—Executive officials of Western and Northwestern railroad lines held a conference here to-day for the purpose of considering the freight rate situation. Nearly all the lines centreing at St. Louis, Chicago, Kansas City, and St. Paul were represented. Stuart R. Knott, President of the Kansas City Southern, acted as Chairman. A number of traffic representatives were in attendance, and made replies to questions asked them as to the maintenance of rates. The executive officials were assured that no rate cutting had been indulged in on any of the Western trunk lines, and that unusual precautions had been taken to prevent any demoralization during the present year.

Chairman Knott expressed himself after the conference as being entirely satisfied with the present situation. He said no resolutions had been adopted, as they were not deemed to be necessary. Representatives of the various committees reported progress in their work, and everything pointed to a prosperous outlook.

Great Northern to Use Crow's Nest Coal.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. PAUL, Jan. 3.—To-day Mr. Hill of the Great Northern Railway had a conference with Senator Cox, J. E. Ross, Elias Rogers, and Major Pellatt of Toronto, owners of immense coal fields in the Crow's Nest District of British Columbia. The purport of the conference was to arrange with Mr. Hill for his control of part of the coal for the extension of the Great Northern into the Crow's Nest District, and probably further west in British Columbia. Mr. Hill has been over the district, and is satisfied that the coal is the best he can get for his railway.

ENGINE WRECKS TROLLEY CAR.

Five Passengers More or Less Bruised in Accident on Webster Avenue.

Five passengers were shaken up and more or less bruised in a collision late yesterday afternoon at Webster Avenue and Moshulu Parkway between a trolley car and a locomotive used on the Jerome Park Reservoir work. The car was completely wrecked. It contained four men and one woman—Mrs. L. Goodchild of Bedford Park. She was taken out and after being attended by a physician went to her home, a few blocks away. Neither the motorman nor the conductor was injured.

A flagman, Thomas Mulvey, is stationed at the crossing, but it could not be learned last night who is responsible for the accident.

Railway Train Blown from the Track.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—A report has reached here from Reno, Nevada, that a train on the Nevada, California and Oregon Railway north of Reno was blown from the tracks and several passengers injured.

Golf Notes of Interest.

Jack Park, the golf professional of the Essex County Country Club, Orange, sails for his home in Musselburg, Scotland, this week, where he will remain until Spring. This is the first visit he has made to his home since coming to America several seasons ago.

The open golf championship of Great Britain will be held this year at Muirfield on June 5 and 6. The amateur championship will be held somewhat earlier, on May 7, at St. Andrew's, Scotland. It is quite probable that America may be represented in the latter event.

The Lakewood Golf Club will continue through the season its weekly Saturday open handicaps, which were so popular last year. The golf season in that resort is now fairly under way, and many local players take advantage of these Lakewood competitions for additonal practice during the Winter.

Wintry weather is causing no cessation of golf activity in Baltimore. The members of the Elkridge Hunt Club are giving tournaments on every holiday, and they are generally well patronized. On New Year's Day there were three competitions, one being a mixed foursome, in which many women took part. C. H. Gasty and J. Pennington survived to the final round for the special New Year's Cup, and they will play off the concluding round this week.

The full ticket, which has been placed in nomination by the Chicago Golf Club, of which Charles B. Macdonald is to retire from all official connection, is: President—Robert S. McCormick; Vice President—Alan L. Reid; Treasurer—D. Mark Cummings; Secretary—Charles W. Hamil; Directors—Theodore Sheldon, S. H. Graves, Dwight W. Bowles, W. H. Comstock, B. M. Wilson, and the officers. The election will be held on Jan. 19. Mr. Macdonald holds the Presidency now, but owing to his permanent residence in New York, he will cease, hereafter, to be identified with Western golf interests.

William Waller, the Western golf champion, in a recent discussion on golf, criticises some of our Eastern courses as follows: "A criticism I have made of Eastern courses, notably Lakewood, and, to a lesser degree, Garden City, is that the greens are not sufficiently protected. Pit bunkers and cops guarding the greens are so general on Western courses that it is something of a novelty when one goes East and finds championship courses where players can use a putter 100 yards from the hole without fear of punishment. The mashie pitch is one of the prettiest shots in golf, and I believe it is one of the spectacular points of the game which should be encouraged."

CHAMPIONSHIP HOCKEY

New York and Brooklyn Teams Played a Tie Game.

EACH SIDE MADE FOUR GOALS.

The Contest In St. Nicholas Rink Last Night Was Fast from Start to Finish.

Closely fighting for every slight advantage, and constantly furnishing brilliant and spectacular hockey, the sevens of the St. Nicholas and Brooklyn Skating Clubs last evening played a tie game at the St. Nicholas Rink. The score was 4—4, and, as the contest was one of the championship series, it will have to be played over again. Both sevens were so evenly matched that in the main features of their play there was scarcely anything to choose between them. Individually, the forwards of Brooklyn were a trifle faster than those of St. Nicholas, but the local team had a tremendous advantage in the superiority of its defense, especially during the first half.

The game was an excellent one to watch, and until the very last moment of play the result was in doubt. While the contest was very fast, it did not call forth any particularly effective team work, as both sevens had to depend on the individual prowess of their players.

Very shortly after the face-off Conway got the puck in a corner and dodging Post and Jennison slammed the disk into the net. The score encouraged St. Nicholas and stimulated Brooklyn. A lifting match followed after the opening tally, and Conway, in attempting to repeat his feat, shot wide. St. Nicholas at this point was having the better of the game, and kept the rubber hovering dangerously close to the visitors' goal. Livingston, in a sharp scrimmage, fell heavily on his head, sustaining a nasty scalp wound, which had to be sewed up at the conclusion of the game. He pluckily resumed play, however, and staid until the finish. Brooklyn began to brace up, and scores were narrowly averted by Hayward's prompt work. K. Gordon, on a speedy pass from Conway, scored the second goal for St. Nicholas. Brooklyn then showed its first aggressive tactics, and Kennedy smashed the puck against Hayward, who checked the instrument for a second, but failed to keep it out of the net. Jennison got the puck on Gordon's shoot and carried it down the whole length of the ice, where on a sure pass Williams tied the score. K. Gordon then accomplished some magnificent work, and in quick succession shot a goal from the centre of the rink, which McKenzie failed to notice, much less stop. Liffiton, on clever individual work, again tied the score, but K. Gordon, on an exact repetition of his previous feat, tallied the last goal of the half, bringing the score to 4—3 in favor of St. Nicholas.

The second half afforded Brooklyn a chance to manifest a considerable superiority, and they scored the only goal of the period. They were far more aggressive, desperate, and dashing than the St. Nicholas players, who were fairly tired out. Williams got the one score of the period. The line-up:

St. Nicholas S. C., 4.	Position.	Brooklyn S. C., 4.
Hayward	Goal	McKenzie
Mortimer	Point	Post
Livingston	Cover Point	Jennison
Callender	Forward	Murray
K. Gordon	Forward	Liffiton
Conway	Forward	Kennedy
Walton	Forward	Williams

Goals—Scored by K. Gordon, 3; Conway, 1; William, 2; Kennedy, 1; Liffiton, 1. Referee—William Dobby, Crescent Athletic Club. Time of game—Twenty-minute halves.

Yale Hockey Team Defeated.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Jan. 3.—In the second game of a series of four to be played with teams of the Western Pennsylvania Hockey League, Yale was defeated by Duquesne to-night by the score of 5 to 1. Yale was outplayed at every point. The game last night with the Bankers resulted: Yale, 5; Bankers, 5.

Dr. Mial's High Billiard Run.

Dr. L. L. Mial was the victor last night in the fourteen-inch balk-line billiard tournament at the Knickerbocker Athletic Club. He beat Albro Atkin, scoring the required 300 points in 53 innings to 185 for Atkin in 52 innings. Dr. Mial broke all previous records for the present billiard season by making the highest single run yet recorded, 63 points. Charles S. Norris, who won the Knickerbocker championship last week, made a run of 62, and Dr. A. B. Miller made one of 61. Dr. Mial's average, however, was not so high as made by Norris in some of his games. The game this evening will be between Dr. A. B. Miller and John A. Hendrick.

The scores were:

Dr. L. L. Mial—0 2 3 16 0 16 0 0 0 0 1 2 3 0 2 1 1 0 0 8 8 9 0 4 0 10 2 13 2 1 14 7 2 11 0 0 4 6 3 4 11 0 4 1 0 2 14 4 0 0 14 1 0 31 2 6. Total, 300; average, 5 32-53; highest single run, 63.

Albro Atkin—0 3 0 16 0 0 9 0 4 0 2 1 1 9 0 2 4 0 1 0 0 25 0 1 0 2 7 8 7 5 4 10 0 0 7 0 2 6 2 1 13 2 2 2 4 2 1 0 0 2 1 0. Total, 185; average, 3 29-52; highest single run, 25.

Gymkhana Sports on Ice.

The gymkhana sports on the ice at the Clermont Avenue Rink, Brooklyn, last night furnished lots of fun for the many spectators who were present. The three-lap foot race, in which the competitors, with ordinary street shoes on, ran and tried their best to keep their feet on the turns, was particularly ludicrous. C. Garton of the Clermont Hockey Team beat G. Blossom, who led all the way, by the narrowest of margins. Harry P. McDonald of the New York Athletic Club won the potato race on skates, and Peter Sinnlurd, the Norwegian, skated an exhibition mile in good time, paced by McDonald. Summary:

Potato Race, Fifty Yards, Six Potatoes, Four Yards Apart.—Won by Harry P. McDonald, New York A. C.; Hugh Pelliser, Herkimer A. C., second; F. Coupe, New York, third. Time—0:55.

Three-Lap Foot Race.—Won by C. Garton, Clermont hockey team; G. Blossom, Brooklyn Naval Reserves, second; F. Coupe, New York City, third. Time—1:08 4-5.

To Prohibit Football at Schools.

SANTA FE., N. M., Jan. 3.—Superintendent of Public Instruction M. C. De Baca, in his annual report, makes a recommendation for the prohibition of the playing of football in the territorial institutions and the public schools. He regards the game as more brutal than prize fighting. He has gathered statistics showing that last year fifteen boys were killed and 200 seriously injured in the United States while playing football.

LAWSON YACHT PROGRESSING.

Letter to Constellation's Owner Asking for Release of Capt. Watson.

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—Those connected with the Boston keel cup defender have no intention of giving up their efforts to secure the services of Capt. Nate Watson of Kingston as assistant skipper. To-day a letter was mailed to Francis Skinner, in Bermuda, asking whether it would be possible for him to release the skipper of the schooner yacht Constellation during the time his services would be required on the yacht. This letter should reach Mr. Skinner within a week, and an answer in ordinary course of events may be expected within three weeks.

There was a conference to-day between Edward Coleman of the firm that will make the blocks and Designer Crowninshield. The latter told the former that nothing in the way of experiments or hurried patterns was wanted on the new boat. This means that the blocks will all be wooden sheiled with roller bearings. No aluminium blocks will be tolerated. The straight old-fashioned block will be used from truck to traveler.

Work on the shed at the Atlantic Works, East Boston, in which the boat will be built, progressed rapidly to-day, being partly sheathed when the workmen stopped at 5 o'clock.

At Lawley's the work of laying down the boat moved rapidly and the boat will be laid down entirely by the middle of next week. None of the lead for the bulb has yet reached East Boston.

Steel Plates for New Yacht.

BRISTOL, R. I., Jan. 3.—The consignment of steel plates for the new yacht, which arrived last Saturday, has been taken into the north shop of the Herreshoff works, where the plates will be made into a mast, the second of its kind used in a Herreshoff cup defender. Boom and gaff will also be of steel, all built to resist the great strain consequent upon carrying a big sail plan.

The plan of construction of the mast, which differs only slightly from the plan to be followed with the other spars, is to bend two thin, but strong, steel plates in semi-circular form and rivet them to angles running inside the plates from head to head. There will be nine of these angles and about eighteen plates, each ten feet long and three-sixteenths of an inch thick, as in the Columbia. Flat disks placed inside the mast at regular intervals contain slots for the passage of the angles and materially strengthen the mast. These disks will also be used in the boom. Probably a ton of weight will be saved aloft by the use of steel spars, which are not only lighter than Oregon pine sticks, but will also be stronger.

Prominent Horses in the Suburban.

Nominations for the important Spring handicaps, the Brooklyn, Suburban, and Brighton, have been coming in much more rapidly than is usual, and from the number received little more than twelve hours after the stakes had closed, remarkably larger entry lists are looked for. Up to 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when the most of the mail from local race tracks had been delivered, forty-four entries had been received for the Suburban Handicap. The best known and most prominent horses among these are: Blues, Bonnibert, Belario, Beau Gallant, Ildrim, Ethelbert, Banastar, Star Bright, McMeekin, Standing, Brigadier, Kilogram, Toddy, Jack Point, Alcedo, Withers, Kinley Mack, High Order, George Arnold, Prince of Melbourne, Approval, and Gulden.

Steeplechase Meeting Postponed.

The meeting of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association set for yesterday afternoon in the rooms of the association, Twenty-second Street and Broadway, was postponed until next Thursday afternoon.

Outlaw Race Promoters in Trouble.

PRINCE FREDERICKTOWN, Md., Jan. 3.—Suits have been entered in the Circuit Court of Calvert County against the Chesapeake Beach Improvement Company by James F. McCloskey, contractor and builder, of Philadelphia, and by the John D. Allen Company, architects, also of Philadelphia, for $38,956.02 and $8,907, respectively. The Chesapeake Beach Railway Company also filed suit for $669.90 against the improvement company for electric service.

The Chesapeake Beach Improvement Company secured control of a tract of land in Calvert County and erected thereon a handsome club house at a cost of $80,000 and other buildings, together with a mile race track, with the intention of running outlaw races, and conducting other sports. Western capitalists are the promoters of the scheme, and it has been given out that there is considerable money behind the venture. Racing was to have begun some days ago, and there was quite a string of horses on hand, but many of them have been removed. The word has gone forth that the date for starting the racing has been fixed at Jan. 10.

Rockefeller Abandons Horse Business.

BELVIDERE, Kan., Jan. 3.—Frank Rockefeller, who owns a 14,000-acre ranch near here, denies that he is about to breed fine horses or to enter the racing field. On the contrary, he plans to abandon the horse business altogether. Mr. Rockefeller is President of the American Hereford Cattle Breeders' Association, and a member of the National Short Horn Breeders' Association, and is interested in the advancement of the breeds of cattle and the raising of high-grade range cattle. He now has on his ranch over 300 head of registered Hereford and short horn cattle, and several thousand high-grade range cattle, which are being added to.

Tennessee Breeders' Stakes.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 3.—The Tennessee Breeders' Association has announced the stakes to be run at its Spring meeting at Cumberland Park, beginning April 22 and extending to and including April 27, 1901. William Gerst Stakes, four and one-half furlongs, $1,000. Belle Meade Stakes, four furlongs, $1,000.

Results on Winter Tracks.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—The victory of Saintly, a 25 to 1 shot, was the surprise at Oakland to-day. He was almost entirely overlooked in the betting and won easily from Parmenion, the favorite. Noted Trap Shooters Matched.

A pigeon shooting match for the Dupont Championship Trophy will be shot at Inter-State Park, Queens, L. I., on Tuesday, between R. A. Welch of this city and James A. R. Elliot of Kansas City. The conditions of the contest call for 100 live birds for each shooter, the competitors meeting on even terms. As it is expected that the race will attract a large attendance of patrons of trap shooting, special arrangements have been made for the handling of a crowd. Other events will also be shot. The championship match is to begin after the arrival of the 12:20 train from New York.

Prize Fights for Carson.

CARSON, Nev., Jan. 3.—Dan Stuart, the prize-fight promoter, has arrived here. He made the statement that he was here in the interests of a prize fight to take place in the latter part of May. He said that Jeffries, in all probability, would be here. When asked if Fitzsimmons would go against the champion he made no denial, but stated that he had plenty of material. He mentioned McGovern as one of his stars. Stuart has secured land for an arena, which gives the impression that he means business.

COTTON.—Cotton speculation was not so active yesterday, nor were the variations in values as extensive as recorded Wednesday. Nevertheless the undertone of sentiment favored a bull market, and at no time was there the slightest evidence of bear pressure. Profit-taking from time to time brought about a set-back in values in the morning, most of which was regained in the early afternoon on covering. Prices at the best level were 3@4 points above the close of Wednesday. The market was finally quiet, net 8@10 points lower. Spot cotton closed dull, with quotations unchanged on the basis of 10½c for middling upland, and 10¾c for middling Gulf sales. Sales, 300. BREADSTUFFS.—Selling began right at the opening of business and was kept up with but few intermissions throughout the entire day. The most notable rally came about midday, when bulls caught most of the shorts in a crowded condition and ran up prices a cent a bushel before offerings could supply the demand. So much wheat was eventually attracted to the market, however, that prices fell off almost faster than they had previously rallied, closing, at Chicago, where top orders were reached at 77c for May, causing ½c drop to 76¾c in a few minutes. During the afternoon the market continued in a weak position. Last official prices of the day were at about the lowest point, and 1@1½c net below the previous night. Legal Notices.

AT A SPECIAL TERM, PART I. OF THE Supreme Court, held at the Court House, in the County of New York, on the 31st day of October, 1900. Present: Hon. John J. Freedman, Justice.

In the matter of the petition of a majority of the Directors of the American Impulse Wheel Company of New York for a voluntary dissolution of said company.—Order to show cause.

On reading and filing the petition of Herbert P. Campbell, James R. Vandyck, and Lester B. Churchill, duly verified on the 25th day of October, 1900, whereby it appears that said petitioners constitute a majority of the Directors of the American Impulse Wheel Company of New York; that said company is a corporation created under the laws of the State of New York, with its principal place of business in New York County; that said company is insolvent, and its property is not sufficient to pay all just debts for which it is liable or to afford reasonable security to those who may deal with it; that said company owns a quantity of personal property, subject to incumbrance, and is indebted to divers persons in large amounts, a great part of which is past due, and that said company is doing business at a loss, the income from the sales of its wheels being greatly insufficient to pay its running expenses, not including interest on company's bonds, and that said company has no money with which to pay any of its obligations, except to the extent of eight and 37-100 dollars ($8.37;) and that if a small proportion of its creditors were to bring actions for the recovery of the sums due them, and the property of the company should be levied upon and sold under execution, said property would be exhausted in paying costs and expenses and the amounts of the judgments, and there would not be enough to satisfy the claims of all the creditors, and that it would be beneficial to the interest of all the creditors and stockholders that said corporation should be dissolved and the property placed in the custody of the court; and the said petition further containing schedules showing assets and liabilities of said corporation and the other matters required by statute to be shown; now, on motion of Frederick H. Sanborn, counsel for said petitioners, and on reading and filing admission of due and timely service of notice of this motion, and a copy of this application and the petition of Herbert P. Campbell, James R. Vandyck, and Lester B. Churchill, verified on the 25th day of October, 1900, and the schedules hereto annexed, upon the Attorney General of the State of New York, it is Ordered that all persons or corporations interested in said American Impulse Wheel Company of New York show cause before Edward M. Burghard, who is hereby appointed a referee for that purpose, at his offices, at 120 Broadway, N. Y., in the City of New York, Borough of Manhattan, on the 16th day of January, 1901, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, why said corporation should not be dissolved;

It is further ordered that a copy of this order be published in The New York Law Journal and in The New York Times, a daily newspaper published in the City of New York, once a week in each of the three weeks immediately preceding the said 16th day of January, 1901.

TO THE FIRST MORTGAGE BONDHOLDERS OF THE

Fort Worth and Denver City Railway Company.

The interest on the first mortgage bonds of the Fort Worth and Denver City Railway Company, which, by agreement of October 12th, 1895, between a Committee of the Bondholders and the Union Pacific, Denver and Gulf Railway Company and its Receiver, was reduced for a time to four per cent., will, after December 1, 1900, accrue and be payable at the original rate of six per cent.

The control of the Company through stock ownership is in the Colorado and Southern Railway Company, and it appears from published reports that the present earnings of the property are not sufficient to pay the full interest on the bonds. Under these circumstances it becomes essential that the bondholders unite in securing all the consideration to which they are entitled, and, if need be, enforcing their rights under the mortgages and otherwise protecting their interests.

The undersigned have been requested by the principal bondholders to act as a bondholders' committee, and in order to confer upon the committee necessary authority, the bondholders are respectfully urged to deposit their bonds at once with the United States Trust Company under a bondholders' agreement lodged with it.

Engraved certificates of deposit will be issued by the Trust Company, and application will be made to the New York Stock Exchange to list the same.

Copies of the agreement can be obtained either from the Trust Company or from the Committee.

$937.50 per Bond on February 1, 1901.

The Bonds are Coupon Bonds in denomination of $1,000 each, with the privilege of registration as to principal. They are dated December 1, 1900, from which date they begin to bear interest at the rate of 4½% p. a., payable half-yearly on June 1st and December 1st. Both the principal and interest of the Bonds are payable in the City of New York in United States Gold Coin of the present standard of weight and fineness and without deduction for any tax or taxes which the Southern Pacific Company may be required to pay or to retain therefrom under any present or future law of the United States or of any State or County or Municipality therein.

Mr. Charles H. Tweed, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Southern Pacific Co., states the following in a letter to us, dated Dec. 27th, 1900:

"The $10,000,000 Southern Pacific Company 4½% Gold Bonds are a direct obligation of the Southern Pacific Company, and are secured by a Mortgage or Deed of Trust dated December 1, 1900, to the Central Trust Company of New York, Trustee. The Mortgage contains a statement of the securities deposited with the Trustee, as well as the terms and conditions under which further issues of Bonds may be made against deposit with the Trustee of additional securities or the mortgaging of additional properties as security thereunder, but the aggregate amount of Bonds at any one time outstanding thereunder is not to exceed $30,000,000.

The Company reserves the right, upon three months' previous notice, to redeem all or any part of the Bonds at par and accrued interest on, or at any interest date after, December 1, 1902, under certain terms and conditions, as stated in the Mortgage, but if a portion only of the outstanding Bonds are at any time to be so redeemed, their distinguishing numbers are to be determined by lot.

The proceeds of the $15,000,000 Bonds will reimburse the Company for a portion of its capital expenditures during the last five years, including the acquisition of the control through stock ownership of upwards of 580 miles of railway, and of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, and will furnish funds for the improvement and betterment of its properties.

WORLD'S SUPPLY OF MONEY.

Large Increase in Proportion of Gold—Whole Stock $11,600,000,000—One-quarter Uncovered Paper.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3.—An increase of more than 100 per cent. in the money of the world within less than a generation will be one of the most interesting exhibits of the annual report of the Director of the Mint, which is now going through the press. Nearly the whole of this increase is in metallic money, and much the largest percentage is in gold.

The collection of complete statistics regarding the money supply of the world was begun at the Mint bureau only within the past decade, but careful research has brought together some interesting figures of the supply of money in the leading commercial countries in 1873. The total stock then reported was about $4,600,000,000, of which more than half was in paper money not fully covered by metallic reserves. The situation at the beginning of 1900 showed a total monetary stock of about $11,600,000,000, of which but little more than one-fourth was in uncovered paper.

The actual amount of paper money in circulation is greater than these figures indicate, but a portion is omitted from the net statistics because it is covered, dollar for dollar, by the great gold and silver reserves of the countries where the money is issued. It is considered a fair statement of the monetary condition of the country to set off these reserves against the paper which they cover and estimate the actual paper margin only at the amount in excess of the reserves.

By this method of computation Director Roberts finds that, while the total money supply of the world has increased about $7,000,000,000, the increase in gold money since 1873 has been about $3,600,000,000, in silver about $2,750,000,000, and in uncovered paper only about $650,000,000. A large proportion of the increase in gold has taken place within the short space of seven years, while the quantity of silver money, which was at its maximum of about $4,250,000,000 at the beginning of 1896, has since been somewhat reduced by the sale of silver by Germany and its retirement in other countries.

The conditions of 1893 showed a total monetary supply of about $10,500,000,000, which has since been increased by about $1,100,000,000. About $940,000,000 of this increase has been in gold money. The great outburst of activity in the mining of gold which followed the suspension of the coinage of silver in India and the United States, involving the rapid development of the mines of South Africa and the Klondike region, with increased output of Australia and California, has resulted, therefore, in supplying nearly the entire monetary needs of the world, without resort to any material increase in the net supply of paper money in circulation.

PRODUCE EXCHANGE DIVIDED.

Posting of a Notice of Assessment for the Gratuity Fund Causes a Difference of Opinion.

Some difference of opinion resulted among members of the New York Produce Exchange yesterday because of the posting of this notice:

The judgment in the case of Parrish vs. the Exchange having been entered, the Trustees of the Gratuity Fund are enjoined from carrying out the amendment of Jan. 22, 1900, and are compelled to administer the system unaffected by such amendment. Under advice of counsel they therefore have levied assessments on the fourteen deaths which have occurred in excess of fifty since Feb. 1, 1900.

In explaining this notice a member of the fund stated that the Trustees were acting directly in line with their official responsibility. An appeal from the judgment in the Parrish case will almost certainly be taken, and it is hoped that the decision now in effect will be reversed. It was the opinion of many members that pending such a result all extra assessments should be held in abeyance. Feeling over the matter is so high that injunctions are openly spoken of. The amendment now in litigation is as follows:

To limit the total annual cost of Gratuity Fund membership to fifty assessments of $3 each, or a total of $150.

Ex-Chief Justice Andrews of the State Court of Appeals has furnished the Trustees of the fund with an opinion involving the points at issue. He says in effect that the assumption upon which the present gratuity system was established has been disproved by experience.

LONDON DISCOUNT RATE RAISED.

Bank of England Advances Its Figure to Five Per Cent.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—The Bank of England's rate of discount was raised from 4 to 5 per cent. to-day.

The weekly statement of the Bank shows the following changes: Total reserve decreased £291,000, circulation increased £417,000, bullion increased £126,137, other securities increased £8,749,000, other deposits increased £8,989,000, public deposits increased £1,947,000, notes reserve decreased £454,000, and Government securities increased £4,495,000.

The proportion of the Bank of England's reserve to liability is 29.56 per cent.; last week it was 37.42 per cent.

Rule Regulating Electric Lights.

The hanging of electric lights in front of stores less than 9 feet from the sidewalk was the subject of an interesting discussion at the meeting of the Board of Public Improvements yesterday. President Grout of Brooklyn thought that all electric lights should be prohibited from hanging over sidewalks on account of the danger to passers-by from breaking of the wires and falling lights. The board approved the ordinances prohibiting the hanging of lights at a distance of less than 9 feet from the sidewalk. The matter now must be passed on by the Municipal Assembly.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Money rates were unsettled to-day, the future being regarded with the greatest uncertainty. The supply was reduced appreciably by repayments to the Bank of England. Discounts were firm, but dealers were cautious owing to the condition of the exchanges.

Business on the Stock Exchange was restricted. The announcement of three failures, and the expectation of more at the next settlement, combined with the rise in the Bank rate and the unsatisfactory state of affairs in Cape Colony, filled the air with gloom, consols dropping in consequence. Home rails were neglected and Foreigners were weak. Americans reacted under parity, on indications of profit taking. The position here is beginning to be distrusted, and fears of approaching trouble are expressed. Grand Trunks relapsed.

The amount of bullion withdrawn from the Bank of England on balance to-day was £40,000. Gold premiums: Buenos Ayres, 159.60; Madrid, 34.17; Lisbon, 38.50; Rome, 5.42½. Bar gold is quoted at 77s 11⅞d.

MORE FAILURES IN LONDON.

LONDON, Jan. 3.—Additional failures were announced on the Stock Exchange to-day in connection with the suspension of the London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited. They were those of A. S. May, A. H. Clark, and G. Blundell, Jr.

A number of brokers held a meeting to-day and discussed the recent failures and the collapse of the London and Globe Finance Corporation, Limited. They appointed a committee to investigate some of the transactions of the London and Globe and to inquire into its present position. The committee will report next Tuesday.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Jan. 3.—Prices on the Bourse to-day opened firm, but the announcement of the increase in the London bank rate from 4 to 5 per cent. caused a depression and large realizations of industrials, notably tramways. Tractions declined sharply and closed generally dull. Portuguese were offered freely, and Kafirs were weak.

Three per cent. rentes, 101f 85c for the account. Exchange on London, 25f 9c for checks.

Spanish 4s closed at 70.90.

The weekly statement of the Bank of France shows the following changes: Notes in circulation increased 275,925,000f, Treasury accounts current decreased 25,050,000f, gold in hand decreased 6,200,000f, bills discounted decreased 251,225,000f, and silver in hand decreased 9,625,000f.

BERLIN, Jan. 3.—Private discount was harder to-day on the bank return and the rise in the Bank of England rate from 4 to 5 per cent. Consequently, prices on the Boerse were easier. Internationals were lower. Americans declined, in sympathy with New York. Banks were fairly maintained, and mines were lower, on unsatisfactory manufacturing reports.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 44½ pfennigs for checks. Discount rates: Short bills, 4 per cent.; three months' bills, 3⅞ per cent.

The weekly statement of the Imperial Bank of Germany shows the following changes: Cash in hand decreased 5,680,000 marks, Treasury notes decreased 2,560,000 marks, other securities increased 170,400,000 marks, and notes in circulation increased 208,700,000 marks.

The Reichsbank statement shows phenomenal pressure, but the strain does not excite apprehension, being regarded as temporary, owing to the very low rate of private discounts. Call money is still abundant at 4 per cent. A further advance in the Reichsbank rate of discount is not expected.

OUTSIDE SECURITIES.

Trading in the market for outside securities yesterday presented little of interest until tile last hour, when some sharp declines occurred, as a result of the break in the market on the Stock Exchange. A number of market orders were given which, theugh the amounts of stock involved were small, sufficed to bring about considerable declines. During the day only a few stocks showed any activity, and, though the list generally showed prices somewhat lower than those recorded at the close of the market on Wednesday, it was only in the few stocks affected by the decline at the close that losses were heavy.

***

DISTILLING OF AMERICA preferred sold in small amounts around 30 until the end of the day, when it broke sharply to 29. It closed there, with a net loss of 1½ points. In the common stock, transactions were also light, but it suffered almost as much as the preferred. It sold down to 5⅜, and showed a net loss of 1¼ points. As in the case of most of the other declines which occurred, there was no special explanation for the loss in these stocks beyond the selling induced by the weakness of the Stock Exchange market.

***

AMERICAN BRIDGE, though much less active than on the previous day, declined more sharply than it had advanced on Wednesday. The common closed at 45 bid, a net loss of 1 point, and the preferred at 94¾, against 95½ the previous day.

***

ELECTRIC BOAT was fairly active between 29 and 30, while the preferred sold fractionally above 50. Both issues, however, closed lower for the day, the common at 29 bid and the preferred at 49 bid.

***

RUBBER GOODS, common, sold down to 29¾, and the preferred in half lots sold as low as 79. The common showed a net loss of 1¼ points, and the preferred 1 point. These declines seemed to be partly in sympathy with the drop in the United States Rubber stocks due to the reduction of the dividend on the preferred stock.

***

BRITISH COLUMBIA COPPER, though not very active, showed strength, and closed unchanged for the day at 22¼ bid. The other copper stocks were very dull.

***

EMPIRE STEEL.—A bid of 36 was made yesterday for 1,000 shares of Empire Steel, preferred. Recently the stock showed considerable weakness on account of the lessening of the dividend. The common stock was quoted at 6 bid.

***

TUBULAR DESPATCH has been inquired for for some time past on the curb. Yesterday 20 was bid for the stock, and it was offered at 32½.

***

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 3.—The Philadelphia market succumbed to the weakness in New York, and the day was one of heavy trading and extensive liquidation, over a million shares coming over the tape up to 2 o'clock. The attitude was one of inconsistency, for the market here had not risen with Wall Street, and it was felt that it ought not to respond to the reaction. Nevertheless, the whole list receded, United Gas Improvement showing the heaviest decline. All the arbitrage stocks were weak. Reading and Pennsylvania lost a point each, and Lehigh Valley fell back from 29⅞ to 29. In the strictly local stocks the weakness was not very acute, half a point generally measuring the scope of the declines. An exception was Consolidated Traction of Pittsburg preferred, which rose one-half of 1 per cent.

Exceptional activity was shown in the Asphalt issues, due to the announcement that the court had handed down a decision at Newark, N. J., to-day, denying the injunction asked for by Henry J. Spinks to restrain the American Asphalt Company from transferring stock to the National Asphalt Company, in accordance with the recent plan merging the companies.

CUFIC'S RESCUERS IN PORT.

Crew of Kansas City Tell How the Disabled Ship Was Saved.

The Bristol City Line steamship Kansas City, which rescued the White Star Line steamship Cufic, in latitude 51.34 and longitude 21.24 on Dec. 9, after her propeller had been carried away in a terrific gale, arrived in port yesterday morning. When picked up by the Kansas City the Cufic had signaled for assistance. For three days the Bristol City vessel had to hang beside the Cufic, unable to render any help owing to the fury of the storm. At the end of this time the Kansas City managed to get hawsers to the Cufic and started with her in tow for Queenstown. The hawsers soon parted, however, under the terrific strain to which they were subjected in weathering the gale, and it was not until the following day that a new connection was effected and the tow resumed.

Again, when off Kinsale the hawsers parted, but the delay this time was not so long, and the Cufic was safely towed into Queenstown the next day. This was on the 16th, and after lying in the harbor for three days the disabled steamer was once more placed in tow and started for Liverpool. She met with rough weather again on this tow, and came near being lost on the Skerries, a group of rocks off the coast of Anglesea, in weathering the gale that at the time was raging in the Irish Sea.

Chief Officer Crosby of the Cufic was lost while trying to reach a line from the Kansas City, which was attached to a buoy.

When the Kansas City arrived yesterday Capt. Lewis refused to talk of his experiences in the rescue of the Cufic. Members of the crew, however, in speaking of the fury of the gale, declared it to have been the fiercest they had ever encountered.

NEW CENTURY SNAKE STORY.

Third Officer of the Anapa Saw a Serpent 80 Feet Long, He Says.

According to the private log of the third officer of the British steamship Anapa, that vessel on the 13th of November last passed in dangerous proximity to a snake which, according to his reported dimensions, came very near complying with the fabled dimensions of the mythical sea serpent. A sight of which monster has been often reported, but whose capture has as yet not been made a matter of record. As the story told by the Anapa's officer goes, the monster sighted in November was at least eighty feet in length, of a dirty brown color all over, with the exception of his neck, which was of a lighter hue. It was in the Straits of Malacca that the reptile was seen. A number of British seamen discovered him and called the officer's attention to the unusual sight.

The snake was about a mile and a half away abeam, and was partly emerged, his head and neck for a length of about twenty feet being visible, then submerged for about twenty feet more, when the huge body was once more exposed for about forty feet, making, according to the narrator, "one of the uncommonest sights I have ever seen in the East."

CHEAT IN SLOT MACHINES.

Secret Pockets Swindled Even Commission Agents of Owners.

Those patient and trusting persons who have tried to "beat" the nickel-in-the-slot gambling machines will not be surprised to hear that in eight of these devices destroyed in the office of the Public Prosecutor of Hudson County, New Jersey, yesterday, were found secret pockets, in which were deposited every fourth nickel which came into the machine, thus cheating even the man in whose place the machines were placed. The machines were seized last Wednesday in West Hoboken by the Prosecutor's detectives.

When the machines were destroyed the detectives were surprised to find $35 in nickels in the débris, when it was thought that all the money had been removed. Investigation revealed the secret pockets. Notwithstanding this cheat, some of the saloon keepers have said that they would rather have the shares they have been getting than the profits of their bars. The secret compartment was emptied when the machine was temporarily removed on the pretext that it was out of order.

NURSE ACCUSES LAWYER.

Miss Oleson Charges J. N. McIntyre with Theft of Her Diamonds.

Jacob N. McIntyre, sixty-five years old, of 126 East Twelfth Street, a patent lawyer, with offices in the Temple Court Building, was a prisoner in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday, charged with the larceny of a pair of diamond earrings valued at $300. The complainant was Miss Signey C. Olesen, who for six years has been employed as a nurse by the defendant, who is a sufferer from paralysis.

Miss Olesen, in her affidavit, says that through the entire six years of her service, although she was to receive $20 a month, she received only about $50 in all from Mr. McIntyre, who gave her the diamond earrings in lieu of cash.

In 1899, she alleges, he obtained possession of the jewelry, telling her he wished to place it in safe keeping for her. A few months later he told her the earrings were in a vault in a jeweler's, and last December he gave her a pawn ticket, in her name, showing where the earrings had been pawned for $160. McIntyre, who was arrested Wednesday, was paroled. There was no examination in the case.

UNION OPPOSED TO STRIKERS.

East Side Cloakmakers Advise Against Labor's Method.

For the first time in the history of trades unions on the east side, a strong organization declared itself against strikes yesterday. The organization is the United Brotherhood of Cloakmakers, which has had more strikes since it was formed than any other union in the city. The action binding the organization not to strike was taken yesterday morning by the Executive Board adopting unanimously the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, Experience has taught us that a labor organization confining its activity to strikes only has no future, and

Whereas, We are convinced that strikes without a strong organization are eventually detrimental and disastrous to the welfare of the workers; and,

Whereas, In our efforts to improve the general conditions of the cloakmakers we have by our strikes benefited the non-union men more than the members of our union, which resulted in the putting of a premium on non-union labor and served to defeat the very purposes for which organized labor struggles; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the United Brotherhood of Cloakmakers will not order nor approve of any strike during the continuance and until after the expiration of the coming Spring season; and be it further

Resolved, That it is the sense of this body that no strike shall be countenanced, approved, ordered, or sanctioned before our union is so thoroughly and systematically organized as to insure its permanent assistance for the good of our craft.

FATAL WHIRL IN A FLY WHEEL.

Boy Killed in Machinery Making a Hundred Revolutions a Minute.

After being whirled around on a fly wheel at the rate of one hundred revolutions a minute for two minutes, Richard Earle, sixteen years old, employed in the Gledhill Wallpaper, factory, at 541 West Thirty-fourth Street, yesterday, was extricated after the machinery had been stopped by his horrified fellow workmen. He had sustained two broken ribs, a broken arm, a broken leg, and a broken ankle; yet, in spite of these and internal injuries, he lived thirty-five minutes.

Just how the boy's clothing became entangled in the shafting is not known. The shaft was near a big pile of paper. There were ten men working in the room where the accident occurred, but none of them knew what the boy wanted on top of the pile of paper. In moving about, Earle was caught in the shafting. His body was whirled about with the speed of lightning. It was impossible to make out his form, and it was a terrible shriek that startled the other men in the room, and made them hurry over to see what had happened. One man saw quickly that it was a case of life and death, and shouted to the engineer to stop the machinery. The shafting and fly wheel were stopped within two minutes. The body, when released, fell to the floor. Earle was terribly cut and bruised, but still breathed. He was hurried off to the hospital, but expired after a half hour.

FINE DWELLINGS FIND BUYERS

Dealings by Brokers and at Auction—Morris K. Jesup Takes Title to Saxony Apartment House.

Contracts have been signed for the sale of the two eight-story buildings 141 to 145 Wooster Street and 149 to 153 Wooster Street, each 75 by 100. These properties are on the west side of the street, the southerly one being 170 feet north of Prince Street, and are separated by a twenty-five-foot lot covered by a four-story structure. Title to both parcels will be taken by a Mr. O'Shaughnessy, who, it is said, acts only as the representative of the real purchaser. Exact figures in the deal could not be learned yesterday, but the total consideration for the two properties will be not far from $500,000. The building 141 to 145 Wooster Street, erected by Leopold Treu, was sold under foreclosure in July, 1899, and bought by the present sellers, Hamerslhag & Oppenheimer, for $20,000 over mortgages of $175,000. The sellers of the northerly building, 149 to 153 Wooster Street, is the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, which corporation took the property under foreclosure only a few weeks ago for $216,000. This building was put up by Daily & Carlson.

John Peters has sold for Jonas M. and Frederick A. Libbey, to a private investor, 408, 410, 412, 414, 416, 418, 420, and 422 East One Hundred and Twenty-third Street, eight four-story double flats, on plot 201.6 by 100.11; price, $100,000.

It is reported that details have been arranged for the transfer of the two dwellings, 602 and 603 Fifth Avenue, to Anson R. Flower. The properties are now owned by the estate of Mrs. Emma K. Schley, who was a sister of the late Roswell P. Flower.

McVickar & Co. have sold for Joseph Schaeffler, to John L. Martin, the four-story brownstone front dwelling, 152 East Thirty-fourth Street, 16.11 by 98.9.

E. P. Phillips has sold for Donald Mitchell the five-story tenement, 524 West One Hundred and Twenty-fifth Street; also for the same seller the plot at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street, 100 by 100. The purchaser of both properties is W. H. Gluckman, who gives in exchange the five-story flats 246 and 248 West One Hundred and Twelfth Street, on a plot 66.8 by 100.11.

Dr. Simon Marx, the present tenant, has bought the four-story dwelling 947 Madison Avenue, 16.8 by 100.

REAL ESTATE TRANSFERS.

In the following list "mtg" stands for mortgage and "R S" for revenue stamps. The war revenue law provides that stamps shall be placed on all conveyances at the rate of 50 cents for each $500 of consideration. This "consideration" has been held to mean only the equity above the mortgage, except in the rare cases where the purchaser assumes payment of the mortgage. The amount of the mortgage plus 1,000 times the value of the revenue stamps on the conveyances should therefore show the true consideration.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS

NEW YORK CENTRAL PLANS.

Company Now Ready to Receive Bids for Many Contracts.

The New York Central has called for bids for contracts for many of the costly improvements which it is to carry out at various points along its line.

The first of the changes to be made at the Weehawken Station, whereby the terminals there are to be converted into the most modern freight terminals in this port, will be the building of bulkheads and piers. They will be of wood, and the bulkheads will extend for one mile along the waterfront. The largest pier will be 800 feet long by 200 feet wide, and there will be another 400 feet long and 60 feet wide. The new ferry pier will be at the north end of the new terminals.

The grain elevator, work on which will begin later, will be partly of steel, with a working capacity of 2,500,000 bushels, while it will be possible to store 500,000 bushels more if necessary.

Bids have also been called for a sixty-stall engine house, which is to be erected at West Baden. Bids have also been asked for a coal-stocking plant at the same place, which will have a capacity of 40,000 tons, and for new turntables, ashpits, and a fifty-pocket coal trestle, to be erected at the same place.

At Buffalo, the work of eliminating nine important grade crossings will shortly be undertaken. The streets are to be depressed and the tracks slightly elevated, at a cost of over $1,000,000. When this work is finished, the main line of the New York Central through the City of Buffalo will cross all streets either above or below the street level, which will mean a great saving in time. The Belt Line grade crossings in Buffalo are to be eliminated later on.

IMPORT FREIGHT RATES.

Railroad Representatives Are Trying to Make Them Uniform.

The first meeting of railroad representatives to be held in this city in the new year was called to order yesterday morning by Chairman Goddard of the Trunk Line Association at the rooms of that organization. Almost all the roads with terminal facilities at the various Atlantic seaports, from Newport News to St. John's, were represented by their traffic managers or general freight agents. The meeting was called in order to discuss ways and means for improving the condition of import freight rates. The present method by which each railroad employs an import agent, who makes contracts with the various steamship lines for the carrying of incoming freight, for which he gets a commission, has for many years been one of the disturbing elements in the west-bound rate situation. The agents have often secured business by shading the rates or giving up some of their commissions, and the result has been a considerable loss of revenue to the roads.

At the meeting yesterday a plan was suggested which contemplates a radical change in the manner of taking care of this freight. The plan, if adopted, would mean the abolishment of every import agency of every railroad in the territory above mentioned, and the establishment in their places of one joint Import Commissioner. This Commissioner would be empowered to make all contracts with the steamship lines for the railroads. Such a commission would not be in the nature of a pool, as it would not contemplate giving the joint agent the power of apportioning the business among the various roads. He would simply act as a middleman between the steamship and railroad companies, executing contracts for transportation of freight at the regular tariff schedule.

After some discussion it was finally decided to let the matter go over for two weeks, in order to give all those present at the meeting additional time to investigate present conditions, as it was reported at the meeting that there were quite a number of contracts outstanding which carried over into this year.

THE PACIFIC MAIL'S FIGHT.

To Send Freight East Via Guaymas—Panama Road Gets Subsidy.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 3.—After Jan. 24 the Pacific Mail is to handle all of its business between Central American and Mexican Pacific ports and New York and Europe by the way of San Francisco and the Southern Pacific's New Orleans route. When extensive wharf facilities are completed at Guaymas, part of the business will be sent via that port and the Sunset Route. This is stated to be due to trouble between the Pacific Mail and the Panama Railroad.

To aid it in its fight for Central American and Mexican business, the Panama Railroad has enlisted the services of the Pacific Steam and Chilean Navigation Companies. They have a joint service between Valparaiso and Panama and Ocos, the latter being the most northern port of Guatemala. They are to extend their joint services to this port, each company sending a vessel alternately every two weeks. In consideration of calling at Mexican ports, the Mexican Government has agreed to give the two lines jointly a subsidy of $20,000 a year. They also receive subsidies from several Central American States.

Pacific Mail officials say the mail steamers will continue to run from Panama, making all the old ports of call, and several new ones in addition.

RAILROAD WILL ECONOMIZE.

New York, New Haven and Hartford to Make Extensive Changes.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Jan. 3.—It was learned to-day from an authoritative source that important changes are soon to be made in the operating divisions of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company which will involve a reduction in the number of divisions from eighteen to eleven and affect substantially the whole system of the company. The purpose of the changes is to provide centralization, economy, and better control of freight distribution.

One of the most important changes will be that reducing the number of divisions between New York and Boston from five to three. According to the new plan the system between New York and Boston will be divided as follows: New York Division, to embrace the line between New York and New Haven; Shore Line Division, embracing the line between New Haven and Providence, centring at New London and including the present Norwich and Worcester Divisions; Boston Division, embracing the line between Providence and Boston. There will be some changes in Superintendencies.

Long Island Railroad Changes.

There will be an important change in the management of the freight traffic of the Long Island Railroad on Jan. 15. The plan of separating the freight and passenger departments has been adopted. Traffic Manager H. M. Smith, who is now in charge of both departments, will hereafter look after the passenger business exclusively and the freight department will be placed under the charge of William J. Rose, now Division Freight Agent of the Pennsylvania's United Railroads of New Jersey.

Sues for $125,000 in Commissions.
